I was too oblivious and maybe so was he, but we had someone else looking out for us. It all started when I felt called to go on a spring break mission trip with the campus ministry that I was involved with, SALT. They were going to Philly and I had the heart to go, but no funds to pay for the trip. As I walked into the office and talked with the campus minister, telling him of my dilemma, my best friend had already told him the opposite. She had to work the week that was meant for the trip but wanted to sponsor someone to go. How do I know? We got along well and hit it off as friends very easily. But once I met him, Hayden was someone that I always looked forward to seeing and spending time with. Fast forward 6 or 7 months and I came to a point in my dating life that I had never reached before. I came to the part where you submit to God. I told God that I was done falling for the wrong guy and that He would only let me fall for the man I was going to marry. I was tired of the hurt and thought I was demanding of Him. But really I was dying to my own wishes and control and letting Him do His thing finally. Then there was Hayden. It was pretty much out of the blue how I fell for him. No one reason was why I fell so hard for this very upbeat and sweet man. He showed me care and concern and respect that I had only ever dreamed about. I had asked God in the same prayer of acceptance of His will that I wanted the right man to give me up, if he could not love me to let me go. That was one prayer I never felt could be answered. But it was the words that Hayden said to me that really made me feel peace in the situation. He wanted to break up to spare my heart in case God was not calling us to be together. This was love in a pure form. I know now that there would be no way that Hayden and I would be getting married without God. He had to prove to me what I saw as love through this imperfectly perfect man. Hayden selflessly showed me love before he really knew me and I know now that there is deeper kindness, compassion and love that goes deeper than our relationship together. I know that God chose us for each other and am so glad He did. I remember distinctly a moment in my kitchen with my best friend a week after Hayden had broken up with me. Instead of being overwhelmed with sadness, I felt a peace. Then it hit me. Little did I know that this girl was going to change my life dramatically. Though most of our connections there involved me ruining the Lion King and jamming to Florida Georgia Line. But from there on out she made it a point to seek me out in a crowd and never let me go unnoticed. Then I found out that she was a nerd. Finally, a nerd who could match my nerdiness and understand my coffee addiction. Now if anybody ever wondered if I was smooth with the ladies, just know that she asked me out. And to really win her over I played the smoothest move in the book: I "broke up" with her. What I thought would make her hate me for sure, actually made her love me more. Little did I know that God had been working in both of our lives and setting up what would be our happily ever after. I still spent every day at her house and our friendship never slowed. In fact it grew faster and faster everyday and by the end of that summer I knew that we were meant to give it a real shot. She made me grow in ways I never thought I would and has made me a better man. But most importantly she taught me to make decisions and trust them. Because of that I became a pilot and am now marrying the most amazing woman in the world. It was only fitting that I propose to her with a flight at sunset. This woman took my past and made it disappear. She took my present and made it infinitely better. She took my future and made it endless and full of possibilities. Those investments include scholarships, endowment, physical plant improvements and operations. Alumni and friends of this institution know the uniqueness and specialness of this campus nestled in the mountains of the West Virginia Highlands. Thanks to the successful conclusion of Secure the Future, students of many tomorrows will experience the same life-changing opportunity. As you will see in these pages, we had a grand party on June 30 to celebrate this milestone. For all of us gathered on these sacred grounds that day, we had , reasons to be thankful. The group will receive specially designed T-shirts and participate in a day of interactive learning experiences designed to encourage thought and reflection about their purpose in life. Wood Life Trustees Karen H. Once leaky roofs at Moyer Hall and above the kitchen area in Benedum Hall have been replaced, while a water runoff issue at Presidential Center has been corrected. This policy applies to all terms and conditions of employment, admission to and enrollment with the College, including, but not limited to, recruitment, selection, hiring, placement, transfer, promotion, training, compensation, benefits, discipline, termination, educational policies, admission policies, financial aid, scholarship and loan programs, housing, athletic and other College-administered programs and activities. In addition, more than 20 heating and cooling units were replaced in Moyer Hall and Presidential Center. While these improvements are the most essential to campus structures, students are apt to list Internet as their top priority. Their calls to action were answered by the Information Services Office with significant improvement to wireless access in all dorms and Madden Student Center. The Icehouse Attempts to keep rain water out of a cylindrical structure built into a hillside had not been successful. That is until this summer when students and alumni put forth special fundraising efforts. An upgraded drainage system, masonry corrections and water proofing should keep the water at bay. Incidentally, a new patio floor was added. Crews filled every hole and rolled a fresh coat of asphalt on the road and along the edge of the parking lot. Paving has also been completed in the parking area at Moyer Hall. Plans are in the works to widen the walkway across from Albert Hall, making it essentially an entrance ramp to the parking lot. A sidewalk will lead to the main campus drive. Access between the upper and lower levels of Madden Student Center will be increased with a new set of stairs built into the embankment. Outdoor staircases throughout campus also will be replaced or repaired. Athletics Just in time for the kickoff of soccer season, fans can cheer on the Senators from elevated bleachers with a seating capacity of plus. Later, a red roof will top Martin Field House. Inside, on the upper level, student-athletes will have their own fitness center. A new entryway will be constructed on the upper right side of the building. Robbins-Madden Fitness Center will remain open for the general campus population and visitors. Red White and Boom: Members of the campus community, along with thousands of area residents, lined the hillside to listen to the Davisson Brothers Band and view the traditional Fourth of July display. Wood in announcing that the Secure the Future campaign goal had been met and surpassed. The figure topped the one Wood presented at a Garden Party luncheon for donors and their guests as the College continued to receive donations on the day of the campaign celebration. Garden Party guests raise a glass to toast the success of the Secure the Future campaign. When my grandfather and great uncle founded the college in , they were looking toward the future. I am now fully engulfed into living in California. Tuff are playing shows, girls are abundant and run-ins with rock stars are common. One night I am hanging with a girl named Valerie. Tall, blond, big boobs but older. Damn how time flies. Some rocker dude answers and lets us in. I am introduced to Tracii Guns. He was super cool to me. We sat on the bed and chatted a bit about bands, shows and who knows what else. I knew little about L. At some point I asked to use the bathroom. While doing so I notice a glue gun on the vanity next to the sink. Remember I talked about him being a client at her salon when I went there to get my extensions last summer. I should have bought a glue gun myself at some point, cuz those re-tightening appointments cost a couple hundred bills. Anywhoâ€¦ That was 30 years ago and for the most part Tracii has always been very nice to me. Except when he had the chick singer. No not Jizzy, Dilana. I kid, I kid. Guns, and always has been. Either way, I love that band. We roll up into a mostly black neighborhood. Some locals instruct us where to park and where not to park. Our crew roll in our road cases and equipment. A local band is sound checking, and they are the headliners. I can see it now and hear it as well. Michael loves them as well, we all do. Davy, Ash, Jamie, the entire band and crew were all stand-up guys. Aside from a killer band, we met other cool people as well on our 2nd trip to the Bay Area. I remember Dean being a bit loud, maybe even pushy. He wrote me back and we had a nice exchange. We also met Cindy and Cathi. Cindy is still a friend today and is one of the most awesome people I know. Even if she does like the 49ers. We did do a few pay-to-play deals, but always moved our tickets and usually made a little bit of profit as well. We were fast becoming one of the hottest bands on the West Coast. Michael had a strategy to play Hollywood once a month, or every 6 weeks. Tuff even had a tour manager along the way. However most of the crew worked for free. At least the younger guys did. This is crazy thinking back. But in the summer of , I was 22 and the oldest guy in our traveling circle of friends. Todd and Jorge were 21, Michael was 20 and most of our crew were still in their teens. We wanted the band to look bigger, and be bigger than anyone else locally. But as we got bigger, so did the overhead. Along with the stage show. Ramps, rented lights, fog machines and even monitors. Let me also make note, the band never took a penny. The money we earned paid the rehearsal bill, bus rental, flyer cost, advertisements, merchandise and other band related bills. Everything we made, went right back into the band. As for living, eating, stage clothes or hair extensions â€” that is what we had girlfriends and groupies for. After several shows out of town, out in the Valley or down on Santa Monica Boulevard we finally return to the Sunset Strip. Well returned to actually play a show that is. Hollywood in general was nuts. And yes, there was always something cool happening. Every weekend was madness. And when we were not playing out of town , we were usually promoting the next Los Angeles area show. Bill Gazzarri was an interesting guy. The overall vibe was kind of like a circus. One bit of folklore from the heyday was that Bill would turn the heat on, to make people hotter. Which in turn made them buy more drinks. I personally cannot confirm this, and never saw anything of the sort but there were stories that circulated more than a few times. It was not uncommon to see the old man with or more girls. All were young and beautiful as well. Bill Gazzarri was like the Hugh Hefner of Rock. We would sit around at our apartment, or on break at rehearsal and throw these around. I found this photo above from that night. I can tell by my stage clothes and the general time frame. Enter the clothing designer. Tuff used many of them, and when I say used, I mean that term in more than one way. Ana Cartwright was one of the first to design our clothes. She had previously designed for bands like Poison, Cinderella and Bon Jovi. Once we heard that, well of course we would enlist her to make our stuff. Tuff with clothing designer Ana Cartwright. Photo by William Hames Fun Fact: Ana also fed us more than a few times. And I fed her too. I recall me feeding her my dick one night while she worked on my stage pants. One of those shoots was a back-to-back session where Tuff and Vinnie Vincent Invasion both shot on the same day. I vaguely recall seeing the guys coming or going as we arrived. There was another time we met up with Dana Strum and Mark Slaughter around this same timeframe. I put my hand on the mixing console and was all giddy. It was now late at night and we were all outside after the session had ended. One of the guys had a Harley Davidson motorcycle. At some point I ended up becoming better friends with Charlie. Her machine picked up and he informed her he was on his way from Las Vegas. My memory tells me that us making-out was the peak of our fun time, so sorry to report but nothing crazy happened. Jani was buying shots and insisted I drink one. So he stood there holding the shot in front of my face.
