

1: Newsflesh Series by Mira Grant

â€” A Feed by Mira Grant Book Review I'm behind from my yearlong challenge, the quantity challenge which sponsored by Goodreads, for the past two months. It's like I'm working twenty-four seven in the outside world without knowing that I'm lying on my bed without doing something, idle for hours and it's becoming my favourite habit.

It promises a zombie novel despite the fact literally hundreds of pages go by without seeing one. Mira Grant assumes otherwise. Two things that genuinely confused me; -- The pop This is not a zombie book, or at least not a zombie book in the way it is marketed. Two things that genuinely confused me; -- The pop culture references to the current world. Considering the fact this book is set 20 years in the future, in a completely different world and society and Irwins are named after Steve Irwin, who, by the time all this takes place, is long dead. Not sure if that counts subplot to come out and bite me. Georgia, for me, was a huge irritant. She was possibly an author insert and definitely a Mary Sue. She claims to deliver nothing but the truth, despite her blog posts being nothing but her opinion. This takes nothing away from her appearance other than to make her look moody and cool. If my memory serves me right, someone even likens her to a rock star. On the occasions that she wears contact lenses, she wears bright blue colored ones so she can make people feel uncomfortable. Hugs last about 3 seconds and she made it sound like touching this woman was akin to licking dog shit. What a rude dick. She cannot create good, believable characters. This is my biggest pet peeve. None of them least of all Georgia and Shaun can have a conversation without cracking juvenile one liners and generally showing how bad ass they are. It was ok the first time, but 40th? The writing is repetitive to a point bordering on infuriating. I really, genuinely do not like this book. The more I think about it the more it pisses me off. Wtf did she get that from? Pps, stereotyping and judging is not good, Mira. I shit you not. Mira needs a holiday somewhere-outside-of-America. Review for second book:

2: Feed : Mira Grant :

Feed is the first book in the Newsflesh series of science fiction/horror novels written by Seanan McGuire under the pen name Mira Grant and published by Orbit Books.

Plot[ edit ] Feed is set several decades after the zombie apocalypse , referred to as the Rising. Two man-made viruses a cure for cancer and a cure for the common cold combined to form Kellis-Amberlee, a virus that quickly infects all mammalian life. There are three mentioned ways amplification takes place: Those infected that have not undergone amplification remain lucid until the virus has time to spread through the body. Lucidity is followed by lack of sensitivity to pain, memory loss and finally conversion. Most humans reside in tightly controlled safe zones, with rigorous blood testing and decontamination protocols used to prevent the spread of the live K-A virus. After the inaction of traditional media during the Rising, blogs and other new media have taken over as the primary source of information and entertainment; bloggers are recognised as professional journalists, with individuals specialising and identifying as "Newsies" objective, fact-based reporters , "Stewarts" "who report opinion informed by fact" , [1] "Irwins" named after Steve Irwin , who seek to educate and entertain by going out and "poking things with sticks" , "Aunties" who share personal stories, recipes, and other content "to keep people happy and relaxed" , or "Fictionals" fictional content and poetry creators. Georgia, her brother Shaun an Irwin , and their friend Georgette "Buffy" Meissonier a Fictional and a technology guru , are selected to cover the presidential campaign of Senator Peter Ryman, a moderate Republican. The campaign is mostly uneventful until it reaches Eakly, Oklahoma , where zombies attack the campaign convoy, killing several before security assisted by Georgia and Shaun can contain them; they later discover it was an orchestrated attack. The next stage of the campaign is the Republican National Convention , where Ryman faces off against religious, right-wing Governor David Tate and sex-over-substance Congresswoman Kristen Wagman. Georgia and company investigate and find that the outbreak started from a horse injected with the live virus. Ryman and the campaign relocate to Texas, where Ryman joins his vice-presidential candidate: The bloggers must drive their vehicles and equipment overland. Chuck dies, zombifies, and bites Buffy. The team finds evidence linking Tate to the attacks, along with hints of a broader conspiracy involving the CDC and other parties, but when Georgia confronts Ryman during an event in Sacramento, California , he is skeptical and sends them away to prepare to convince him with facts, otherwise he will fire them from the campaign. As the bloggers leave, they are attacked, and Georgia is shot with a tranquiliser dart containing the live virus. She then begins amplifying, forcing Shaun to execute her. Then the governor injects himself instead, and Shaun shoots him to prevent zombification. Georgia and Rick retreat inside the van to post their findings on Tate and the conspiracy, while Shaun dies defending them from the outbreak. Georgia confronts and kills Tate, then commits suicide a week later, unable to live in a world without Shaun. He notes that the conspiracy may not have ended with Tate, but "someone else was going to have to save the world next time.

THE NEWSFLESH TRILOGY Q: Can you give a simple description of the series premise? A: The zombie apocalypse happened more than twenty years ago. Contrary to popular belief, we didn't all die out, largely because we'd had years of horror movies to tell us how to behave when the dead start walking.
