The www.enganchecubano.com has an article on the sentencing of a truck driver responsible for killing a Hudson/Bloomington firefighter. A Washington state man will serve four years in prison for causing the death of firefighter Chris Brown, who died when he was struck by a semitrailer truck last year on Interstate

Brown was born in Oak Park, Illinois on November 9th, His father, John, was an FBI agent and his mother, Ruth, was a talented pianist who gave piano lessons while raising her family. Soon Paddy had a brother, Michael and a sister, Carolyn. Paddy spent much of his young life here and would devote that time at a local firehouse. He had a scanner in his bedroom and would respond to local fire calls on his bicycle. He watched the firefighters intently and absorbed the ways of the FDNY. Persuading his Dad to sign a document allowing him a combat assignment, he went off to Vietnam. He became a highly respected and decorated Marine Sergeant. After his tour in Vietnam, Paddy returned to New York, proud of his service to his country, but also haunted by his memories of combat. He spent a number of years on the Fire Patrol as he settled in Manhattan. Now began the career of this legendary NYC Firefighter. His first assignment was Ladder There he found himself in many tenement fires. Here Paddy is seen rescuing a baby from a tenement fire. Soon Paddy was promoted to Lieutenant and found himself at Ladder While covering in Rescue One Lieutenant Brown was involved in a daytime rope rescue that was captured on television cameras. Pat poses with his Dad left and brother Mike right on Medal Day. Pat also received a letter of recognition from President George Bush. Soon he was promoted to Captain and he served many years at Engine His final assignment was at the prestigious Ladder 3 on East 13th in the East Village. His passions extended beyond the walls of the firehouse. He was a Golden Gloves boxer. He also loved the martial arts, and soon earned a Black Belt. He would volunteer his time to teach the blind in the art of Karate. He was an avid runner and participated in six marathons. He also attended John Jay College and earned a degree in Psychology. He blended his extensive knowledge of firefighting with creativity, innovation, bravery and quick thinking to perform dangerous rescues and to guide his company to safe havens. His men looked up to him and would look forward to working with him. It always seemed that he was in the right place at the right time, whether he was on or off duty. As was said more than once, the only person that would object to this characterization would be Paddy himself. He was not comfortable about talking about his heroic accomplishments. He preferred to be an outspoken advocate for improving conditions for his men. Here he demonstrates the importance of the thermal imaging camera. It is used to pinpoint hot spots in the wall and locate the fire This trait sometimes got him in "a bit of hot water" with his superiors. But Paddy was not beyond ruffling feathers to get what he knew his men needed and deserved. He developed a reputation of bravery, talent and integrity which was passed onto his fellow firefighters. In the last ten years of his life, Paddy Brown found spirituality and comfort in the practice of Yoga. Experiences in Vietnam and heartbreaking losses of some of his closest friends in the FD left him with feelings of deep pain and loss. He once dedicated 40 days to taking care of his good friend, John Drennan, Captain of Ladder 5. Pat is pictured here with Vina Drennan to his left and Fr. Mychal Judge to his right. His firehouse, "3 Truck", is located in very close proximity to the Twin Towers, so his company were one of the first responders on the scene. Along with so many other rescue workers, the men of Ladder 3 participated in perhaps one of the most successful rescue efforts in U. These brave men, at their own peril, managed to safely evacuate over 25, people from the World Trade Center on that most tragic day. It is believed that Paddy and his men were on the 40th floor of the North Tower when it fell. Thousands packed the enormous church to overflowing, while firefighters lined up three and four deep, as far as the eye could see on Fifth Avenue to honor and respect this legendary NYC Firefighter. The honors for him continue even though he is no longer physically here with us. The Captain Patrick J. Also, a memorial scholarship fund has been set up in New Orleans in his name to help educate underprivileged children. Here is the drawing: Patrick Brown was passionate, intense, complicated, humble and an inspiration to both those who knew him and those who are just now finding out about this incredible man.
