Revision of TP Gives practical suggestions for the conduct of first-aid and mine rescue contests. A Bureau of Mines Instruction Manual. Revision of the Manual of First-Aid Instruction issued in Standardizes first-aid procedure in all industries served by the Bureau so that it will be equally applicable to general first-aid instruction and contest work and simplifies or clarifies methods of treating injuries. Discusses organization, equipment and materials, and procedure in fighting, sealing, and unsealing mine fires and in recovery operations following explosions. Also includes practice problem for recovery procedure. Although data relate primarily to comparatively thin or medium-thick coal beds with little if any pitch, it is believed that procedure for sealing and unsealing mines, together with principles and technique of identifying fire gases, is applicable, with modifications in some instances, to metal mines and coal beds whether thick or thin and with varying pitches. Central Mine Rescue Stations, by J. Griffith, James Westfield, Jr. Describes Federal, State, State and private, and private mine rescue stations. Discusses training methods and equipment. Training mine officials by showing them how to organize rescue and recovery activities and thus avoid panic at coal- and metal-mine disasters is recommended by the Bureau as part of its nationwide accident-prevention program. This circular, which is based on a protective system maintained at the Industrial Collieries Corp. The accessories and equipment needed to combat a mine fire or explosion are listed as they are provided at the large coal corporation, and complete details of duties, organization, and equipment are included. Van Fleet and Allen I. Experience has proved the value of the central mine rescue station of the Globe-Miami District Mine Rescue and First-Aid Association to the Arizona mining companies that cooperate in maintaining it and to the community. The central mine rescue station has provided the member mines with a dependable source of competent, well-equipped rescue teams for 30 years. Fourteen teams from 6 States participated in the mine rescue contest; 55 teams from 9 States competed in the first-aid contest; and 1 team entered as a combination team, participating in both the mine rescue and first-aid contests. Pynnonen, and John A. Fourteen teams from 6 States participated in the mine rescue contest, and 47 teams from 9 States in the first-aid contest. Three of the teams entered as combination teams, participating in both the mine rescue and first-aid contests. They were the Morley, Frederick, and Allen coal mines and the Monarch limestone and Canon dolomite quarries in Colorado and the Sunrise iron-ore mine in Wyoming.
