Read More Toddlers Program Toddlers want independence as they are now walking and beginning to talk. I loved this center from the start due to operation hours worked with my work schedule, great curriculum, cameras available and very friendly staff. My daughter started off in the younger toddler room and quickly advanced to the older room after assessment. She loves her teachers and I love hearing her talk about what she did daily when I pick her up. The teachers are very knowledgeable and made transitioning from home to daycare very pleasant for my daughter and myself. Ashley My children love attending tiny treasures day care!! My kids have learned so much at such young ages. The director is very accommodating she answers all our questions. Flores are awesome teachers. Our children are well taken care of. Melissa - Josiah Mommy I would like to thank the staff at Tiny Treasures for all they have done for my son in the time he has been there. As a first time parent, I was nervous about daycare, but I have been pleased with the service provided at this center. Stephanie is very kind and friendly. She has always answered any question that I have had and was prompt in contacting me when my son was not feeling well. My son has an excellent teacher whom he loves and talks about ALL the time. The entire staff seems to know all the kids, whether they are in their class. Everyone always say hello to us. We are very happy to have found such a great center. Yolanda Gomez My two year old son Mason has been going to Tiny Treasures for over a year now and I could not be happier with the daycare. The facility is always sparkling clean and the staff is incredible with the children. There are always fun activities for the children to participate in and Mason always has a blast. It also amazes me how much he learns! He comes home every day saying new words he was taught and has used sign language since beginning there! Mason has grown very close to the teachers and I am completely confident leaving him in their care while I am at work. The teachers pay close attention to each child, making sure their individual needs are met. Mason was born with a severe heart condition and I was terrified of taking him to daycare when he turned one. My fear immediately went away after seeing how closely he was watched by the staff and how seriously they took his condition. I am more than happy with Tiny Treasures and recommend it to anyone looking for fantastic child care. Breanna Daniels I would like to thank the center for always being there for my daughter. I know she looks forward to seeing her teachers in the morning and has learned so much since she has been with the center. I love walking in to her classroom and watching her as she participates in the singing and activities that they do. She is comfortable where she is and seems to look forward to her days here. Once again thank you for being there

Tiny Treasures. Valerie Castillo My daughter has been at Tiny Treasures for about six months now. She loves it there! Her vocabulary has soared since she has been there. She not only learns her words in English, but also in Spanish. I love when I pick her up from school, she sings the songs that she has learned during the day in the car on the way home.

How do I know if I am a candidate to donate milk? Almost any nursing mother can donate. If you are healthy with a good medical history, you are a likely candidate. You will be informed of any test results that would indicate a health problem so that you can follow up with your doctor. If all of your results are fine, you can begin to donate breast milk. Will I have enough milk for my baby if I donate? Do not donate milk your baby will need. If you pump after you breastfeed, there is a good chance that your milk supply will increase, allowing you to donate. Additionally, if you maintain this practice, you will generate excess supply as your baby is weaned. Prolacta-affiliated milk banks only want excess milk. After you become a qualified milk donor, you can donate previously-collected milk as long as it was expressed within the last 10 months and the following conditions are met: It was pumped under the same conditions ie, milk bank-approved medical conditions as when you became qualified. It was frozen immediately after pumping and stored in clear, sealed bags or plastic bottles designed to store human milk eg, Lansinoh breast milk storage bags. We cannot accept milk that was stored in reused food containers eg, old dairy milk cartons, juice bottles, or glass containers. Must have been continuously frozen. The milk must never have been thawed and refrozen. Ideally, each container should include only one pumping. Pump parts must have been thoroughly cleaned after each pumping. Each bag of milk must be dated with the month, day, and year the milk was expressed. What equipment will I need as a breast milk donor? After you qualify as a milk donor, the milk bank will provide you with breast milk storage bags for storing your expressed milk. You will need to obtain your own breast pump to express your milk for donation. Prolacta also recommends the purchase and use of an electric breast milk bottle sterilizer, such as the Baby Brezza sterilizer. When can I start expressing milk for the milk bank? You should establish breastfeeding for your own baby before you begin donating. Be sure your breast area is clean. Make sure your pump and parts are clean and dry. See question 10 for pump cleaning instructions. Carefully and thoroughly wash your hands with hot soapy water. Handle your pump and collection containers only after you have washed your hands. Collect breast milk into a dry, clean container. How do I clean pump parts while pumping for donation? After each use of your pump, wash the pump parts with hot soapy water and use a nipple brush to clean small areas. Rinse and dry all parts thoroughly. A minimum of once per day, sanitize pump parts in boiling water a rolling boil for 10 minutes, or use a sanitizer such as the Baby Brezza sterilizer. Parts should be completely dried after being cleaned. Regular replacement of pump parts that come into contact with breast milk is also recommended. How often should I express? How often you express your milk is up to you. Most donors find it easier to set a time each day to express milk. Most mothers have more milk in the morning, so mornings are a good time to pump. It can be harder to collect milk if you do not express it regularly. Some moms express from one breast while their babies feed from the other. Are all donor testing requirements the same for all donor milk programs? Prolacta has introduced additional safety measures in the qualification of our donors and the collection of donor milk. Some medications that might be considered acceptable for moms nursing their own full-term babies might be harmful to fragile premature babies, especially in the concentrated form. Why do you need to do DNA testing? The DNA matching step is necessary so that the milk we receive is matched to our qualified donors. This safety step ensures that only milk from qualified moms is accepted for production. We start by having the prospective donor provide a sample of cheek cells that we can use to create a unique Donor ID. We extract the DNA from the cheek cells and use it to create a series of 32 numbers that are unique to that donor. Only identical twins share the same profile. Two of the numbers in the profile tell us whether the DNA comes from a man or a woman. We do not generate any other genetic information about the donor. The only thing that is retained is the 32 number Donor ID. While there are other ways to match a donor to a tissue sample, this technique is considered the most accurate and is the gold standard. What is qualified milk? Qualified milk is donated milk which has met all the qualification guidelines. This includes two main phases: Qualification of the donor includes medical history screening, freezer qualification, DNA profile creation, and viral blood screening. After the donor qualification is completed, she may send her milk to the milk bank. Once the milk is received at Prolacta Bioscience it must undergo and pass several rigorous testing procedures, including but not limited to, bacterial screening, drug screening, and DNA matching.
