

1: Forensic Vocational Rehabilitation - NC, SC, VA

Forensic Rehabilitation Vocational experts (VEs) are rehabilitation professionals who testify in court matters about a person's capacities to perform competitive employment following the onset of injury or illness.

Dad did it too. I use bar soap and I use the soap until it is totally gone. And I mean totally! Like dad , I also save and reuse paper napkins if possible but prefer cloth! You get the point, and so did I back then and still do. Which really both made no sense at the time. But the point is my dad was cost conscious boy oh boy am I too! Dad was not wasteful and I greatly appreciate inheriting certain traits from him. I miss you so much dad! I know you are a part of me that I will have forever. Pretty cute though, huh! My dad, always a good looking man! I am also quite cognizant of what I throw away. I know plastic has many very practical and very useful purposes. But when it is used once and thrown away that bothers me. I recycle everything possible and feasible considering time and other factors and started composting thank you to my sister Julie who gave me her used Earth Machine! To me, the smell of good natural composition of kitchen and yard waste is incredible and to think of how it was made by helpful microbes, worms and other organisms! When mixed with your soil, compost will revitalize it, make it healthier and more productive, and increase moisture retention! So, I used compost this year spreading it out in my yard and garden. Viola beautiful lawn and it smells so fresh! However, and much to my chagrin we got moles. They must really like their meals found in our front and back yard. So the good can seem not so good when now my lawn is disfigured with raised soft ridges and scattered holes. So, this is all natural and meant to be, right? A mole is really interesting looking, lives underground and is nearly blind. I read that although a mole can detect light it does not hunt using its eyes. Instead, it relies on smell hence the interesting snout! So a mole is good for underground life. A mole is also based on my research: And I can celebrate that fact! But there is lingering doubt and some anguish over the mighty, mysterious and resilient mole. The bottom line is that with me, I see value and purpose in everything that surrounds me. So, with this post, I ask you if you need help in helping your client through the difficult maze of their claim, please let me help. Thanks for reading my post. Give me a call! I love to help out using my forensic rehabilitation services!

Comprehensive Forensic Vocational Expert Report A report is generated based on an assessment of the individual, work history, vocational capacity analysis, impact of disability, earnings capacity, and future medical and rehabilitation needs and projected medical costs. Long-Term Disability Evaluation Services in this area are focused on a review of medical information, physical abilities, clinical intake interview and vocational damages evaluation when appropriate to provide opinions regarding employability and vocational potential. Vocational Assessment in Family Law Cases A common issue in divorce or marital dissolution cases revolves around the earning capacity or vocational potential of one or both spouses. Additionally, if the displaced homemaker has physical or mental limitations which pose additional barriers to employment, a vocational assessment can be an effective tool to addressing the ability to be competitively placed in the labor market. In a few instances, the spouse has provided full-time care to a disabled child which resulted in the individual not being gainfully employed. Again, this necessitates the expertise of a vocational consultant to evaluate resources available to allow the individual to return to work. How can I help your case? Sawyer Consulting can bolster your case by providing the following: Determine to the degree to which age, physical, or mental health impacts employability. Earning Capacity Analysis Evaluate current and future earning capacity of either spouse. Compare actual earnings to potential earning capacity of either spouse. Determine whether the supported or support-seeking spouse is voluntarily unemployed or under-employed. Vocational Plan Provide a realistic timeframe for supported or supporting spouse to find work in the labor market. Assess efforts of either spouse to seek employment, build a business or explore career options. Determine cost and duration of education and training for future career options. Professional Experience in Occupational Therapy Julie Sawyer-Little is a licensed occupational therapist in addition to providing comprehensive life care planning and forensic vocational rehabilitation services. This education and experience adds another dimension of expertise in the evaluation process. This additional expertise can be important not only in adult cases, but also pediatric cases.
