I rule this game. And you will obey my rules. But few horror movies actually scared me back in the day. Freddy and Jason were my pals, rather than my nightmares. Rather, I loved them. The Gatekeeper, however, was childhood nightmare fuel of the highest order. Released in , the board game Nightmare was gifted to my brother and I by a family friend around that time, and it was like no game I had ever played before. Essentially, the Gatekeeper was the ruler of the underworld, and his mission was to prevent each of the players from exiting The Other Side. Wikipedia recalls the specific details that are a bit fuzzy to a year-old me: This place has six Harbingers, each of whom has authority over a Province. To play the game, each player adopts the persona of one of the Harbingers: Gevaudan the werewolf; Hellin the poltergeist; Khufu the mummy; Baron Samedi the zombie; Anne de Chantraine the witch, and Elizabeth Bathory the vampire. The final character in the game is the Gatekeeper, whose job is to ensure that the other characters do not escape from The Other Side. The game requires 3â€”6 players to attempt to collect keys while trying to beat the clock included on the video cassette. At random intervals, the game stops and The Gatekeeper appears to either taunt, reward, or penalize the players in a variety of ways. If no one is able to accomplish this within 60 minutes, The Gatekeeper is declared the winner. What made Nightmare so scary was that the Gatekeeper seemed to be directly speaking to you as you played. The interactivity was something very new at the time, capitalizing on the success of the VHS format and using it to brilliantly take the standard board game to a whole new level. And goddamn was Wenanty Nosul terrifying as the Gatekeeper: Do you remember Nightmare? Revisit one of the original commercials below!

"Gatekeeper" features a labyrinthine setting -- from the chambers of the American embassy in Paris to the stoops and back alleys of New York City -- stocked with characters whose ambition, cunning, and technological sophistication are intolerant of any threat to their conspiratorial will to power.

But what about small or irregularly shaped rooms where an interlock will not fit? Or what if the secure area is located inside a vehicle? Because now there is Gatekeeper. Gatekeeper is an innovative and affordable single-person detection system, designed specifically for Cash in Transit vehicles. Regardless of the physical dimensions of a room, Gatekeeper enables you to easily and without massive adjustments to the vehicle counteract Tailgating and Piggybacking. Regular Interlock or circlelock will not fit? Gatekeeper does not have this problem. Thanks to its ultra compact footprint, the system can be installed into extremely small spaces starting from 1 m². For example in armored vehicles or ATM off-premise locations. Up until now, it was impossible to execute a reliable single-person detection in spaces this small. Gatekeeper can also be used in irregularly shaped rooms with different ceiling heights or even corners. What makes Gatekeeper unique? Gatekeeper components are high-end and allow you to build the most affordable single-person interlock of the moment. Small footprint Thanks to its ultracompact components, Gatekeeper can be installed into any room starting from as small as 1m². Easy, retrofittable integration Naturally, Gatekeeper can be installed in new armored trucks beautifully, but it also fits well into your existing fleet. Without making major adjustments to the vehicles. Thanks to the intelligent controller, Gatekeeper can be integrated into any access control system. Operation and Integration To establish how many if any persons are inside a room, the system uses vision sensors that execute a 3D measurement. But without the risk of drowning. The system registers values that are characteristic for each person and these values are allocated to a user profile in any access management system. If there is more than one person in the interlock area, the system will note the deviation from the registered values and deny access. Thanks to the modular architecture, any desired level of security is achievable. Over the years, there have been quite some changes in the types of attack. In many European countries, bank robberies occur less and less, because there is hardly any cash on site. The ATM has taken over this role and has subsequently become a target. The CIT business is also a target for extremely violent robberies. To break the arms race between criminals and the cash handling industry, we believe we need to address the problem at the source: Criminals use trucks and excavators to ram the ATM out of the wall and explosive gas often a mixture of acetylene and oxygen or solid explosives, like hand grenades and plastic explosives, to access the cash cassettes in the ATM. Since a couple of years, off premise ATMs in supermarket have also become a target for criminals. The damage involved in these attacks is enormous. So it makes perfect sense that banks show an interest in solutions like the GPU Gas Protection Unit and GlueFusion cash degradation with glue, inside cash cassettes. Attacks on CIT Cash handling has many aspects; from delivery of the cash, servicing ATMs and transporting cash, to counting and sorting in the cash centers. During attacks on the Cash in Transit operation, criminals are using increasingly heavier and more dangerous weaponry. Automatic firearms and plastic explosives are used to shoot at and blow up armored trucks. The CIT custodian is also frequently a target of an attack. In the Netherlands, attacks on the custodians are very rare these days. Main reason for the decline of this MO is the use of the MactwinBox , with irreversible cash degradation. In the next couple of years, organizations will need to invest substantially in improving their digital defensibility. We proudly work for these organisations In the last 30 years, we have helped numerous banks and CIT companies improve their security. We proudly call these companies our partner: Contact Us Today Interested in a demonstration or more information?

Sometime over the past Christmas period the Cowboys got their 2 millionth paying customer. In fact Atmosfear gave the Cowboys the opportunity to build on everything they had learnt from doing the first game, and to take into account the research and feedback from players during design phase. Nightmare was such a major success for Spear, and they had done a lot of market research on it, that they wanted to have a say in how the next game was developed. Here in Australia it is already selling above industry predictions, and within months of its release, it has become one of the top ten best selling games in America and is the only new game currently in the UK top ten. The New York Times. New York City, United States: The New York Times Company. One particularly elaborate campaign is for Atmosfear There are spots that start this week on MTV and a cross-promotion in stores with soft drinks There is even a site on the World Wide Web for Atmosfear Official website for Atmosfear DVD. Archived from the original on 4 October Retrieved 22 May Featuring all new appearances from The Gatekeeper. No need to read up on any new rules. Simply refer to the advanced keystone table below then insert the Booster Tape and press play for a whole new experience. What the Cowboys have since discovered, of course, is that many players actually enjoy being Soul Rangers, simply because they can go around and do a lot of damage. In fact the next Atmosfear video board game will feature these gruesome boys and will be titled The Soul Rangers. The Gatekeeper will hit the shelves. Nightmare was resurrected as the DVD game Atmosfear in , and sold 60,000 copies in just six months. Unlike the linear-based storytelling format dictated by videotape, the deep data pockets of DVD allow more than varied storylines and responses from the Gatekeeper, so no game truly plays the same way twice.
