And the denial of descendants goes beyond William Lee, it goes on to all lines, except for those associated with Ditchley or Stratford, which seem to be the only lines being recognized at this time because of tainted DNA projects ran by associations of the Lee Society. American History is the foundation upon which our great Nation stands-the importance of integrity and substance is from which we thrive and our patriotic pride derives. It is what we are taught and what fills our heart and minds as we say our Pledge of Allegiance. Denial of the Truth, Denial of Heritage. This website is my labor of love to my ancestors, and to all of their descendants. It began as a quest for the true descending lines of Col. Richard Lee I, the acknowledgement of these lines This website is about the commitment to honor the members of the Lee Family, of those denied that right, yet know who they descend from. This website is dedicated to the patriotism, courage of all our Lee family members and descendants. This website is dedicated to revealing all the forgotten generations, giving freedom to those who know of who they are from, but not believed. I have tried to gather as much information as I can to share with others who may be researching their own family lines and ties to these ancestors, and I welcome all contributions that may assist those who are seeking their own roots. The goal is to re-connect and acknowledge all Lees of Virginia lines and descendants. These historical publications can easily be found at the Library of Congress under the category of Lee Family Genealogy. William Lee died young leaving her as heiress. She inherited land from her father. However, after her remarriage to Bartholomew Schreever and the circumstances associated with it, the Lee family filed suit against Mary for the land. Two court dates later, Mary had lost her inheritance and been disowned by the Lee family. To this day the Society of Lees of Virginia will not accept her descendants as members. They gave us our heritage, and it is time we show them our gratitude and recognition for who they were. They were not saints - sometimes proving their point rather strongly - but they did live with an ethic that we would do well to remember today. They worked hard - and were rewarded for that, usually. They helped one another, and as families were orphaned - took in the children, extended their families - took care of their own. They did not think for an instant if this was something the "government" should do. To them, that was unthinkable. Family and neighbors shouldered responsibility and moved on. They moved westward, ever westward - as pioneers - living and moving deeper and deeper into often hostile territory - to carve out civilization from nothing They built a Nation that is the envy of everyone else who did not follow their example. They despised all who lacked self-respect. They built churches and schools as they needed them, held barn raisings and worked harvest days that ended in "courting" parties, establishing new generations. What we do today that we should not be doing, they would have strongly discouraged. What they did do, we should still be doing. They are an example of success in the face of disease and hardship, we have now overcome. We should and can learn from their example - perhaps we too need to be tested and purified by the fires, the tribulations, as they were - for they turned out the better from these trials We should examine what made them great, examine what made them successful - and we should follow their examples, preferably without needing the experience of the tribulation, but through thought, morality and mental effort. The blood they shed runs through our veins. They fought to give us freedom and liberty, These Patriots we proudly display on our trees. Yet - how would they view us if they were alive today? Would they accept these circumstances or would they dismay? Or might they tell us that it is our responsibility? To uphold and protect the Constitution they fought for that set us free? Or would they pick up the ax to help chip away The foundation this Nation was built? Leaving it to corruption and be reduced to silt? Would they choose fortune over the future of us all? Would they care not at this Nations fall? Time is growing short, but it is not over yet We did change the past to better this land! Be the Lion, not the sheep! Live your lives with eyes open, not half asleep! For only United this Nation can remain standing, and Divided you will surely Fall!
