The 'Getting rid of Matthew' story may resonate with some single women in their mid 30's and married men over 50, who have become embroiled in not dissimilar addictive affairs, with unenviable consequences after the intensive passion declines, as it succumbs to the ravages of real life constraints.

Get Rid of Them No one likes to be bothered by telemarketers because they are annoying. Getting rid of telemarketers is mainly about the approach. Ericka Elson has worked at a telemarketing company for two years. During that time, she has had to place many unwanted calls. All of the information they collect while they are on the phone with you goes into a database that contains information about you and other potential customers. Should I just ignore these calls? Ericka suggests, that it is better to just answer the call. If the company does not have a large lead pool, you may get called as soon as 12 hours later. The caller will not let the person go until they have said no three times. A customer is more likely to give in after saying no twice since they have started to run out of excuses. Therefore, do not say anything that could be added to their database. Am I doing anything to make it worse? Here is a list of things Ericka says NOT to do: They will call you back until they have a conversation with you. This tells the caller that you may need a little more convincing because are interested in their product. Do not ask questions. Do not explain why you are not interested in the product. Telemarketers literally have a script that tells them how to respond to every objection, so the less you engage with them, the better. Remember, the computer chose your lead, not the caller. If the telemarketer is being rude, you can ask to speak to a manager. Despite what they might say, every campaign and business has a supervisor in the call room. Be polite, but firm. Unfortunately, it is not illegal for non-profits. What can I do about Non-profits calling me? If you get a call from a non-profit, ask for a manager and tell them that you have repeatedly requested to be placed on the do not call list. Also, keep in mind that a prior caller may not have done their job and removed you, and this new, innocent caller is getting all the blame. One good thing about non-profits is that most run seasonal campaigns; so at least your lead will be put to rest for three to 11 months. Getting rid of telemarketers is mainly about your approach. You do not want to give the telemarketer anything to work with. Be careful how you phrase what you say; it will make a difference in the way your intention is interpreted. If you make the right choices, then this should stop the calls or at least decrease the number of calls that you receive.

Bkmrk The famous story is from the apocryphal chapter 13 of Daniel, where lecherous elders try to blackmail a virtuous wife whom they are ogling. It is better for you to lose one part of your body than for your whole body to be thrown into hell. It is better for you to lose one part of your body than for your whole body to go into hell. One which he selected was adultery. In our day adultery is rampant. Some estimate that half of husbands commit adultery sometime in their marriage, along with a third of wives. But the problem begins, Jesus teaches us, in the heart. Is that really what the Law had in mind, you wonder? The Tenth Commandment is pretty specific: What is the difference? How does lust break the Tenth Commandment? The heart of man is the problem according to Jesus. Lust is a thing of the heart. Here we are dealing with technicalities again. The self-righteous Pharisees were the fathers of such technicalities. But Jesus also uses the Greek word porneia

Matthew Natural Sexual Desire verse Lust Is there any hope for a man? From the first stirrings of adolescence, hormones begin to surge through boys turning them into men. Sex is one of the strongest drives we have. Is this natural sexual desire wrong? No, natural desire for the opposite sex is normal and necessary. Men desire women and vice versa, families are formed, children produced. That is what God intended. Food is good, but it can lead to ill health when eaten in overabundance. Money is good, but can corrupt the soul when worshipped. Common sense tells us, however, that unrestrained sex leads to broken families, fatherless children, and general chaos. We read in Genesis 2 about a man and a woman. Society has sometimes allowed polygamy and in those societies God allowed men of faith to have more than one wife, e. But when we examine the family life of these polygamous unions, we see envy, strife, and competition rather than peace. In the New Testament, leaders of the church are to reflect the ancient and holy ideal that God instituted in the Garden: Outside of marriage, sex may "feel so right" but bring a harvest of bad fruit. Inside of marriage it bonds husbands to wives and wives to husbands, and, God willing, children that can grow up within a stable family environment. God purposely created us with a good and natural sexual desire. How do we distinguish between that God-given sexual desire and forbidden lust?

The hypocrisy is all the greater because it does not know itself to be hypocritical. Then shalt thou see clearly. It gives a new motive to the work of self-scrutiny and self-reformation. While we are blind with self-deceit we are but bunglers in the work of dealing with the faults of others. When we have wrestled with and overcome our own besetting sins, then, and not till then, shall we be able, with the insight and tact which the work demands, to help others to overcome theirs. Pulpit Commentary Verse 5. Thou hypocrite Matthew 6: The thought here is of the personation of a part a man free from impediment in his vision which does not belong to you. First cast out the beam out of thine own eye, In ver. It is in thine eye, of all places, that the beam now is. Surely a promise as well as a statement. Not the mote ver. The verse seems to imply that if the spirit of censoriousness be absent, it will be possible for us to remove "motes" from the eyes of our brothers. Thus the passage as a whole does not say that we never ought to try to remove such "motes," but that this is monstrous and almost impossible so long as we ourselves have a fault of so much magnitude as censoriousness. Matthew Henry Commentary 7: We must not judge rashly, nor pass judgment upon our brother without any ground. We must not make the worst of people. Here is a just reproof to those who quarrel with their brethren for small faults, while they allow themselves in greater ones. Some sins are as motes, while others are as beams; some as a gnat, others as a camel. Not that there is any sin little; if it be a mote, or splinter, it is in the eye; if a gnat, it is in the throat; both are painful and dangerous, and we cannot be easy or well till they are got out. It is as strange that a man can be in a sinful, miserable condition, and not be aware of it, as that a man should have a beam in his eye, and not consider it; but the god of this world blinds their minds. Here is a good rule for reprovers; first reform thyself.

Befriend Matthew's children. Unsuccessfully watch your whole plan go absolutely horribly wrong. "Getting Rid of Matthew" isn't as easy as it seems, but along the way Helen will forge an unlikely friendship, find real love and realize that nothing ever goes exactly to plan .

So there was plenty of time to travel the world and go out drinking with her best friend Rachel. In fact, now that Matthew is here in her small home, every day, crowding her, making it impossible for her to do all the things she loved doing in her time alone time that had previously seemed so depressing , Helen ceases to love Matthew altogether. The affair and broken marriage eventually leaks out at work and Helen finally admits that she has to change her life, starting with her resignation. But when she tries to break up with him, he becomes pitiable and she lets him stay. But as Helen learns more about Matthew through Sophie, she also realises she likes Sophie a lot more than she expected to, leaving her with the question: I worried that the entire story would be a drag on my spirit. So my respect for her went up even higher. Helen is not painted as an innocent woman. She knows her affair is wrong, but while caught up in it the mind works differently: Fallon does a fine job of balancing sympathy with "just desserts": Helen does deserve it, after all. The narrative is a perfect example of how to use past tense instead of present tense, to deliver the sense of immediacy, an "in the moment" feel of unknown futures, of open possibilities. It reads like a more sophisticated, more mature, more ironic and sharp-witted Sophie Kinsella novel. It is also the story of a woman who put too much stock in the illusion of a kind of life, and too much emphasis on having a man in her life. I pretty much devoured this book and actually felt somewhat bereft when I finished, as I had really come to like Sophie and Helen and, like a good TV show, wanted to keep watching. I became hugely invested in this story, and was absorbed in watching Helen grow and mature and become a better person. Recommended to anyone interested in reading a mature, original and ironic take on poorly-thought-out relationships, a drama story without the soap. The story is based on an adulterous relationship, which is repugnant. But when this woman finally gets her boyfriend to leave his wife, she no longer wants him! I never enjoyed or cared for the main character and as the book developed it only got worse.

Getting Rid of Unbelief Faith and Unbelief. When I decided to go on my first fast, it was during the hottest days of summer. The only kind of fast I knew anything about was what Jesus did in the Bible. So I just woke up one morning and decided go without food or water. Needless to say, by the afternoon of the second day I was beginning to visit La La Land. Fortunately, I ran into a friend who saved me from dehydration. Jesus talks about fasting and prayer in the story of the boy with seizures Matthew The obvious question is: To pray and fast before casting a demon out of another person is simply not practical. Based on the Biblical record, Jesus only fasted onceâ€”for forty days food and water â€”in the very beginning of His ministry. And Jesus certainly did not go off to pray before He cast out a demon. Since He is our example, I think we need to dig a little deeper into the question: Also, please remember that while faith has its substance in our spirit our divine nature , unbelief has its substance in our flesh our human nature. And both conditions can be and usually are present at the same time. If faith is drawing us into a revelation of who God really is, then unbelief is trying to convince us otherwise. I am convinced that Jesus is teaching us how to get rid of our unbelief. However, this kind does not go out except by prayer and fasting. And when we are in His presence we become more interested in who He is than what He does. In His presence we get to know Him. In His presence we experience the fullness of joy. In His presence we live and move and have our being. The better we know God, the harder it is to entertain unbelief. Fasting works the other end of the deal.

Tell him you have a moustache that you wax every six weeks. Stop having sex with him. Pick holes in the way he dresses. Or pluck out the stray hag-whisker that grows out of your chin. Buy a cat and give it a fake name and identity. Unsuccessfully watch your whole plan go absolutely horribly wrong. Helen quickly realizes she does not want Matthew and her ways to get rid of him are quirky and funny. This book was irresistible, hard to put down. Every time I did stop reading I was dying to know what was going to happen next. Helen befriends the ex-wife and forms a lovely friendship. This was the highlight of the book for me, and when her true identity was revealed I nearly cried. Their friendship moved me so much, and made me grateful for my friends. He was slimy, a liar and weak and needy, plus old, not attractive. However, his character was well written and I did find myself disliking him and laughing at him. I had a few problems with this book. The second was the way the children were written. They are aged 12 and 10 but to be honest it seemed like they were in their teens. And the final thing was I did not like the over-use of bad language. Overall, I enjoyed this book and was happy to overlook my complaints. This is a great, fun chick lit book.

Getting Rid of Matthew is the sharp and hilariously funny novel from bestselling author Jane Fallon. It was also a Richard and Judy pick. It was also a Richard and Judy pick. Praise for Jane Fallon.

It seems very fitting for us to think along the lines of the very Feast of Unleavened Bread that is but 10 days away and what we do in preparation for this Feast, and how that speaks to us not only physically or literally but also spiritually and metaphorically. And we guard this law each year! He repeats this twice in this chapter and so we realise once again that keeping His Feasts â€” obeying His Torah is our mark of worship! Following pagan feasts and traditions only leads to one receiving the mark of the beast! Strong words but critical words that must be heeded! Ok so who were the Pharisees and the Sadducees? They were the religious leaders of the day, 2 very opposing parties to one another, yet quickly united in opposition to Messiah in an attempt to trap Him and accuse Him of blasphemy! The Pharisees, of course, were the traditionalists of their day, while the Sadducees were quite liberal, holding fast to the written Law. The Sadducees held fast to the written Torah and believed the Word of Elohim as having all authority and any oral traditions were not seen as binding as law â€” not a bad thing! However the one of the things that they did not believe in was the resurrection of the dead. Their teachings and doctrines were like yeast that works in slowly and secretly. They were wicked and adulterous â€” that is they twisted the truth around the worship of pagan deities and self! It is this very twisted and corrupt leaven we are to guard against. Understanding the principle being taught in guarding against leaven and having no leaven in our lives, we can see how destructive a little leaven or rather sin can be. Just a tiny little bit of lawlessness can be deadly, and sadly too many today are living compromising lives thinking that their little compromises or sin will not affect or harm them in their relationship with Elohim â€” all due to false and leavened teachings that are geared to tickle ears and win over the crowds. People have used yeast for thousands of years, yet it was only in when Louis Pasteur discovered chemically how yeast in fact works, and he could therefore explain the very fermentation process that occurs in the making of wine and beer through the adding of yeast! Before this time nobody knew how yeast worked, they just knew it did! Today you can find all kinds of yeast products available â€” there is instant yeast, compressed yeast, active dry yeast, crumbed yeast, wet yeast, dry yeast with reducing power etc. When warning the disciples about this yeast, He was not talking about the yeast in bread but rather about these very twisted and lawless teachings. Sin is lawlessness and anything added to the Torah and taught as doctrine and law is a yeast that we are to guard against! Yeast is a living organism that feeds on the dough in which it is placed and in the process it produces carbon dioxide! Did you hear what I said? Yeast is a living organism that feeds on the batch it is placed in to! So many people arrogantly think that some traditions and forms of worship that is rooted in pagan worship cannot and will not affect them â€” how wrong they are when they think that pagan feasts, such as Easter and Christmas are harmless â€” allowing this yeast in to your system through twisted teachings will affect you and affect you badly!!! In fact what tends to happen is that one affected by this sickened leaven gets puffed up and full of pride, unable to recognise their own sin â€” why? Because they have been deceived!!! And they are affected through and through â€” it is only by the favour of Elohim that we can all sit here today and give Him thanks that He has rid us of the leaven of the Pharisees and the Sadducees, from which we are to now guard against being contaminated again! Do you not know that a little leaven leavens the entire lump? For also Messiah our Passover was offered for us. Sexual sins and immorality was rampant. Some were only loyal to certain leaders while rejecting others and causing division. There was major confusion as to the role of women in the assembly. Sounds like a pretty messed up lot hey? What this community or assembly in Corinth did not realise is that all the sinful acts â€” that is those lawless deeds that was going on â€” whether inherited through traditions or not was affecting others. He reminded them and reminds us that we are new â€” and we must cleanse out the old leaven to be a new lump, unleavened in Messiah. As this Feast of Unleavened Bread approaches we must ensure that we get rid of any old junk! Just a tiny little bit of sin, a little bit of compromise that often is thought of as harmless â€” is like a little bit of yeast in the dough â€” it will affect the whole batch. Let me remind you all â€” our individual compromises affect not only our own lives but the lives of the rest of us in this family too. One little sin leads to another, be it in your life or be it that it causes another to also have a little compromise or sin in their life and so this leaven of lawlessness snowballs and before you know it, an assembly that is rich in Spirit and in Truth can become spiritually unhealthy and what results is nothing more than a divided group of people that blows out nothing but Carbon Dioxide CO2!!! And guess what – CO2 stinks!!!! So as we have said, yeast causes dough to rise and so too does sin cause our flesh to rise! We are to therefore not walk according to the flesh; we are to put to death the misdeeds of the flesh. The question we must daily answer is whether we choose to walk in the flesh or in the Spirit – which one will we feed the most? The principle of yeast rising and spreading to the whole batch is what He speaks of, and what we are looking at tonight is the very yeast that kills through a very enchanting and ear-tickling puffed up message that only leads to lawless living as well as the very yeast of the sinful nature – that is of the flesh that can contaminate our attitudes and harden our hearts! Let us look at just 3 that has a nasty way of puffing one up: Hatred – hatred toward another person is sin. Hate is a sin that simply causes one person to degrade another, and through hatred some people puff themselves up to feel better about themselves when they clearly cause others to feel inferior, unworthy or useless. Hatred is terrible yeast that contaminates the Truth, and sadly we see in many parts of the world, including South Africa how hatred toward another, be it for various reasons including ethnicity, is readily taught and accepted as true doctrine! There are many living today who have puffed themselves up in their views and have a total disregard for others, which is nothing other than hatred being lived out literally, and actually feel good about themselves. May we not have this leaven in our batch! One that we must rid ourselves of quickly! Jealousy has destroyed relationships and lives. The problem with many today is the same thing – they do not know that they are sinning because they have not read the Torah and are unable to look intently into the mirror of the Word and see how they look! Others know what the Word says yet still disobey as they allow the yeast of the Pharisees and Sadducees to affect their life of obedience! The Truth will never make you nasty, but add a little leaven and watch it spread – all it takes is a little! Ever heard or said or even had a thought along the lines of: This is nothing other than a pride filled life of selfishness without regard for another and will even forsake family and friends in order to feed the consuming poison of the yeast of greed. Greed is like a drug addiction that is always seeking the next big fix! Watch out for the yeast of greed – even in those seemingly nice to hear messages. Get rid of greed! As we consider some of the leaven that we ought to rid ourselves of may we also realise, pretty much in line really with our Torah portions of late, that leprosy is also symbolic of that deadly leaven of sin. In leprosy what happens is that as the leprosy progresses and worsens the leper begins to lose feeling – their sense of touch weakens and eventually becomes null and void to the point where the flesh is eaten to the bone the extremities fall off! As we consider the leprosy of our hearts that comes as a result of sin or leaven being mixed into our lives, no matter how small amount, if not dealt with and confessed, can begin to cause leprous decay from within and result in us losing feeling so to speak. By this I mean that our hearts begin to harden and become insensitive to others, having no care or regard for one another only thinking only of self. As you can all see when looking at a light bulb – the filament that which projects the light – is on the inside of the globe. What is on the inside of us will shine forth and so let me quickly remind you that any sin or leaven that may be on the inside will eventually surface and reveal true character – let not the leaven of malice and wickedness be in us, but rather the Unleavened Bread of sincerity and truth! The very Unleavened Bread within us will too shine forth brightly as we reflect that we are indeed children of the Most High. And may we guard against the yeast of man-made doctrines and traditions that only spoil and cause to rot! I know that I said recently that it is still our home and we do not allow any alcoholic beverage here, and will not have wine here for Passover but will have grape juice and so the question arises wine or grape juice? Wine – Grape Juice or Water? In Scripture wine can represent a few things: We also can see that wine was forbidden in worship and service in the Tabernacle. Wine and strong drink were forbidden in order that the priests could distinguish between the set-apart and the profane, the clean and the unclean – a statute forever throughout our generations! It is all a picture of cleanness and set-apartness when representing the Blood and work of Messiah! What we must realise today, in case you were not aware, is that wine is a by-product and not the first fruit of the grape. Wine is produced when yeast, what? Yes Yeast, a leavening agent, is added and acts on the sugar molecule of fruit juice in order to produce ethyl alcohol and carbon dioxide. Wine therefore, is a chemically altered product and is not the original pure fruit of the vine, but rather a secondary by-product! And most importantly for this Feast " wine is leavened just as bread is leavened by yeast. New wine symbolises the best " that juice that is squeezed out by the sheer weight of the wine press before the treading takes place. This pure first fruit can only equate with the first of the fleshly squeezed grape juice and not a by-product of wine which has been corrupted through chemical change! The answer is simple " the first fruit of the grape " the fruit of the vine " pure grape juice! So another lesson for us in removing leaven for His Feast " No Wine!!!

8: Adultery, Lust, and the Spirit of Marriage (Matthew ) - Sermon on the Mount

If you like any of these things, then I respect your opinion.

Stevens is Morris Townsend, who may or may not be a fortune hunter. He has sideburns and an American accent and when he walks on stage, there is the strange frisson of seeing him play someone who is not Matthew Crawley – and convey the ambiguities of a darker character very well. This ambition to do something different is what has spurred him on. And I think a moment like this is quite unique and presents those opportunities more than ever before. Morris Townsend is a little bit different, and that for me is good enough. When he is talking about books or theatre, there is no stopping him. When he talks about Downton, he is more cautious. But he was neither a household name, nor a heartthrob. Downton, playing on his boyish handsomeness and his passionate affair with the stand-offish Lady Mary, has made him a star, both in the UK and America. When he walks on stage in New York, he commands a round of applause just as great as that of his movie-making co-stars. It had a freedom about it because it was coming out of the head of Julian Fellowes. Anything could happen and generally did. Everybody owned their storyline. And it was fun. It had a tongue in cheek element which set it apart. One of my ways of coping with the attention that it has received is to join the ranks enjoying the mania of Downton rather than take the whole thing too seriously. But that is my way with most things. Not to take them too seriously. He laughs a lot while he talks, and makes rather good jokes. But he also uses this charm to deflect questions. If he has felt any frustration, he does not show it: I think there were some justifiable criticisms of series two and its pace. I think from what I have seen, series three has been a lot stronger. We have been living together for three years and have been on the most amazing journey. It has been so bizarre, and only those who have been through it can understand it. There are so many angles and edits and it gets very airless and stuffy – and it is blacked out so even at 10 in the morning we are in the dark. I hope I never have another year that is quite like this. This may have had some effect on his choice. I had novels on my plate with the Booker, I was writing and editing, we had our second baby on the way [his wife is the jazz singer and teacher Susie Harriet] and things were getting kind of crazy. The Booker judging, in particular, allowed the bright boy who sailed out of Croydon via public school and Cambridge to fulfil his intellectual ambitions. And if you have written the best work of literary fiction you should win the prize, so in that sense it was unanimous. When it is good, theatre takes a lot of beating both to watch and perform. It is the essential things like that I equate with happiness.
