I am so glad that Animal Planet is publishing this series that focuses on a different group of animals in each one. As a mom to a son that truly adores all types of animals, I am so glad that there are the variety of quality nonfiction animal texts out there for readers to access. We have read all of the Animal Bites series books thus far, and he constantly brings them to me to read. I like them, too, because I can learn so much from each of the pages. The photography is beautiful and they are very nicely formatted. While my toddler is probably the age demographic that these are marketed to, I think it shows that these books will be appreciated by kids and adults! There are a wide variety of tools in these books that make it very easy for teachers to use them. They have colorful tabs, activities, resources, etc. It would be neat for each literature circle to pick out five interesting things they learned to share with the other groups. I imagine this would create interest and make the students more interested in reading the other books in the series. What are some of your favorite facts from the books? How are the books formatted in ways that appeal to you visually? Which animal is your favorite, and why? Some of the activities in these books sound like great fun: You will see which animal probably moves the fastest. Also in this section, there is a craft section on how to make a flock of sheep! Check out any of the Animal Bites books to find more activities to do in conjunction to the texts and information.
