The general manager of the Orlando Magic basketball team describes how Walt Disney's five-step plan for success can be applied to accomplish any goal.*

Magic Tree House Jack and Annie play the largest role in the series, and they embark on numerous adventures for Merlin and Morgan le Fay throughout the series. They also receive the help of the young magicians Kathleen and Teddy while they embark on their missions. Jack[edit] Jack is the brother of Annie, the other major character in the series. He has short brown hair and wears red-rimmed glasses that have round lenses. Jack is often shy around others, unlike Annie, and he often takes time to get used to new situations. Jack also believes in science and reason much more than Annie does, and he often keeps a small notebook in which he takes notes about their adventures. Jack often wants to read about a place and time and absorb as much information as he can before embarking on their adventure. He is also older than Annie, which may play a role in his maturity. Jack is extremely intelligent for his young age, and his vast knowledge often helps him and Annie complete their missions. This results in him having unexpected knowledge or talents that help complete their missions such as Jack being able to drive a vehicle despite not being old enough to possess the skill. Jack is courageous, willing to risk his own life to help others, and he is compassionate, caring for everything and everyone. He also reveals in Civil War On Sunday 21 that he thinks war is kind of cool until the end. However, he sometimes lacks self-confidence until something motivates him to perform the needed feat. When he is confident in his abilities, Jack is good at doing the tasks. On one occasion, while driving a truckload of kids past a Nazi checkpoint, his confident demeanor was enough to fool the Nazis into thinking he was a regular truck driver and let him pass without an inspection. He also has a growing crush on Kathleen, as he gets shy around her and notes that she is extremely pretty. Her opinion of him matters to Jack greatly enough that if she shows confidence in his ability to perform tasks, he has more confidence in himself if only for the reason of not wanting to let Kathleen down. Annie[edit] Annie is the younger sister of Jack, and she is the second major character in the series. Annie has blond hair tied in pigtails, and has blue eyes. Annie is often impulsive and not as shy as Jack. However, this often leads to trouble that the pair has to deal with. Annie is younger than Jack, which means that she is less mature. Annie also talks to animals much more than Jack does, and she is kind to them. She is the one who gives Jack and Annie riddles and quests to solve in Books 1 through Teddy[edit] A young sorcerer and apprentice of Morgan. Teddy is not his actual name but the nickname Jack and Annie gave him when he was a dog. His real name is unknown but everyone calls him Teddy, not just Jack and Annie. When he regained human form, he chose to have Jack and Annie continue calling him Teddy as he liked the nickname though he asked for them to call him Ted, something they only did for his brief appearance as a human at the end of book Over the course of the books, Teddy gets better but still requires help a lot. His misfortunes with magic resulted in him turning himself into a dog and Penny the Penguin into stone, resulting in Jack and Annie having to help him break the spells. Kathleen[edit] Kathleen is the youngest of 20 sisters, and she is a selkie, or being that can morph herself and others into seals. Kathleen is free-spirited and playful, probably due to her being a selkie. Kathleen has brown hair that is long and curly and brown eyes. She also wears a seaweed dress. In seal form, she can communicate with other seals as well. Kathleen is also talented in magic spells. She is also very caring as shown when she is sent to rescue two children in Normandy during World War II and instead risks her life to protect ten children. Her empathic nature results in her losing her magic when she loses hope, forcing Jack and Annie to rescue her. Once her hope is restored, so is her magic. Jack has a crush on her, but it is unknown if she shares these feelings. The movie will primarily contain plot elements from Book 29, "Christmas in Camelot.

Franchise history[edit] Intrigued by the project, Williams signed on as the front man of the investment group one year later as he left the 76ers. On June 19, , the two held a news conference to announce their intention of seeking an NBA franchise. Out of a total of 4, submitted entries, the names were subsequently narrowed to four, "Heat", "Tropics", "Juice", and "Magic". The last one, which had been submitted by 11 people, was picked after Williams brought his 7-year-old daughter Karyn to visit in Orlando. Hewitt added that "You look at all the aspects of Central Florida , and you find it really is an exciting place, a magical place. Initially, the NBA was planning to expand by three teams, with one franchise going to Florida; however, when both Miami and Orlando ownership groups made successful pitches, the expansion committee decided to expand by four teams, allowing both to have a franchise. On June 27, , the Magic chose Nick Anderson with the 11th pick in the first round, who became the first draft pick of the franchise. Early years[edit] The very first game played was an exhibition game on October 13, against the then reigning champions Detroit Pistons, which the Magic won. Forward Dennis Scott set a team mark with three-point field goals for the season, the best long-distance production by a rookie in NBA history. Family patriarch Richard DeVos became the owner of the franchise. With a shortage of healthy players the team struggled through a game losing streak and finished with a 21â€”61 record. The Magic still managed to have all 41 home games sold out. Under Aduvato, the Magic went 21â€”12 to compile a 45â€”37 record, led by Penny Hardaway. In the playoffs, the Magic quickly fell 0â€”2 to the heavily favored Miami Heat in the first round, but Hardaway battled back with consecutive 40 point games to assure a game five the first player to do so , which the Magic ultimately lost. The season was hampered by an injury to Hardaway who sat out the majority of the season. Anderson, combined with newly acquired free agent Bo Outlaw , led the team to a 41â€”41 record, just out of reach of the NBA playoffs. In addition, Seikaly was traded during the season to the New Jersey Nets for three role players and a future draft pick. In the playoffs the Penny Hardaway-led Magic were seeded number 3 because of tiebreakers and faced the Philadelphia 76ers. The 76ers, led by Allen Iverson , upset the Magic 3â€”1 in the first round. At the end of the season Rivers was named Coach of the Year. That year was characterized by the slogan "Heart and Hustle", as the team was known for its hard-working style. However, Hill was limited to 4 games because of an ankle injury. With the addition of Mike Miller from the draft, the Magic compiled a 43â€”39 record, which included a nine-game winning streak, and once again made the playoffs. Miller won the Rookie of the Year. In the playoffs, they faced the Milwaukee Bucks in the first round. The Bucks won the series 3â€”1. In â€”02 , McGrady led the Magic to a winning record of 44â€” Hill was still severely limited by his ankle injury, and did not play for the vast majority of the season. McGrady, combined with Armstrong, Miller, and 3-point sharpshooter Pat Garrity , formed the core of the team. However, the Magic were defeated 3â€”1 in the first round of the playoffs by the Charlotte Hornets led by Baron Davis. McGrady led the league in scoring with Despite still not having Hill due to injury, the Magic entered the playoffs for the third straight year. However, after taking a 3â€”1 lead in the best-of-seven first round series, the Magic fell to the Detroit Pistons 4â€”3 in the now infamous heartbreaker. McGrady was quoted as saying, "It feels good to get in the second round" after still needing one more win to advance. Even with the acquisition of veteran free agents Tyrone Lue and Juwan Howard , the Magic struggled early. After winning its first game, the Magic lost 19 consecutive games, setting a franchise record. They finished an NBA worst 21â€” Despite this, McGrady led the league in scoring with In the middle of the game losing streak, coach Doc Rivers was fired, and assistant Johnny Davis was promoted to head coach. In the off-season, Weisbrod completely dismantled the team. Though he kept Davis as coach, he shook up the player roster, only keeping a few players from last season. The most significant trade was Tracy McGrady. With the number one draft pick, the Magic selected high-school phenomenon and future All-Star and franchise cornerstone Dwight Howard , and a draft day trade with the Denver Nuggets got them point guard Jameer Nelson. Christie, because of his emotional ties to the Kings, at first refused to play for the Magic. Later on, Christie claimed he had bone spurs and was placed on the injured list after playing only a few games for the Magic. He then promoted Chris Jent to interim head coach. However, led by the erratic play of Francis, the Magic also lost to league teams with losing records. Howard showed great promise, becoming one of the few players to average a double-double. Howard was a consistent rebounder and scorer, becoming the first rookie to start and play all 82 games in a season. In addition, Nelson, after a slow start, developed into a talented player, taking over the starting point guard position. Hill also returned and averaged Howard was a unanimous selection. Jameer Nelson spent 10 seasons with Orlando from The Magic finished the season 36â€” The Magic ended a few games out of the playoffs. On July 28, , Vazquez stunned the team after announcing that he would remain in Spain to play for Akasvayu Girona , getting ridiculed by media after he was quoted that the decision to stay was made by his girlfriend. The transfer was supposed to be complete by the end of the year. Grant Hill was supposedly finally healed from his multiple ankle surgeries. Dwight Howard and Jameer Nelson showed excellent progress during summer-league play. Second round draft pick Travis Diener showed excellent shooting and decision making during the summer. And the free agent signing of Keyon Dooling showed that the club was going to continue making progress. Hill, despite his ankle apparently being healed, suffered a painful sports hernia injury that would hamper his play throughout the entire season. After playing in three preseason games, he underwent surgery to correct the hernia and would not appear during the regular season until mid-December, to which he lasted a month before attempting to make another comeback in February and early March, however he only played sporadically. Then a foot injury to Nelson forced him to sit out over a month. The streak included wins against NBA powerhouses Detroit, San Antonio, Dallas and Miami, as well as a game against the Philadelphia 76ers in which Howard recorded 28 points and a career-high 26 rebounds. Despite their efforts they did not make the playoffs. Even with the fan support to get him playing time he averaged just over 11 minutes a game. After beginning the season strong with a 13â€”4 record, the Orlando Magic began to suffer in the standings as the result of multiple losses, due in large part to the injuries of Tony Battie, Keyon Dooling, and Grant Hill. The final few weeks of the season saw the Magic build momentum and confidence with an impressive late push towards the Playoffs. On April 15, , with an 88â€”86 victory over the Boston Celtics , the Magic secured its first berth in the NBA Playoffs since by locking up the 8th seed in the Eastern Conference. This marked the first time that the team had made the playoffs while posting a losing record. Nevertheless, their Playoff run ended on April 28, after they were swept in the first round by first seeded Detroit Pistons whose experience, veteran leadership and ability to consistently make the clutch basket proved far too much for the undermanned and overwhelmed Magic to overcome. It was announced on May 23, , that Brian Hill had been fired as head coach of the Magic. On June 1, , the Magic signed Billy Donovan to be their head coach for five years. The next day, Donovan wished to be released from the contract and the Magic agreed several days later. Through the next few months, the Magic were not so successful, splitting their next 36 games with 18 wins and 18 losses. At the start of March, the Magic seemed to pick up speed again, finishing the month with 10 wins, the first time since November that they won 10 or more in a month. They also earned their 50th win of the season against the Chicago Bulls on April 13, which had not happened since the â€”96 season. The Magic finished the regular season 52â€”30, their best season since â€” With the 3rd seed in the Eastern Conference, they were matched up in their first round playoff series against the Toronto Raptors. The Magic had home court advantage for the first time since the â€”99 season. On April 28, , at Amway Arena , the Magic eliminated the Raptors with a 4â€”1 series victory in the first round. It was the first playoff series victory for the Magic in 12 years after 6 straight first round exits. The run of success did not last long as they fell 4â€”1 to the experienced Detroit Pistons in the second round. At the conclusion of the 3rd quarter, Chauncey Billups of the Pistons made a three-point shot giving the Pistons a three-point lead. However, the clock had stopped just as the play began. NBA rules prohibit officials from using instant replay or any timing device to determine how much time has elapsed when a clock malfunctions, nor is a replay allowed to be viewed from the time of the malfunction to when the play ends, when the game clock has not expired. Because of the rule, the officials then estimated that the play took 4. The NBA later admitted that the play actually took 5. The first half of the â€”09 season went very well for the Magic. After 41 games, the Magic were 33â€”8, leading the Southeast

Division, as well as having one of the top four records in the league. At the start of February, Jameer Nelson , their all-star starting point guard, went down with a shoulder injury. He was expected to miss the remainder of the season. After trading for Rafer Alston , the Magic finished the regular season with a 59â€™23 record, it was the most games the team had won in a season since the â€™96 season in which they had 60 wins. After dropping the first two games in the Finals against the Los Angeles Lakers , the Magic finally won their first ever game in the Finals in Game 3. They then made several free agent signings. They did the same for general manager Otis Smith , which would keep him in that position through the â€™12 season. Lewis tested positive for an elevated testosterone level that was caused by an over-the-counter supplement containing a substance banned by the league.

At least not in the near term. But the climb has already begun. Team CEO Alex Martins set them out fairly plainly with the simple directive to improve a few weeks ago. Sure, there is a universe where all this can happen. But it does not seem like anyone is betting on it. Orlando took things slowly after its win season, trying to clear up some of its cap room and look for bargains and areas where the team can get better. There were few major changes. The Aaron Gordon re-signing kept an important young player around, using cap room the Magic were probably not going to use elsewhere. Not for a little while at least. The path back to relevancy is still a long one for the Magic. The truth is there is not a lot of reason for optimism in the short-term. But they have limits to their game and the Magic have likely asked too much of them. The question the Magic face this year is really about just how much better Aaron Gordon can become after his breakout season. And then the question is how quickly Jonathan Isaac and Mohamed Bamba can develop. None of those three players are runaway superstars. Not surefire stars at least. So it makes sense that projections and predictions are not sold on the Magic. Kevin Pelton wrote the Magic have several intriguing young players but nothing has developed for sure yet. The team does not have any prospects for max cap space for another few years. It will likely be less than that when all is said and done. Orlando could have some money to throw around, but not enough to attract a really big fish. Not that the Magic are in a position to grab that kind of player. If Orlando has another disastrous season " or even semi-disastrous season " they can take advantage of another high draft pick. There is a way out " that is the important takeaway. Things seem relatively bleak at the moment, but it takes just one player taking that star turn or the right player coming along in the draft to change the outlook completely. Orlando is rightfully hopeful about what it can accomplish in the present. They are not going to pack away this season without giving the team a chance and giving things a try. Giving the team some roots to grow from. This season will help guide the team and nudge it in a direction. But it will take some time. That much is clear. Things could happen suddenly and the team could develop quicker than everyone expects.

Because 2, Except, this bonus is given to the second player, who is normally behind by half a turn mana-wise. Putting the second player ahead a turn just reverses the direction of that half-turn disadvantage. Now you have card advantage and mana advantage both in terms of having it available and having color fixing. So for example if player 2 goes turn 2 Steel Leaf Champion, player 1 is the one who gets to play the first 4-mana card. Others are temporary Dark Ritual or Seething Song. Ramp can be powerful. Say you play a combo deck and both pieces of your combo cost 4. With a Lotus Petal, both of those are out on turn 4 rather than turn 5. Think of playing red burn where the goal is to win as fast as possible. Those decks like going first because it gets them more mana to cast more spells, meaning that turn "reversal" may not matter. But this particular change introduces several different types of complexity in a way that is unhealthy for the game. In order for Magic to stay healthy it requires a constant influx of new players. Fortunately, Magic lends itself well to this sort of thing because almost all of the complexity is in card interactions, so players are naturally eased into the game as the pool of cards they encounter grows. This free Lotus Petal that you propose violates that. It drops a one use only mana source onto the board at the start of every game. He describes three types of complexity: The big problem is strategic complexity. For a new player with a simple deck, early strategy is simple. Do you play first or second? It probably depends on what kind of deck you are playing. That depends on what you have in your hand. But even that has pretty easy guidelines lands or mulligan, and because one of the mulligan choices is "do nothing" it can be left out of early games entirely without significantly harming the teaching experience. The same is not true of the Lotus Petal which would need to be included in from the very beginning.
