Since the Grimm Fairy Tales: First up, interior and cover artist Allan Otero. Allan, what Zenescope cover or interior have you done that you are most excited about? It has been a real pleasure to be a part of Zenescope. The variety of themes and characters are very entertaining to illustrate and read. Since my first assignment: All my gratitude for Zenescope. Which Zenescope character would you choose to cosplay and why? I really love the cape and the colors are badass and he is a wizard: Ula, describe your coloring process on a piece from start to finish? I start with cleaning up the scanned line art and digitally adjusting its contrast levels. Next I have the lines filled with solid blocks of colors called flats. I usually outsource this part to a professional called flatter. Then I start shading. When coloring digitally, I like going from darker base colors to lighter shading, which is quite the opposite to shading with traditional media like copics. When I start shading I use mostly large soft brush, then use smaller and hard one for the details. For the finishing touches I add a couple of additional layers above the actual colors on various blending modes for effects like lightening, darkening or saturating parts of the picture. Moy Rodriguez, can you describe the line art and inking process from start to finish, please? I start with some rough ideas and layouts to figure which camera shots and effects I want to add to the elements of the page. Once they are approved, I do a more comprehensible sketch of the final page with all the important elements recognizable characters, perspective, etc. In the final step, I ink the page digitally, fixing mistakes and creating atmospheres and effects with line variations and the illumination. How long does it take to color a complete story? It is in fact a very subjective question, and I think I should rather answer how long does it take me to color a complete page. The full 22 page issue classic could be done in about a week. Hedwin, what is the best piece of advice you could give to another colorist? The best advice would be, do not stop experimenting and risk in combining colors. Always study other colorists and artists of all styles, as well as comics, painting or 3D modelers. I think what I say is something that many do now, the detail for me is not to stop doing it and keep growing as artists. What type of characters do prefer to color and why? It attracts me and makes me want to color it. We have some great artists on the Zenescope team. What is your favorite part in the process of drawing a pinup? The layout is the most important part of the process, so I take a lot of time and have fun on this! Gregbo, who are some of your artistic influences? Some of my art influences are classic bombshell pinup artists such as Gil Elvgren and Vargas. My work is also influenced by animation art. If you could trade places with one person in the comic industry, who would it be? I really love my job. Adam Kelly, this is the first comic you have written. What was the biggest challenge you faced while writing this short story? Anyway, the biggest challenge was writing dialogue that sounds natural. What did you learn from this experience? We are fortunate to work with these and many other talented artists! For your next cosplay ideas, be sure to check out the Grimm Fairy Tales:

Grimm Fairy Tales explores a much darker side of the infamous fables you heard as a child as these classic tales are retold and re-imagined with a terrifying twist you'll simply love as an adult. Grimm Fairy Tales #

When we started publishing the comic book back in , we just hoped it would make it to issue six so we could collect it into a graphic novel. But at some point it took on a life of its own; we began to dream of all the possibilities and mediums it could be translated into. What about an animated anthology? We had some interest from different studios and producers but for one reason or another a deal never materialized. We never gave up hope of Grimm Fairy Tales becoming more than a comic book but it began to look like a real long shot. Then we met a very talented director named Jon Schnepf. Jon has directed a ton of great stuff like The Venture Bros. He got the material and had an incredible take on turning it into an animated series right from the start. Jon has done a ton of work with Titmouse and he knew they would get behind a project like this. All we needed was the money to produce it. Through this incredible site and with the help of our amazing fans we can make this series a reality. And best of all we can make it the way it should be made—bad ass and sexy. Anything beyond that goes to adding more episodes to the series. The more we get, the more you get. Kickstarter has been a great resource for creative minds to get the support they need to bring their dreams to life. With the crowd-source fundraising that Kickstarter offers, we can give you, not the big studios, the final say on this project, and reward you for your support. We also want to include you, the fan, in the process as much as possible. Bringing this project to life is going to be hard, and we want you to get to see behind the curtain. Zenescope Entertainment has grown to a top comic book publisher due to its continued success. In our Grimm universe, all of the characters, fairy tales, legends and fables are based in the modern world. These good and evil fairy tale characters are waging a war for the control of earth and mankind. The Man Jon Schnepf will be directing this project. He will be in charge of bringing the grimm, grit, and gore of popular comic book series alive in the animated series being funded here. The Muscle Titmouse Animation Studio! Jon Schnepf has worked with them before on many of his projects, and much of their work rounds out the Adult Swim animation block on Cartoon Network. Chris Hardwick is on board! Co-Creator of Metalocalypse and voice of Murderface and Dr. Rockso, Tommy Blacha, joins Grimm Animated! The funding will go towards making the pilot episode of the series, as well as additional behind the scenes footage from all of the companies involved. It will give fans a real sense of the work that goes into making an animated series, as well as a deeper look at each of the teams involved. Fans and newcomers alike will get to know the artists, writers and all the other minds behind this project. Making anything animated is expensive, and Titmouse hires all of its crew on every project. What they are putting up for this kickstarter is the laid-out, strong infrastructure of a full company with workstations all setup, animators, and a full tried and true crew to execute the animations. The money is all going into paying the crew. There will be some other costs as well, including paying the voice actors more news coming on that , and distributing the series itself. The more we get pledged, the more episodes we are going to make, hopefully reaching our goal of making the full feature. We hope this clarifies the costs. We also wanted to make sure we are giving you the opportunity to get into this series as much as possible, and that is why we have a wide range of rewards. The goal is, of course, to get this series created, and so we wanted to make sure to offer the series at a fair price. The pilot is the goal, and if the goal is met The Zenescope Kickstarter T-Shirt! Here is the definitive incentive for everyone!!! Here are all the Kickstarter exclusives that are available! From left to right, they are: Limited to J. A collection worth its weight! You now have the chance to be a part of that dream. We are ready to give you an epic animated adventure, and all we need is your support. Add this to your website or blog to help support this project:
