

1: Autumn and Fall Games and Printables

The fields were full of busy people getting ready for the harvest. But God is never too busy to look after his people. Solve the puzzles, crack the codes and discover some fascinating facts about Ruth.

Sylvia Rouss Shavuot is celebrated seven weeks after Passover, usually in late May or early June when the wheat harvest ripens. After the destruction of the Temple, this agricultural rite could no longer be observed. On Shavuot, synagogues are decorated with flowers and greenery. Many Jews spend the entire night after the evening service studying Torah. The story of Ruth is read the following morning because her story combines the acceptance of Jewish Law as was done by the Jews at Sinai with the wheat harvest. Ruth, who was the great grandmother of King David, converted to Judaism and met her husband, Boaz, during the wheat harvest. In Israel today, children celebrate this harvest by wearing floral wreaths and parading through their communities. The eating of dairy foods has become customary on Shavuot. One explanation for this tradition is that when Moses returned from Mount Sinai, the Jewish people did not have time to prepare a lavish meat meal to celebrate the occasion so they celebrated with dairy foods instead. Another reason often given is that, since Shavuot is a harvest holiday, grains made with milk should be eaten. A third reason is that the learning of Torah is like milk and honey, healthy and sweet. Freehof A new Torah was placed into the synagogue Ark. New Torah nodded just as the doors of the Ark began to open. The Rabbi reached in and gently picked up Tall Torah and took it out of the Ark. New Torah was happy for her friends. How lucky they were! A few days later all the Torahs were awakened early as the doors of the Ark were opened. The Rabbi will dress us in our holiday clothes. We will all wear beautiful covers. Each Torah was taken from the Ark and dressed in white velvet covers with gold braiding. New Torah wondered which one of her friends would be the lucky Torah for the Shavuot service. New Torah listened as the Shavuot service began. She could hear the sound of music through the doors of the Ark. She felt excited for her friends as she listened to the Rabbi open the doors of the Ark. Which one of them would be the lucky Torah? In this newest addition to the Sammy Spider picture books on holidays, young readers learn about Shavuot, the holiday where God gave the Torah to Moses. Shapiro prepares for Shavuot by making blintzes, Sammy and his mother watch from their web on the kitchen ceiling. Shapiro is preparing strawberry topping for the blintzes. The story ends with a concise explanation of the holiday. A step-by-step recipe for blintzes is included. But is it exactly what he was hoping for? Miss Sharon goes along with his request, and the children soon see the consequences of her decision. Michael is upset when a classmate takes a puzzle piece away from him and his plans to showcase his new dinosaur are thwarted because no one will listen during circle time. At recess, he never gets a turn on the tricycle, and at snack time, another student takes his crackers. We need to treat others the way we want to be treated.

Text Version Afrikaans One rainy night, Tim and his sister Jane were playing on the computer in the living room. Tim took his turn and wrecked his spaceship. When he tried to take another turn, Jane screamed out, "No, Tim! You made me wreck so I should go again! Life is never fair! The argument continued for a while, and then they both suddenly stopped, when the doorbell rang. Soon Lisa entered, followed by Brandon and Mike. They had all come to play a game with their friends. Tim went to his room with Mike and Brandon and played video games, while Jane and Lisa went to her room and played with their dolls. Soon Mary arrived at the door. She joined in with the girls. The boys quickly got tired of playing the game and decided to plot a prank. They got their water guns and shields. All the girls ran outside, with the boys chasing close behind. That is, until the guns ran out of water. By that time, though, Mary and Lisa had made some water balloons, and there was an all out war going on! Eventually, they all depleted their supplies of ammunition, and the water war was over. Soaked and tired, all the kids returned to the house, and began drying off, and exclaimed about how much fun it was. They all agreed that being kind and fair is what counts in playing together. After a few weeks of Tim never playing fair and always complaining, nobody wanted to be with him. When the rest of them went out to play, they stopped inviting Tim along. They all agreed that if he learned to be nice and play fair, he could join. Then one day Mike asked them, "Is that really being kind? When Tim saw how kind they were being to him, even after all the trouble he gave them, he began to change his attitude toward his friends. Pretty soon, there was less anger and more laughter from all of them. After that, she and her two sons continued to live in the land of Moab, through which they had been traveling. They all lived together in Moab for ten years. Eventually, both men died, leaving Naomi, Ruth, and Orpah as widows. Naomi then decided to go back to her own country, which she heard was being blessed with lots of food. Naomi took Ruth and Orpah with her. On the way, she told both Ruth and Orpah to go back to their own homes. Ruth and Orpah both said, "We will go with you. Do I have more sons that you can marry? I am old, and cannot remarry, but you are young, so go! She kissed her mother-in-law and left weeping, but Ruth still refused to leave. Naomi then said to Ruth, "Your sister-in-law has gone back to her home. Will you not do the same? Wherever you go, I will follow, and where you stay, I will stay, and your people will be my people, and your God will be my God. May God let us be together until we both die. When they arrived in Bethlehem, Naomi and Ruth stayed in the city only a while before they headed back towards Moab. On the way back, they stayed just outside the city near the home of a man named Boaz. Boaz was a kind man. When he saw Ruth gleaning one evening, he told his reapers, "When you reap the good grain, let some of it fall to the ground for the poor to glean. Does she have a husband? After all, I am a stranger to you. Therefore may the Lord bless you and give you a great reward. Then Boaz surprised her by inviting her to his home for a meal. She stayed for the meal. Then afterwards, she left and gleaned more in the fields, as Boaz had commanded her to do. She continued to glean until evening, and then processed it, and took it home. When Naomi saw the great amount of grain, she exclaimed, "Where have you been gleaning today? Ruth excitedly continued telling the story of the day. He told me not to go get water, for it would be provided by his servants! Boaz invited me to lunch! He gave me everything I needed. Do you think what Tim was doing was right? Should Tim be included? What do you think Jesus would do? Would you do this? What would you do the same? Is life always fair? What should you do about it? Would you want to be with Tim? Why or Why not? In what ways did Ruth show her kindness? Can you show kindness to people you know in similar ways? To whom did Boaz show kindness? In what ways did Boaz show kindness? Please help us to remember to always be kind and loving toward them. Ruth, chapters 1 and 2.

Elimelech, his wife Naomi and their two sons moved there because there was more food there than where they used to live. Her sons got married but after about ten years they died too. At least Naomi still had her sons wives to keep her company, their names were Orpah and Ruth. Naomi called her sons wives and told them, "I am going to go back to where I used to live and I would like you also to go back to your family where you used to live. May God show you kindness as you have showed me. So Orpah left to go back to her family. But no matter what Naomi said to Ruth, Ruth would not leave. Where you go I will go, and where you stay I will stay. Your friends will be my friends and your God will be my God. Notice that Ruth never complains but is a good friend to Naomi. When they got there Ruth decided that she should do some kind of work. It was harvest time, so she worked in the fields following behind the harvesters and picked up any barley that they had dropped. The owner of the field came by to greet the harvesters and noticed Ruth in the field. He asked one of the harvesters who she was. I will make sure you are safe and whenever you are thirsty go and get a drink from the water jars. May the Lord reward you for your kindness. Boaz even ordered his workers to drop extra barley so Ruth could have more for herself. Ruth took all the barley home and shared what she had with Naomi. And eventually Ruth married Boaz and everyone was very happy! God gives us friends when we need them, and we should treat them like a gift from God. And Ruth had such a good attitude and wanted to help, she moved away from everyone she knew and went to work to help Naomi.
