Health Protocols for Newborn Calves Posted: March 23rd, Share this: Calving season is here for many producers, and right around the corner for others. Now is the time to begin thinking about health protocols for newborn calves. Healthy calves start with healthy cows. Colostrum production begins as early as weeks prior to calving, so you want to make sure that the cow is ready. Once the calf is born it is important that they receive colostrum within the first 24 hours. However, for maximum immunity, receiving colostrum within six hours is best. Vita Charge will give the calf a boost of B-vitamins to encourage intake. In addition to vitamins, minerals and Amaferm, the Vita Charge Stress Tub contains MOS that can greatly help with scours issues and promote overall health. It is best to contact your local veterinarian about vaccinations. Depending on your part of the country, recommended vaccinations can vary greatly. Your veterinarian will be able to give you the best advice.
