Floyd calls the "full value of the property destroyed by the troops. From this new sum total the amounts already paid to the Fishers were deducted, and then the cheerful remainder a fraction under forty thousand dollars was handed to them, and again they retired to Florida in a condition of temporary tranquillity. Does the reader suppose that that was the end of it? Does he suppose those diffident Fishers were satisfied? Let the evidence show. The Fishers were quiet just two years. Then they came swarming up out of the fertile swamps of Florida with their same old documents, and besieged Congress once more. Congress capitulated on the first of June, , and instructed Mr. Floyd to overhaul those papers again, and pay that bill. A Treasury clerk was ordered to go through those papers and report to Mr. Floyd what amount was still due the emaciated Fishers. That part of the brief never got before Congress, nor has Congress ever yet had a hint of a forgery existing among the Fisher papers. Having accomplished this, what does Mr. Floyd "with an earnest desire to execute truly the legislative will," as he piously remarks goes to work and makes out an entirely new bill of Fisher damages, and in this new bill he placidly ignores the Indians altogether -- puts no particle of the destruction of the Fisher property upon them, but, even repenting him of charging them with burning the cabins and drinking the whiskey and breaking the crockery, lays the entire damage at the door of the imbecile United States troops, down to the very last item! The United States in account with the legal representatives of George Fisher, deceased. He does not even allow that the Indians destroyed the crockery or drank the four dozen bottles of currant wine. When it came to supernatural comprehensiveness in "gobbling," John B. Floyd was with out his equal, in his own or any other generation. Floyd announced that the Government was still indebted to them in the sum of sixty-six thousand five hundred and nineteen dollars and eighty-five cents, "which," Mr. Floyd complacently remarks, "will be paid, accordingly, to the administrator of the estate of George Fisher, deceased, or to his attorney in fact. The first thing Congress did in was to rescind the resolution of June 1, , under which Mr. Floyd had been ciphering. Then Floyd and doubtless the heirs of George Fisher likewise had to give up financial business for a while and go into the Confederate army and serve their country. Were the heirs of George Fisher killed? They are back now at this very time July, , beseeching Congress, through that blushing and diffident creature, Garrett Davis, to commence making payments again on their interminable and insatiable bill of damages for corn and whiskey destroyed by a gang of irresponsible Indians, so long ago that even Government red-tape has failed to keep consistent and intelligent track of it. Davis will be getting ready to resurrect it once more, and alter his customary speech on finance, war, and other matters so that it will fit it. Now, the above are facts. Congress, 2d Session, and satisfy himself. The whole case is set forth in the first volume of the Court of Claims Reports. It is my belief that as long as the continent of America holds together, the heirs of George Fisher, deceased, will still make pilgrimages to Washington from the swamps of Florida, to plead for just a little more cash on their bill of damages even when they received the last of that sixty-seven thousand dollars, they said it was only one-fourth what the Government owed them on that infernal cornfield ; and as long as they choose to come, they will find Garrett Davises to drag their vampire schemes before Congress. This is not the only hereditary fraud if fraud it is -- which I have before repeatedly remarked is not proven that is being quietly handed down from generation to generation of fathers and sons, through the persecuted Treasury of the United States.

George was the son of William and Mary Fischer, who immigrated from Germany he married Frances A Lanham and together they had 10 children. George was one of the earliest settlers in Kanawha County the story goes as follows from incerps from the book Sissonville a Time to Remember Six Fisher Brothers Early in the.

For the benefit of the many Horine researchers that have accessed this page, I will summarize these three lines with the hope of distinguishing the line you may be associated with. These are listed in chronological order of immigration. Johann Tobias Horine This is my line, and the line that is the principle subject of this page. Johann Tobias Horine arrived at the port of Philadelphia on November 17th, , on the ship "Dragon". They lived for a time in Frederick County, Maryland. Michael Horine was married ca. Between and , Michael and his family moved to Franklin County and St. Genevieve County now Washington County , Missouri. Jacob Horine , a Revolutionary War soldier from Pennsylvania. Jacob served in the military Continental Army. He had two enlistments: In , They migrated west to Mercer County, Kentucky. In the nineteenth century descendants of Jacob Horine, one of whom was Emmett F. George Horine , may have been a Revolutionary War soldier, and may have been a physician. He moved to Jefferson County, Kentucky ca. He married Nancy Higgins Mercer Co. Nancy was born in Virginia and died in Kentucky. His family settled in Hagerstown, Maryland where he and his wife raised a large family. A fourth son, Henry stayed in Maryland. While this page is primarily devoted to the descendants of Johann Tobias Horine, I would welcome the family histories of these other Horine lines. To that end, please consider sending me your histories, preferably in electronic form on disk or as an e-mail attachment. I could then format them for Web publication, and link them to this page wherever appropriate. This German family immigrated very early , and for the next century lived the pioneer life in Western Maryland and Ohio. My Grandfather Harrison Leonard Horine b. He married Mary Mabel Miller b. Their only child, my mother, Rosella Lee Horine was born on February 3, George was also active in the United Brethren Church leadership and for a period of time entered the mercantile business with two of his sons. Samuel Solomon Horine described this journey from Maryland to Ohio in a letter to his cousin Mrs. A few short weeks came and went. The [Middletown] valley with its somber sheen could not be seen. Myersville [Maryland], a nice little village in the back ground of our home, the rocks and hills meadows and mountain strems by faith only could be seen. The few short weeks are over. Two fine horses, one a bay, the other a gray, was hitched to a new two horse wagon, in it was put some beding, some house fixtures, some provisions to last a few meals. This was a beautiful September morning eighteen hundred and thirty six Germantown, Montgomery County Ohio was our destination. Reuben Dutro lived near her[e]. He purchased land there for at the time of King George for 3 cents an acre and raised a large family. Johann Horine settled near Beallsville, now Harmony one mile east of Myersville, and about three miles north of Middletown , about the year [sic]. He found an open grass plot which he cut and dried, and built a stack of hay or mound of it, with a little house or den under it, where he, his wife and little child crept to spend the night. The valley was then full of Indians and some of them found the stack of hay and danced their War Dance around it that night. He and his wife were terribly frightened for they feared that the little child might cry or make a noise that would betray them to the hostile reds. But the hay house proved a complete deception to the Indians who never suspected that there were white people beneath it. The next morning they returned to the colony at Frederick and returned later and established a permanent home. During the [French and] Indian War he was compelled to leave his home and take refuge in Frederick. He conducted a distillery for a good many years and one of the old buildings still stands. In another Horine manuscript is found the following: In his Will in he [Johann] directs that his daughters shall go to a German School and the sons to English schools. He also directs to be buried in the old Jerusalem Cemetery known by county records as the Dutch Presbyterian Church. They were quite successful financially, business tact, refined and intelligent fine type of American people, with the exception that they were confirmed infidels. He appointed his sons to be executors, also being young and under age he names his close and business friend, Michael Trotman, who was the representative of Phillip Rodenpeller who gave ten acres of land in called the Dutch Presbyterian Church. Michael was to represent the Evangelical Lutheran Church. The Horines came to the colonies of the New World from Germany. Family lore holds that the name Horine means high over the Rhine, a reference perhaps to the geographical location of the Horine homestead. The earliest known ancestors are Jerg Georg Horein ca. The line of Horines spelled variously Hohrein, Hohrain, Hoherrain, Horein, or Horein is recorded in parish records over the Wurttemberg province. Most were peasants of the land. The Horine and other German background families of the Brethren Church were loving, close knit families. Joseph Newton and Mary Ellen Horine had 6 children. Their progeny are many, and the descendants now are appreciative of the fine pioneering heritage they left to us. Additional Horine family resources.

The heirs to the Fisher fortune have carried on the tradition, each with their own style of giving. The Gap turned a jeans store into a cultural institution, but the couple behind the clothing empire also gave away millions.

Their marriage was cited on pp. During my research, I met fellow genealogist Vanessa Stern. The more we talked, and compared notes, two distinct Philips began to emerge. The following information supports our conclusion: Her son Abraham served as the Administrator of her estate. The Administration Account makes mentions of other Fisher family members; i. All of these children are identified in the will of Philip Lauer. Six of these nine children are listed incorrectly in Fisher-Stombaugh Families. These children are identified by baptism records St. During our research, we also discovered another, and possibly more important, discrepancy in Fisher-Stombaugh Families. Based primarily on transcribed church records, we believe that some of the children attributed to George and Anna Maria Fisher do not belong to the couple. Evidence suggests there was an older son, named George Jr. This also provides an explanation as to why these children were not listed in the will of George Fisher Sr. The following evidence supports this conclusion: His wife, therefore, was definitely not the mother of George and Joseph Margaretha, appear on the Jul Communicant List. They are listed separate and distinct from George Fischer and his wife, An. That places George Jr. It also places a Mary between Leonard and Anna Maria Mary is possibly the same person as the Anna Maria that is shown as dying in infancy. Evidence of Mary will be presented below. Carroll County Cemeteries, Vol. Sons John, George Jr. It is also possible, maybe even probable, that George Jr. It contains the signatures of George Sr. Leonard, John and George Jr. The only sons named George, according to the book, were born in and This supports the conclusion that there was an older George Jr. As mentioned above, there is also evidence of an older Mary Fisher. She may be the Anna Maria who was documented as having died in infancy. There are two distinct Fisher daughters listed in the Communicant Lists from to The list has them as An. Fisherin and Anna Fisherin. These are the only areas we reviewed. Many historical records have been located and documented since Fisher-Stombaugh Families was published in Based on our experience, we recommend that anyone claiming descent from George Fisher, and using Fisher-Stombaugh Families as their primarily source of information, verify their facts with additional sources.

It is the fourth most common surname in Germany and there are roughly , in Germany with that surname with most bearers of the name, interestingly, living inland. It is also the 15th most common in Austria and is a Jewish surname as well. By contrast, the UK Fisher numbers of 56, rank it there at th. The Fisher surname might suggest a place along the coast. But the early Fishers seem to have come from inland locations where they were perhaps river fishermen instead. His family established themselves as clergymen in Cossington village. Geoffrey Fisher of this family became the 99th Archbishop of Canterbury in Packington Hall, which still stands, has the following inscription on its lead roof: John Fisher, the Catholic bishop who was executed for treason in , was born in Beverley in the East Ridings of Yorkshire. By the late 19th century, the largest number of Fishers was being recorded in Yorkshire. A number had migrated there. The Fisher name also came north to Scotland and was to be found primarily in Glasgow and Ayrshire. Its most famous son was probably Andrew Fisher, born into a coal mining village near Kilmarnock. He emigrated with his brother to Australia in and rose to become Prime Minister of that country on three separate occasions, starting in Dublin was also the home of Quaker Fishers from Cheshire, many of whom moved onto a safer refuge in Pennsylvania, and of Jonathan Fisher, the landscape painter. Their home was burnt down by insurgents during the rebellion. Richard Fisher was recorded as a saddler in the Dunlavin directory. German Fischers outnumber English Fishers by about five to one in their home country. Consequently, during the wave of immigration to America that occurred over the 18th and 19th centuries, more Fischers came than Fishers. However, once in America most Fischers would anglicize their names to Fisher. The census showed more Fishers than Fischers by almost five to one. John Dix Fisher who founded the Perkins Institution for the Blind in Boston in the early 19th century was a descendant. There were early Irish Fishers who came too. Deacon Samuel Fisher came to New England aboard a "starved ship" around He went to New Hampshire. Abel Fisher arrived ten years or so later, settling first in New Jersey and then heading west to the Pennsylvania frontier. The first were probably English Quakers. But Joshua Fisher the merchant was the most prominent of these Quakers. He wrote in And it would appear that his family originally came from Yorkshire near Wakefield , not Lancashire. She married into the Wharton Quaker family and it was their son Joseph who founded the Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania. Not getting any land tenure rights where they settled in New York, they moved in with fifteen other German families to Pennsylvania and settled in Tulpehocken valley in Berks county. Some branches of the family later migrated to Virginia and Kentucky. Meanwhile Christian Fisher came to the new Amish settlement in Berks county in Many Fishers later moved south into North Carolina. The farmhouse which Henry Fisher built in Berks county in still stands today and proclaims itself as "Pennsylvania Deutsch. James Fisher, the first settler in Chase county, Kansas, was murdered there in David Fisher left Pennsylvania with his family in and headed west, to Ohio, Indiana and then Iowa. Descendants have spread over the American West. Other Fisher lines began in Virginia and led into Kentucky and Tennessee. Early Fisher arrivals were Empire Loyalists, although none of those below were of British origin: Lewis Fisher was probably of German origin. He moved his family north from Pennsylvania in to new lands in York county, Ontario. Some descendants later moved west to Saskatchewan. There were also Fishers from Britain. Fred Fisher was a murky figure in the early history of the New South Wales colony. A London shopkeeper, he had been convicted in for the possession of forged banknotes and transported to Australia. Move the clock forward a few years and he was surprisingly in funds, leading a venture in Sydney to build a new papermaking mill. Then in he was murdered. Four months later a local farmer stumbled into a local hotel in a state of shock, claiming that he had seen the ghost of Fred Foster. The ghost had been sitting on the rail of a bridge and had pointed to a paddock down the creek. And at the same time humbly requests us to notify not only his honesty and integrity, but faithfully to attest that henceforth he owes no allegiance to his Excellency, the Count, as we should find by investigation, and as we would consider it our duty to bear witness to the truth and further the welfare of each and everyone. To this seemly request to William Fisher we had to accede the more readily the better we have assured ourselves by authenticated reports that William Fisher has heretofore conducted himself to his Excellency, the Count, his counselors, officials, and toward each and everyone, that we can give to all good testimony in his behalf. Below Furnace Lane, or east of it, and on the south side of the main highway, extending east as far as the Cacoosing Creek, is a tract of land settled and owned by the Fisher family. The family homestead was established on the present John Bowman farm along the pike, east of the borough line of Wernersville, by a William Fisher, who we conclude, from reading the will of Georg Hain, was the father of the William Fisher who married a daughter of George Hain the ancestor. We call attention to two homesteads belonging now or in the past to descendants of these Fishers. John Fisher, a grandson of the ancestor William, married Rosina Hain. His homestead was the farm still owned by one of his descendants, Samuel Fisher. Here at an early day, about , John Fisher established a paper mill, later turned into a woollen sic mill. All of these represent names found in the early baptismal records of the congregation, which have been worked out with much patience and labor for publication in this book. The homestead farmed by Fred G Hain a short distance north of the church was for some years a Fisher home. We call attention to it as having been the boyhood home of Rev Peter S Fisher, a man of much influence in the life of the Reformed Church in Pennsylvania. It was an early Hain property, and later came into the possession of William Fisher and his wife. They built on this property in the large stone barn still standing in excellent condition. The writer of this recalls very distinctly the first political meeting and torchlight parade in the Garfield campaign, where General Fisher and ex-Governor Hartranft spoke from the same platform.
