However, as you have probably noticed, Hindi is a nuanced language! So there are also other basic Hindi verb types that can modify the inflection or the very meaning of a verb! Identifying and distinguishing between these verb types is a cornerstone of mastering basic Hindi. Ready for the challenge? In this section, we will define these verb types in greater detail and provide examples of each through basic Hindi sentences. Verb transitivity is a classic and age old linguistic concept, but it is also a simple concept to understand. An intransitive verb has no direct object. In other words, there is no person or thing in the sentence that is the recipient of the action of the verb. Because one cannot exist a person or exist a thing, the above verb "astitva honaa" is an intransitive verb. In contrast, a transitive verb has one or more direct objects. So, there is a person or thing in the sentence that receives the action of the verb. Because one can eat a thing, hopefully one cannot eat a person! Understanding transitivity is pivotal to basic Hindi, so it is helpful to practice identifying the transitivity of other Hindi verbs. Standard Hindi sentence structure differs from that of English! While in English the verb follows the subject and precedes its direct object, in Hindi, verbs are placed at the end of the sentence and auxiliary verbs are placed very last in the sentence. This compound consists of a primary verb and an auxiliary helping verb that work together as a single verb. The compound verb has a subtle, altered meaning from its constituent verbs. The auxiliary verb typically adds specificity to the verb by describing the manner in which the primary verb is performed, to add depth and flair to basic Hindi sentences. A conjunct verb is formed by joining either a noun or an adjective with a verb. When it is a noun joining with the verb, this is known as a nominal conjunct. When it is an adjective joining with the verb, this is known as an adjectival conjunct. As with compound verbs, conjunct verbs function as a single verb. You can think of imperative verbs as the bossy verbs! For this reason, it is wise to use discretion when employing imperative verbs in basic Hindi conversations, particularly when with strangers, so as not to give the impression of haughtiness or anger in our speaking tone. One can also use imperative verbs simply to offer permission or to extend an invitation. Imperative verb conjugation depends upon which form of "you" is used in the sentence. Finally, when the very informal tu is used, we simply use the verb root on its own. Notice that the subject "You" is implied but not literally stated in the sentence. This is typical in imperative constructions. Similarly, the word "Please" is implied by the "aap" form, but there is no need to literally state it. In basic Hindi causal verb constructions, the subject causes, makes, or otherwise enables another person or thing to do something. Causal verbs are classified as transitive verbs. I had him explain. What in the world is a polysemantic verb, you may be asking! Therefore, a polysemantic verb is one which can have multiple meanings. It can also be used to express feelings, such as hunger. In Hindi proverbs and Hindi idioms, you will see more complex examples of literal expressions with underlying figurative meanings.
