History of Black Magic. Black magic- one of the strongest and powerful spiritual forces of the universe has become one of the most reliable and assuring source of solution to the people all over the world. Gone are the days when people would shrink away at the mention of the dark arts.

Take the First Step! What is Black Magic? We live in a world of duality where Light and Darkness are two sides of the same coin. Black magic is the negative use of energies and power by evil-minded humans. People who practice black magic or take the help of professional black magicians are extremely dedicated people who have one goal in their minds; to harm or deprive others of living peaceful lives: All humans have their two sides; divine as well as evil, all humans have different ratios of evil and divine within them, on the other hands there are some humans who have turned Sun is the light provider to our planet but at any given time half of the Earth remains in darkness while the other half gets the light of the Sun. We humans have been given the choice to dwell in darkness or move towards the light. Black Magic is used to harm or hurt another human, by performing certain rituals, making human or animal sacrifices to appease and control the spirits. Once the black magician has acquired the necessary control over the spirit world, they acquire the power to inflict harm on their victims sitting thousands of miles away as time and space do not exist in the spirit world. This problem has intensified a lot in the last few years, and many are suffering all over the world, totally unaware of the attacks made by no other than their siblings, closest friends, acquaintances and relatives using the help of the black magicians or the spirit world. Every day many prosperous and happy families are being ruined by Black magic. No matter how religious or spiritual you are, black magic can ruin your life in no time. If Prophet Mohamed can be affected by black magic, do you think you are greater than the prophet and can never be affected? If Bhai Mardana who was the disciple of Guru Nanak 1st Guru of Sikhs can be victimized using black magic, it will be foolish to not believe in the existence of Spirit world and black magic. All religions talk about the existence of the devil or "Shaitaan" and the existence of the spirit world that is hosted by demons, witches, evil spirits and "Jinns". Spirit world has always existed and will always exist. Black magic is an ancient science to access the spirit world and use the dark powers to inflict harm on individuals like you and me. It is the time that you open your eyes to this hard truth. If you feel that you have been victimized, take necessary precaution to overcome spirit world issues. If your issues are serious and call for professional help you must seek professional help before it is too late.

2: Magic of the Ancients: Five Incredible Texts of Spells, Curses, and Incantations | Ancient Origins

The history of this distinction p. In Egypt, in India and in Greece, there was no dealing with devils in the Christian sense of the expression; Typhon, Juggernaut and Hecate were not less divine than the gods of the over-world, and the offices of Canidia were probably in their way as sacred as the peaceful mysteries of Ceres. Each of the occult sciences was, however, liable to that species of abuse which is technically but fantastically known as Black Magic. Astrology, or the appreciation of the celestial influences in their operation upon the nature and life of man, could be perverted in the composition of malefic talismans by means of those influences. The transmutation of metals by Alchemy resulted in their sophistication. In like manner, Divination, or the processes by which lucidity was supposed to be induced, became debased into various forms of witchcraft and Ceremonial Magic into dealing with devils. White Ceremonial Magic is, by the terms of its definition, an attempt to communicate with Good Spirits for a good, or at least an innocent, purpose. Black Magic is the attempt to communicate with Evil Spirits for an evil, or for any, purpose. The contrasts here established seem on the surface perfectly p. When we come, however, to compare the ceremonial literature of the two classes, we shall find that the distinction is by no means so sharp as might be inferred from the definitions. In the first place, so-called Theurgic Ceremonial, under the pretence of White Magic, usually includes the Rites for the invocation of Evil Spirits. Supposing that they are so invoked for the enforced performance of works contrary to their nature, the issue becomes complicated at once, and White Magic must then be defined as the attempt to communicate with Good or Evil Spirits for a good, or at least for an innocent, purpose. This, of course, still leaves a tolerably clear distinction, though not one that I should admit, if I admitted the practical side of the entire subject to anything but unconditional condemnation. Yet the alternative between a good and an innocent object contains all the material for a further confusion. It will be made clear as I proceed that the purposes and ambitions of Magic are commonly very childish, so that we must distinguish really between Black and White Magic, not as between the essentially good and evil, but as between that which is certainly evil and that which may only be foolish. Nor does this exhaust the difficulty. As will also be made evident in proceeding, White Ceremonial Magic seems to admit of a number of intentions which are objectionable, as well as many that are frivolous. Hence it must be inferred that there is no very sharp distinction between the two branches of the Art. It cannot be said, even, that Black Magic is invariably and White Magic occasionally evil. What is called Black Magic is by no means diabolical invariably; it is almost as much concerned with preposterous and stupid processes as the White variety with those of an accursed kind. Thus, the most which can be stated is that the literature falls chiefly into two classes, one of p. In what perhaps it may be permissible to call the mind of Magic, as distinct from the effects which are proposed by the Rituals, there has been always a tolerable contrast between the two branches corresponding to Magus and Sorcerer, and the fact that the ceremonial literature tends to the confusion of the distinction may perhaps only stamp it as garbled. But this is not to say that it has been tampered with in the sense of having been perverted by editors. They are, for the most part, naturally composite, and it would be impossible to separate their elements without modifying their structure. Modern occultism has taken up the clear distinction and developed it Appealing to the secret traditional knowledge behind the written word of Magic--to that unmanifested science which it believes to exist behind all science--and to the religion behind all religion, as if the two were related or identical, it affirms that the advanced occult life has been entered by two classes of adepts, who have been sometimes fantastically distinguished as the Brothers of the Right and the Brothers of the Left, transcendental good and transcendental evil being specified as their respective ends, and in each case they are something altogether different from what is understood conventionally by either White or Black Magic. As might be expected, the literature of the subject does not bear out this development, but, by the terms of the proposition, this is scarcely to be regarded as an objection. For the rest, if many rumours and a few questionable revelations must lead us to concede, within certain limits, that there may have been some recrudescence of diabolism in more than one country of Europe, p. Parisian Diabolism, for example, in so far as it may be admitted to exist, is the Black Magic of the Grimoire and not the sovereign horror of the Brothers of the Left Hand Path, wearing their iniquity like an aureole, and deathless in spiritual evil. Between Rosicrucian initiates of astral processes and the amatores diaboli there is indubitably the bond of union which arises from one fact: It stands now substantially as it then stood; the extensions are in the preface and in the introductory part.

The History of Black magic shows that Over time, the use of dark magic became abhorred in society, seen as the work of the devil. But not all people used dark magic to hurt others. Some simply used it to change something that was dark in their lives.

Chinese Sorcery and Black Magic in China Black magic has been prevalent and has been used vividly among mankind since the dawn of history. Various regions have resorted to varied practices and observances while making or practicing black magic or the so called weird and dark world of magic. Though there are several doubts in the minds of many regarding the significance and genuineness of these practices, still majority do resort to the same when one finds the path ahead bleak and dark. Chinese Sorcery and Black Magic in China So, all you readers who have anxiously read the above paragraphs and by now have become quite bored in not exactly understanding where we are heading to, let me explain better. In this edition we would deal with few basic but much prevalent practices of black magic in China. Though, the term black magic is used so generically, that its actual meaning has been lost somewhere in this entire midst. It has been seen in several cases that the practices of such black magic has several disastrous effects causing the victim to become insane in some cases causes the death of the individual. Wizardry has been found to be of various types consisting of the five elements namely, fire, water, earth, air and wind. Spirits of the deceased souls are summoned by the individuals who practice witchcraft, wizardry or black magic. The spells which are enchanted by these witchcraft practicing individuals are strong enough to summon spirits, and to bring in both mental as well as physical changes in the life of an individual as well as in the energies of nature present surrounding us. The prime motive for which these back magic spells are used is to enhance those powerful powers of nature and to get that work done which probably would not be possible or would have taken a longer time when gone through the normal methods. Let me help you with one such quite weird practice of black magic which is not much prevalent in China as few know about the same, but has given excellent effects for all those who have practiced it in the right sense. To make this simpler, I would start with what exactly this process is all about. The prime intention for one to perform this magic is to get that thing in life which one has been longing for desperately, but unfortunately one had been unsuccessful in attaining the same. There are few things which you require and above all you need to have a proper framework of mind for performing this as it is more of a kind of ritual then just a practice which one needs to do. To start with, take hold of a vessel which is made of some earthen elements preferably clay, best of dark black in color. Next you need to get hold of something which is directly related to the thing which you long for. If it is a person or living being, then you need to get some things of them like for example if it is a girl whom you love, then get hold of her hair strand, a handkerchief which she has used, etc. Next choose any full moon night and start with the rituals by getting hold of a white mouse. Keep this mouse directly under the rays of the full moon for 3 such full moon nights. Fill the earthen vessel with water such that when you throw the mouse in, it should not be able to escape from it. Once you have the said quantity of water in the vessel, you would need to hold the mouse by the tail and drop it in the earthen vessel. Hold a lighted candle and let the light of the candle fall on the mouse when it fights for its life in desperation. Then start chanting these below said lines looking directly in the eyes of the mouse you need to this this without blinking your eyes. Say these lines with utter concentration for 7 nights and you would see the powers of magic bringing impossible things happen. Many who have followed the process properly have been able to get good benefits from the same but have never shared it with others fearing that the portion of secret would get spread but I have opened the same in front of you readers. Try it and see how this can brings a change in your depressed life.

Harut and Marut mentioned in the Quran in Surah Al-Baqarah were two angels who are known to be behind bringing black magic to this world. Quran clarifies the misunderstanding related to their role. Satan wanted to deprive him of this power. One day, as it was his practice, before going to answer the call of nature, Sulaiman alaihis salam gave his ring to a woman called Al-Jaradah. Satan took advantage of this opportunity, came in the form of Sulaiman, and took the ring from her and put the ring on. As Allah had decreed to bless the holder of the ring to have many powers, all mankind, the jinn and devils submitted to Satan. Later, when Sulaiman came seeking his ring from the woman, she accused him of being an imposter. Prophet Sulaiman endured this with patience as he knew that this was a test from Allah the Almighty. It was at this time that they wrote books of black magic and buried them underneath the throne of Prophet Sulaiman alaihis salam. Black magic and fortune telling came to the earth through these devils who after having the new powers would eavesdrop on the descending angels about matters decreed in the Heavens. The devils would then come down to inspire the soothsayers with it, and the latter would add to it many lies of their own. People would then believe them and regard them as trustworthy. The people started writing down these matters and the word spread among the Children of Israel that the Jinn knew the unseen. Click here to download the book: The miracles of the prophet Later, when Allah restored to Prophet Sulaiman alaihis salam his kingdom, and all those who had strayed away came to follow the straight path once again, Allah the Almighty informed Sulaiman alaihis salam about the magic that had become commonplace among his people. This then drove Sulaiman to quickly seize and gather all these writings and put them in a chest and bury them under his throne. All the devils who tried to even approach the chest were burned alive. Prophet Sulaiman took an even harder stance declaring that he would behead anyone who claimed that the devils knew the unseen. He knew the Greatest Name of Allah and used to write what he was ordered to by Sulaiman and then bury it underneath the throne. To provide credibility to his word he also offered to be killed if he was not correct in his claims. After the people dug out all the writings, the devil told them that it was these writings that had given Prophet Sulaiman power over mankind, the Jinn and the birds. The devils altered these books by adding magical and blasphemous writings. The devils wrote about different types of sorcery meant to fulfill different desires. For example, the devils wrote about how people could get some wishes fulfilled by standing facing the sun and saying some words, and how they could get other wishes fulfilled by standing with their back to the sun and repeating some other words. It was rumored and circulated that Sulaiman had been a sorcerer. Satan established himself as an orator and said: Sulaiman was not a prophet; he was only a sorcerer! Go and seek his sorcery in his dwellings and luggage. Sulaiman was a sorcerer who subjected us through his magic. They would ask Prophet Muhammad S. They followed what the Shayatin devils gave out falsely of the magic in the lifetime of Sulaiman Solomon. And they learn that which harms them and profits them not. And indeed they knew that the buyers of it magic would have no share in the Hereafter. And how bad indeed was that for which they sold their own selves, if they but knew. S informed the Jews of this narration and they left defeated and humiliated. Allah the Almighty says: One of them comes and says: The lesson from the story is that magic is for real and Allah has provided Satan certain powers to harm mankind, especially those who believe in Allah and His message of truth. We should, therefore, be regular in reciting those Azkar to avoid getting in the traps of Satan all satanic activities.

The Grand Old Library of Alexandria was one big facility that was the largest source of literary information and scholarly works during the middle Egyptian era. A detailed study of ancient Egyptian religious literature provides us tons and loads of useful information on the topic of witchcraft and divine powers. Magic, sorceries and spells also formed an inalienable part of ancient Egyptian society. Firm belief in magical spells, recitations and various other occult procedures made people to produce supernatural results and heavenly effects. The Belief in the Power of Magic An average Egyptian always believed in the power of magic to solve many of the most common problems relating to health, love, marriage, children, ghosts and evil spirits. The mysterious way and intensive care with which experts performed innumerable magic and occult ceremonies were amazing! As early as in the first phase of great Egyptian kingdoms, the art of practicing magic and spells was common among the royalty and ordinary citizens. There was a general belief that the earth has a very close relation with the ugly underworld, the sky and air with a countless numbers of visible and invisible beings, all of them either friendly and hospitable or enemy and inhospitable, depending on the conditions that were again favorable or unfavorable to men. In the ancient Egypt, witchcraft was completely scientific and orderly. The Fear of Magic and Protection Old world magic in Egypt did enforce a sort of profound fear among the ordinary people, who made it a point to purchase amulets, herbs, magic potions and other similar things from magicians and sorcerers; most of these things were purely for protecting the life, home, farm and other personal goods from those invincible ghosts and spirits. The Book of the Dead The much celebrated Book of the Dead states that the main gates to distant, other world will never open to you, until you know your secret name or when you utter it an incorrect manner. Egyptians were the first people to maintain and chronicle a number of superb books containing innumerable formulae, incantations, recitations, verses, poems, spells, charms and magical utterances for daily use and for special purposes. People found them very useful in the daily lives. One such tool was amulets that were very important for a number of purposes; amulets worn by the living people gave protection from ghosts and spirits, while when put on the dead souls, they saved them from bad influences. Amulets are those intuitive pieces of instruments made by using any materials and some of them carved with magical formulae. Amulets also came in a number of shapes and sizes like scarab and heart. Amulets also came in different forms just to protect different parts of the body. Egyptian witchcraft also relied on a set of rigid and sound principles that controlled both mortal and immortal world. In essence, Egyptian witchcraft mainly aimed at creating: Transfer of power heavenly, supernatural and surreal being to mortal men Thus, the principles of

Egyptian Pharaonic witchcraft enabled humans to get superhuman and supernatural strength and capacity, to become a mighty, powerful, original possessor of the supernatural powers. The main goal of Egyptian witchcraft was to empower men with means and methods of making or compelling both demonic and friendly powers to do or perform what they wanted or wished, whether such forces wanted it or not! Religion in Early Egypt had a profound and deep influence on the pharaonic magic practices and in fact, both existed side by side in a peaceful coexistence for many thousands of years. In reality, the magical powers exclusively belonged to men of religion and the one who was skilled in the art, science of magic was invincible, and his or her capacity was almost boundless and eternal. The domain of Egyptian witchcraft and occult was divine and surreal; a person who was an expert in the field was an immortal both by the deeds and by life. Men of magic in Ancient Egypt used to utter or recite some important words in a systematic manner and deep intonation to heal sick people, by curing the incurable diseases, spell off the ghost residing in the body and restore the dead soul back into the physical body. They could even converse with the dead souls to provide them power to get rid of their guilt and sins to become saner bodies! An ancient Egyptian magician or a sorcerer was proficient in many things like: Ancient Egyptian religion was a wonderful mix of amazing gods, holy rituals and a fair amount of pure magic! It was surprising to see that Egyptians never differentiated between religion and magic! Old Egyptians also believed in one God who as eternal and omnipresent was unfathomable to human beings. In other words, a magician assumed the god form by attaching himself or herself with the god. Magic used quite a bit of things from the religion like utterances, holy chants and prayers. The polytheism of Egyptian religion meant that Neter himself manifested in those local and lesser deities. Old Egyptian funerary books provide us a clue as to how a particular deity or god represented the dead souls! The power of magical words and utterances is a predominant feature of ancient Egyptian magical and occult practices. There was a firm belief that human beings could become deities or servants of gods; just have a look at those amazing texts, as Pyramid Texts or The Book of Dead, and you will understand how Egyptians perfected the art of magic and occult. Deities were seen as possessing heku, or magic, which is the cosmic power existing in the universe. Ancient Egyptian also believed that magic is the essential part of daily life and various religious practices that also relied on the aspects of divinity. One of the amazing texts available in the world is the Coffin Text written exclusively for the dead to retain the magic that is already in the body and to gather more lately in the deceased stage. Egyptians believed that a person had the ability to sit with the deity, when he or she possessed the memory to recite the names of all the gods and objects. In almost all cases, deceased soul was closely associated with the god Osiris. Ancient Egyptians also used a tool called historaloe to transit usefully to the afterlife, as did Osiris. The healing rites for the dead also relied on establishing a contact with the deity so that the after life journey was made successful by the men of magic. In the year BC, one of the oldest known texts described the god Ptah creating the mind and the word by using the power of magic. The god Thoth provided words of magic in the ancient Egyptian magic, Egyptians call their native language as those words spoken by gods, and the available hieroglyphic records mention this as the writing of the sacred words. Three most important religious and magic texts of ancient Egypt are: Words and names were the de facto standards for any magical ritual, while amazing lines of Hieroglyphs exerted a special effect along with magical powers. No wonder most of the funeral texts found written in hieroglyphs. The Later Years During the succeeding years of BC and BC, the Egyptians used heka, the magic to provide many benefits and advantages to the world. Many symbolic actions of heka exerted harmonious and useful effects. The most common practitioners of magic were the local priests, whom with their secret knowledge and skills, could yield considerable influence over the residents. They could also use ancient texts and treatise of magic preserved in local temples and libraries. Legends say that these men of knowledge could even inanimate objects to life and turn over the waters from a lake! Royal lector priests also had a special role to play to protect pharaohs from evil influences and they even initiated procedures to help the deceased pharaohs to rebirth and reincarnation. By the end of first millennium BC, local priests gave away their sacred duties to professional magicians, also called hekau. However, the temple priests exerted tremendous capacity to heal dangerous disease like plague that was set on the earth by the god of plague, Sekhmet. Egyptian history also gave shelter to low-level charmers and magicians called scorpion charmers, who used magic to get rid of poisonous reptiles like snakes, scorpions, lizards and insects. Surprisingly, even nurses and midwives also proved useful with their considerable magic skills in getting rid of many maternity related problems. Curiously, none of the magical techniques was rejected, either by the royal court or by priests. The ancient Egyptians had plenty of both religion and surreal magic in their life; most of the Egyptians had two names against them, one for the public, while the other secret and known only by the mother. Destructive Magic in Historic Ancient Times Even though, magic was a daily routine for the purpose of healing and protecting people, many Egyptians also made it a point to use destructive magic technique to control and maim state enemies. When a destructive magic session was required to bring spell of bad tidings to the enemies of the state, their name was inscribed in clay pots, tablets figurines, toys and metal icons and later burned or broken or even buried in a remote cemetery. In the major temples across the land, there were regular curse ceremonies to curse enemies of deities by burning or maiming their images. Above all the fiercest gods of the cosmos joined to fight and destroy bad and demonic influences. During this period, those people, who hated or despised the pharaohs, were also cursed and ostracized to provide protection to the royal court. Legend says that a divine magic protected King Ramses III, by royal priests by making a series of potions, spells, verses, recitations and wax figurines and later cursing them with magical procedures. Other popular objects used for magical spells were hair, nail clips, foot dust and body fluids. In fact, using a magical procedure by using the above-mentioned materials was mandatory, otherwise a spell would not work.

How black magic started - The history and story of Harut, Marut, Prophet Sulaiman, and the devils webadmin The events in this post are based on two Quranic verses of Surah Al-Baqara and Ibn Kathir's writings.

History[ edit ] Like its counterpart white magic, the origins of black magic can be traced to the primitive, ritualistic worship of spirits as outlined in Robert M. Place also provides a broad modern definition of both black and white magic, preferring instead to refer to them as "high magic" white and "low magic" black based primarily on intentions of the practitioner employing them. He acknowledges, though, that this broader definition of "high" and "low" suffers from prejudices because good-intentioned folk magic may be considered "low" while ceremonial magic involving expensive or exclusive components may be considered by some as "high magic", regardless of intent. Witchcraft and non-mainstream esoteric study were prohibited and targeted by the Inquisition. He allows no exception and under this condemnation fall "all Diviners, Charmers, Jugglers, all Wizards, commonly called wise men or wise women". All those purported "good Witches which do not hurt but good, which do not spoil and destroy, but save and deliver" should come under the extreme sentence. In particular, though, the term was most commonly reserved for those accused of invoking demons and other evil spirits, those hexing or cursing their neighbours, those using magic to destroy crops, and those capable of leaving their earthly bodies and travelling great distances in spirit to which the Malleus Maleficarum "devotes one long and important chapter", usually to engage in devil-worship. Summers also highlights the etymological development of the term nigromancer, in common use from to approximately, Latin: Manteia, divination, broadly "one skilled in the black arts". Those who seek to do harm or evil are less likely to be accepted into mainstream Wiccan circles or covens in an era where benevolent magic is increasingly associated with new-age Gnosticism and self-help spiritualism. Satanism The influence of popular culture has allowed other practices to be drawn in under the broad banner of "black magic", including the concept of Satanism. While the invocation of demons or spirits is an accepted part of black magic, this practice is distinct from the worship or deification of such spiritual beings. Those lines, though, continue to be blurred by the inclusion of spirit rituals from otherwise "white magicians" in compilations of work related to Satanism. White magic is supposedly utilized only for good or unselfish purposes, and black magic, we are told, is used only for selfish or "evil" reasons. Satanism draws no such dividing line. Magic is magic, be it used to help or hinder. The Satanist, being the magician, should have the ability to decide what is just, and then apply the powers of magic to attain his goals. Satanism is not a white light religion; it is a religion of the flesh, the mundane, the carnal - all of which are ruled by Satan, the personification of the Left Hand Path. The latter quote, though, seems to have been directed toward the growing trends of Wicca and neo-paganism at the time. Chathan or Vishnumaya is a deity worshipped by Hindus in Kerala. Peringottukara Devasthanam in Thrissur is one of the most famous Vishnumaya Kuttichathan Seva Temple and often considered as one of the biggest centers for black magic and occult.
