Hidden gems of rural Spain Weekend trips from Madrid: Hidden gems of rural Spain Tripotohttps: Sure, everybody knows that Barcelona and Madrid have a lot to offer, but for an adventurous tourist looking to try something different, there are countless hidden gems that are waiting to be explored. Castilla Madrid might be the capital of Spain today, but the foundations of modern Spain were laid in the kingdom of Castilla. Situated on a fertile plateau, Castilla has some of the oldest fortresses in the country. Besides its historically significant cities, the region has vast stretches of open fields that become bright red carpets in spring when poppies bloom. The village is full of emblazoned houses and cobbled streets, and you could spend an entire weekend in Spain visiting the various attractions here. The Puerta de la Villa, an incredible town gate, is only overshadowed by a stunning castle which houses a museum. Pedraza also has a medieval church and prison. Sepulveda Sepulveda, too, was declared a Historic-Artistic Site in , and for good reason. It is surprising that not many tourists head out to this Romanesque village, which is also home to the oldest church in the region, one that dates back to San Frutos Even those who have spent countless summers exploring Spain may not have heard about San Frutos, but for history buffs looking to enjoy a weekend in Spain, it is a must-see. The hermitage of San Frutos as they have come to be known are the remarkable remains of an ancient monastery complex. Among the ruins is a temple that is still used by locals today. Riaza Recently declared as Property of Cultural Interest, Riaza is a must-visit for people looking to spend an adventurous weekend in Spain away from where most of the other tourists will be. It has some of the most beautiful cycling trails anywhere in Europe, with vultures flying high over pristine gorges. There is so much more to Spain than what an internet search or a travel magazine shows. If you have visited all the traditional tourist destinations, there is no need to fret. There are still plenty of reasons you should give Spain another visit. If you decide to spend your weekend in Spain at any of these hidden gems, you can rest assured that you will see a whole new side of this Mediterranean tourist hotspot.

But how much do you really know about resorts in Costa Blanca? Benidorm is always the centre of attention, being the most popular destination in the region. But what else can the Costa Blanca region offer holidaymakers besides Benidorm, you ask? Well, there are plenty of smaller resorts which make fabulous holiday destinations! Read on to find out about four other resorts in Costa Blanca that are not receiving the recognition they deserve. Surely we appreciate places more if we know their history? Make sure you visit the Palmar de Elche. Now, we are aware that there is only so much sightseeing you can do in one day and time needs to be allowed for recuperation. Elche has over nine kilometres of white sandy beaches, which is the perfect place to stretch out and absorb the Spanish sunshine. Spend your evening enjoying fresh paella at the local restaurants with a glass or two of sumptuous sangria. Elche has a higher population of Spaniards than Benidorm. This quaint town will offer you an unrivalled traditional Spanish setting. Pay a visit to San Jose Church in the town centre and gasp at the utterly amazing architecture. For some educational entertainment, visit the Castillo Conde de Alfaz and take part in its medieval jousting competition. Some people visit Alfaz Del Pi simply to soak up the rays, relax on the golden sands and sample the local tapas. Lay out in the hot Mediterranean sun, with the clear shallow waters lapping at your feet. Relish the laid back atmosphere that the Spaniards live by. You will find no high rise buildings here. Guardamar Del Segura is home to two large salt lakes, as well as an official Spanish nature reserve. After spending a day spotting wildlife, head back into the town and visit one of the many traditional Spanish markets for some fresh fruit and handcrafted goods. We reckon a local market is the best place to get your souvenirs to take home! For those active types, head out with a team of divers to see the array of fish and underwater tropics that await you. Or, for a truly unforgettable experience, and not to mention a great holiday photo, why not try riding a camel along part of the beach? There is at least 300 days of sunshine each year Guardamar Del Segura. Awesome sandy beaches, warm waters with an exciting array of water sports and a selection of authentic Spanish restaurants are just what you need to enjoy the simple life in style. Trendy shops, museums and intimate cafes fill the traditional Spanish streets. Marques de Campo is the perfect place to sit and watch the Spanish world go by! A pitcher of Sangria would help you to soak up the Spanish atmosphere, too. The Denia Harbour is one of the busiest in the region, with regular crossings to Majorca and Ibiza. So, if you thought that Costa Blanca was just home to Benidorm, then think again. There is so much to see and do in this region that you will be coming back year after year. Start your Costa Blanca adventure today and find out what part of the region would suit you at loveholidays.

4: 20 amazing destinations in Spain you've probably never heard of Hotel Alfonso XIII sits right on the edge of the old - pedestrianised - quarter, meaning that you can benefit from arriving to the hotel by car and walking five minutes to outstanding historic sites such as the Cathedral de Seville, the Alcazar, Puente de S. Telmo, and Plaza de Espana.

Close by is the intricate Sobrellano Palace, completed by another Catalan architect three years after El Capricho; high on the hill is the giant and very grand Pontifical University from the same decade. Throw in a couple of film-set old squares and Comillas is well worth the mile detour from medieval Santillana del Mar, which attracts far more visitors. A Roman necropolis, portals through mighty walls, baroque palaces, a convent and a Moorish fortress partly reborn as a Parador hotel make this ancient town a rewarding add-on to a Seville city break. Come evening, wander the eerily silent cobbled alleys to find ultra-traditional tapas taverns heady with the aroma of hanging hams. Madrid Barajas or Sevilla Base yourself at: The 4,ft 1,m Puig Campana Bell Hill , six miles from the skyscrapers, is a magnet for walkers. It has a distinctive notch that is characteristic of the malformed peaks that rise above the empty, rocky valleys of this region. Alicante Base yourself at: Vivood Hotel Paisaje, Benimantell vivood. Between the tangled shrubs of the lower slopes and the barren wilderness at the top lies a thick band of beautiful canary pines, their arrow-straight trunks often poking above cotton-wool clouds. Stop to walk on the carpet of fallen needles, accompanied only by birdsong. The next day, skirt the other side of the volcano to the Llano del Jable viewpoint for a quiet different hike, stumbling across the other-worldly mass of broken lava spewed from a eruption. La Palma Base yourself at: Hacienda San Jorge, Los Cancajos hsanjorge. The path through the Ordesa canyon, showpiece of the Monte Perdido National Park, follows a dazzling river between formidable 3,ft walls, with a fantail waterfall providing a suitably dramatic end-point. Alternative balcony-style trails with awesome views beckon those with a head for heights. Its three sister canyons are even quieter. Pineta begins among alpine meadows and rich forest before ascending to craggier ground. Monte Perdido National Park Credit: Zaragoza Base yourself at: Hotel Abetos, Torla hotelabetos. A lammergeier vulture Credit: Just to the west are the adjacent natural parks of Redes and Ponga, where peaks soar 6,ft 2,m above deep valleys choked with beech and oak forest. On the rare patches of flatter land, soft-eyed Asturian cows graze on alpine pastures. Lurking within the woods are brown bears, wolves and capercaillie. Otters frolic in the crystal streams. Look up, too - chamois climb the rocks while golden eagles and Egyptian vultures swirl their huge wingspans around the tops of crags in remarkable numbers. Asturias The 50 greatest adventures on Earth Montes Universales About halfway between Madrid and Valencia, but around miles from either, this is the least-populated area in Spain. The mountain range does however attract hikers, birdwatchers, butterfly enthusiasts and mushroom hunters. The Tagus is just one of the rivers that has its source here, where waterfalls flow between the pine, oak and juniper trees. Zaragoza, Madrid or Valencia. Chamois in the Somiedo nature reserve Credit: For centuries, the wet nurses for the Spanish royal family traditionally came from this area, as it was deemed to be the healthiest place in Spain. Nowadays, with easy access from Santander, visitors come to see cave art, fish for salmon and trout, plunge into hillside pools and scoff the excellent cheeses and cakes. It looks a bit like Austria or Switzerland, but is not far from Girona and the Mediterranean. Many of the villages are linked by tracks so exploring on foot or by bike is easy - you could easily spend a week here. You can even follow a lesser-known stretch of the pilgrimage route to Santiago to Compostela, which crosses Cerdanya. Coast Zahara de los Atunes On the Costa de la Luz on the Atlantic coast of Andalucia, this is a proper little town with spectacular beaches attached. Although it is very popular with Spanish tourists in summer, late spring is perhaps the most interesting time to visit, when the bluefin tuna fishing season is underway and you can amuse yourself trawling around the many tapas bars trying the different cuts of the fish. Zahara de los Atunes Credit: Jerez or Gibraltar Base yourself at: A string of splendid, unspoilt beaches are linked by paths, making this a popular area for walking. It all looks idyllic and peaceful in the sunshine, but this coast can be treacherous too. Follow the lighthouse and shipwreck routes to get an idea, visiting the English Cemetery right by the sea, which is the burial place of some of the sailors who lost their lives when the battleship HMS

Serpent foundered on the rocks in Hotel Puerto Arnela hotelpuertoarnela. The southern part is a nature reserve, with white sand beaches flanked by dunes and dense pine forests. You can walk or cycle right around the island, or spend the day diving, snorkelling or fishing. Get out on a boat to see how oysters and mussels are grown on thick ropes dangling from wooden rafts and watch the skilled women known as mariscadoras harvest clams from the sand at low tide.
