There are two types of IELTS test to choose from, IELTS Academic or IELTS General www.enganhecubano.com test takers take the same Listening and Speaking tests but different Reading and Writing tests.

In this short time you have to convince the examiner who will be speaking with you of your level of English. The test is conducted with 1 examiner and 1 candidate. The Speaking test is recorded. The Speaking Test is divided into 3 sections: Section 1 Section 1 begins with some general introductory questions. This is followed by some questions on personal information similar to the type of questions one would ask when meeting someone for the first time. Finally the examiner asks a series of questions of 2 topics of general interest. The examiner will give the candidate a card with a subject and a few guiding questions on it. The student must talk for 1 to 2 minutes on this subject. The examiner decides on the exact length. The student has an optional 1 minute in order to prepare for his talk and is provided with some paper and a pencil in order to make some brief notes. These questions will be more demanding and require some critical analysis on the part of the candidate. The questions will not be overly personal and will avoid contentious subjects such as politics, sex or religion. All the questions will be open questions rather than closed questions. An open question asks the candidate to give an extended answer, and so have the opportunity to show how good his English is. A closed question is one that can be answered by a single word or a couple of words. So, you will not get a question like: Do you like living in your town? A student could just answer yes. Any answers like this will just be followed by the question why? Anyway, the question is more likely to be: Why do you like living in your town? Here the candidate has to give an explanation and therefore the examiner hears plenty of English which will help him or her evaluate you. These 4 areas are: For the first 3, you get a mark out of 9. For Pronunciation you get a 2, 4, 6 or 8. Finally an average is taken to give you your final band for the Speaking. The examiner grades your fluency, which is how easy, smooth and flowing your speaking is. To get a good grade here, any gaps in your speaking should be associated with searching for the right idea rather than hesitancy with finding the right word or structure. For the coherence part, the examiner looks at how easy you are to understand. Does your flow of ideas run smoothly, logically and with consistency? Do you communicate well? This mark grades the range of words that you use in your speaking test and whether you use the words in the right way, at the right time and in the right place. Grammatical Range and Accuracy: This mark grades your range of grammatical structures, your accuracy at producing them and whether you use the right structure at the right time and in the right place. This is the area that worries the candidates the most as it is the dreaded grammar. Remember it is only 1 part out of 4. This mark grades you on how clearly you speak English. Remember, the IELTS test always tries to mirror situations that you will encounter as a student or immigrant in an English speaking country. The speaking test is no different and each of the sections has a specific purpose. The questions that are asked in Section 1 are easier than in Section 2 and so on. This does not mean that by Section 3 they are impossible but they are more demanding linguistically. Section 1 4 – 5 minutes This section is divided into three parts. Here the examiner checks that he or she has the right person by checking the candidates name, origin and identification. This only takes a few seconds. These questions are the type that people would use when meeting someone for the first time. This should last for a couple of minutes. These sets of questions will cover general ideas on a theme of general interest. The examiner will hand you a card with the subject written on it, along with about three questions on the subject in order to guide and help your speaking. The examiner will then tell you that you have 1 minute to prepare your mini-talk and he or she will give you some paper and a pencil to make some notes during that minute. You can refer to your notes while you are speaking. After the minute, the examiner will ask you to start talking and you must talk on the subject until the examiner asks you to stop. After he has asked you to stop, he may ask you 1 or 2 general questions about what you have been discussing. You cannot ask the examiner for another card. You must use the one that he gives you. Section 3 4 – 5 minutes In Section 3 the examiner will ask you a series of questions thematically linked to the subject that you spoke about in Section 2. These questions will be of a more demanding nature and will require a more analytical and thoughtful answer. You will also probably need to use more complex language as regards grammatical structure and vocabulary. First of all practice. Below you will find a separate section devoted to practising the speaking. The questions we supply with our IELTS practice tests will help you practise the possible subjects that might be used. When you are in the test, smile and look the examiner in the eye. Try and be friendly and look as though you are enjoying the conversation. This has a big effect on the examiner. Being nervous is fine. The examiner understands that and will try and put you at ease. It makes a difference. The examiner will expect some mistakes – after all, English is a foreign language for you and people make mistakes in speaking foreign languages. The examiner is not making a note of every single mistake that you make. This would be impossible to do and concentrate on your speaking. More important is your communication. You have to talk. Try and give as full an answer as you can so that you show the examiner that you are comfortable at talking at length and can communicate well. When you have finished what you have to say stop. The examiner will see that you have finished and will give you the next question. Different people can talk about different questions more and the examiner knows this. Just try and talk normally as that is when you will perform at your best. If you try and extend yourself too much, then that is when you will make the most errors. Perfection is not needed. You can still make some errors and get a 9 not many errors though. Get on with the talking and concentrate on your communication. One thing that puts candidates off is that the Speaking test is recorded. This is done so that, if necessary, the speaking can be re-marked. If the speaking was not recorded, then this could not be done. Sample recordings are also sent to the IELTS administration to be monitored to make sure that examiners are doing a good job and assigning the correct bands. So, try and forget that the recorder is there and get on with answering the questions. You need it at the start of the test. It gives a bad impression. Of course, using IELTS practice tests is important, but there are various other things that you can do to improve your performance. Prepare the types of questions for each of the different sections. Then sit down with a piece of paper and write down every question you can think of about these ideas. Try and come up with about 10 questions. You can then practice them in 2 ways: Do this again and again. You just look at your list and imagine that someone has asked you the question. Then, off you go. You can do this sat at home, you can talk to the cat, the mirror or do it driving on the way to work. It may feel a bit strange at first, talking by yourself, but it works and you will improve. In the second part of Section 1 you have to answer questions on themes of general interest.

It does not change its form. Here is an example of a common mistake with the infinitive: It took me five hours to reached the destination. The person has made the infinitive verb, reach, in the past tense. Only the main verb take in this case can be given a tense. This is how it should be written: It took me five hours to reach the destination. How are they used? The table below explains some of their common uses. This is followed by some tables with examples. As direct objects When an infinitive is used as a direct object, it is placed after the verb: I wanted to make sure that my grammar was as good as it could be. I decided to study abroad, but my parents are refusing to pay. I joined the exercise class in order to lose weight. I joined the exercise class to lose weight. As a subject To help me like this was very kind. To get involved in charity work is a very noble cause. However, note that the use of the gerund in these structures is much more common: Helping me like this was very kind. Getting involved in charity work is a very noble cause. If you do see an infinitive at the beginning of a sentence, it is much more likely to be showing purpose i. It takes a lot of concentration to read this book. After certain adjectives My brother was surprised to see me. I was careful not to speak too loudly. He hoped see me again. He hoped seeing me again. If "hope" is followed by another verb, it needs to be an infinitive: He hoped to see me again. Remember, certain verbs should be followed by an infinitive, not a gerund, and some verbs can be followed by either. Here is a list of verbs that are very commonly followed by an infinitive not a gerund:

IELTS is a jointly managed test by the University of Cambridge ESOL Examinations, British Council and IDP Education Australia. The test is accepted by many professional organizations in Australia and New Zealand including: the New Zealand Immigration Service, the Australian Department of Immigration.

It consists of 40 questions. A variety of question types is used in order to test a wide range of reading skills. It requires you to read extracts from books, magazines, newspapers, notices, advertisements, company handbooks and guidelines. These are materials you are likely to encounter on a daily basis in an English speaking environment. The IELTS Academic Reading test includes three long texts which range from the descriptive and factual to the discursive and analytical. The texts are authentic and are taken from books, journals, magazines and newspapers. These have been selected for a non-specialist audience but are recognisably appropriate for anyone entering undergraduate or postgraduate courses or seeking professional registration. The IELTS Listening test will take about 30 minutes, and you will have an extra 10 minutes to transfer your answers to the answer sheet. You will listen to four recorded texts, monologues and conversations by a range of native speakers, and write their answers to a series of questions. These include questions which test the ability to understand main ideas and detailed factual information, ability to understand the opinions and attitudes of speakers, ability to understand the purpose of what is said and ability to follow the development of ideas. A variety of voices and native-speaker accents are used and you will hear each section only once. A conversation between two people set in an everyday social context, e. A monologue set in an everyday social context, e. A conversation between up to four people set in an educational or training context, e. A monologue on an academic subject, e. Topics are of general interest to, and suitable for anyone entering undergraduate or postgraduate studies or seeking professional registration. You will be presented with a graph, table, chart or diagram and you will be asked to describe, summarise or explain the information in your own words. You may be asked to describe and explain data, describe the stages of a process, how something works or describe an object or event. You will be asked to write an essay in response to a point of view, argument or problem. The Speaking test is designed to assess your use of spoken English. Every test is recorded. The Speaking test consists of three parts: You will be asked to answer general questions about yourself and a range of familiar topics, such as your home, family, work, studies and interests. This part lasts between 4 and 5 minutes. You will be given a card and you will be asked to talk about a particular topic. You will have one minute to prepare before speaking for up to two minutes. The examiner then asks you one or two questions on the same topic to finish this part of the test. You will be asked further questions connected to the topic in Part 2. These questions give you an opportunity to discuss more abstract issues and ideas. This part lasts between four and five minutes.
