Is this still confusing? Are you still asking yourself, "So Sentence diagrams show us how the parts of sentences are related. You can see in the sentence diagram above that prepositions hook nouns called objects of the preposition to the rest of the sentence. Prepositional Phrases One ultra-important thing that you need to know about prepositions is that they are always in prepositional phrases. A phrase is a group of words, without both a subject and a verb, that functions as a single part of speech. A prepositional phrase consists of a preposition plus a noun or pronoun the object of the preposition. It is the first noun listed after each preposition. Just like cheese and a tortilla are the minimum ingredients for a quesadilla, a preposition and an object of the preposition are the minimum ingredients for a prepositional phrase. And, just as we can jazz up a quesadilla by adding some chicken, salsa, or sour cream, we can jazz up prepositional phrases by adding adjectives and adverbs. The prepositional phrases are in blue. The cake with nuts fell onto the floor. Prepositions are always in prepositional phrases. All of the words in a prepositional phrase come together to function as an adjective or adverb. Prepositional Phrases Acting As Adjectives If the prepositional phrase is describing a noun, the phrase is functioning as an adjective. Adjectives modify nouns and pronouns. The table with the broken leg is downstairs. Since the prepositional phrase with the broken leg is modifying table a noun, this prepositional phrase is functioning as an adjective. Adverbs modify verbs, adjectives, and other adverbs. The rabbit hopped through the pretty garden. Look at the word down in the following examples. Can you tell why one is a preposition and one is not? The cat ran down the tree. Will the real preposition please stand up? I hope you guessed the preposition is in sentence A. In sentence A, the preposition down is in the prepositional phrase down the tree. In sentence B, down is not in a prepositional phrase, therefore, it is not a preposition. In these cases, the words are NOT prepositions. They are not performing the job of a preposition. In these cases, they are acting as part of the verb.
