David Hasselhoff as a super-swimming lifeguard. After SpongeBob and Patrick spend most of the movie looking for the crown and bringing it back to Neptune in the end, Plankton simply backs this up with a King-Sized bucket helmet for Neptune. Always a Bigger Fish: Just as Dennis is about to stomp on SpongeBob and Patrick with hugely spiked boots, a larger boot stomps on him, seemingly killing him. SpongeBob and Patrick justifiably just sit there, mouth agape. Lampshaded in the following dialog: I am just a kid. And no amount of mermaid magic, or managerial promotion, or some other third thing can make me any more than what I really am inside: Now, back against the wall Squidward, front and center! I think we all know who rightfully deserves to wear that badge. Wait a second, everybody. I think I know what it is. What you really wanted was inside you all along. I was just going to tell you that your fly is down. This is the greatest day of my liiiiiife! More like a shove! While the show normally hides its Limited Animation with strong layouts, the movie relishes in incredibly fluid and insane, Off-Model animation, the likes of which could never be done on a TV budget. Even though the frozen Mr. Mr Krabs announces that the new manager of the Krusty Krab 2 has "a name you all know, it starts with an S! Happens twice in succession. Once when Patrick goes into the Thug Tug and asks to go to the bathroom, and again when one of the bubbles he and SpongeBob made in said bathroom wanders out into the bar. Princess Mindy makes a pair of these out of seaweed to convince SpongeBob and Patrick that they have become men. Used in a throwaway gag courtesy of Dennis: The female cinema janitor in The Stinger. Even when threatened at swordpoint by pirates she still calmly asks them to leave the theater. They reluctantly do so. Inevitably devolves into a Bar Brawl. As SpongeBob goes to order some ice-cream from what turns out to be a frogfish, Patrick notices the bones all around them and appears to come to a grim realization. Make mine a chocolate! After his adventures, SpongeBob gets promoted to manager and this exchange occurs: This is the greatest day of my life! SpongeBob learns that "you are who you are. Everything about the show, the animation, the music, the special-effects, is vastly improved on here. A six-day adventure to the ends of the Earth as Plankton takes over Bikini Bottom with mind control devices. Earlier, Mindy also does this three times when King Neptune prepares to fry Mr. Krabs to death, with Plankton doing the inversion. She also does this when Plankton puts a mind-control helmet on King Neptune. Plankton pretends to be upset about Mr. Krabs being frozen by Neptune during his interview with Perch Perkins when he actually stole the Krabby Patty formula while Krabs was frozen and decides to take over Bikini Bottom. Technically one for the whole series, considering that this is considered to be the canonical Grand Finale for the whole series. The pilot episode, "Help Wanted", ended with SpongeBob getting hired as general fry cook for the Krusty Krab, and the movie ends with him accepting the promotion to general manager of the original Krusty Krab. This is the extent of SpongeBob telling off Mr. The two fish at the gas station get this The film was well known for this, especially in recent years. It has been criticized that the film links an alternate canon in the series, because episodes that aired after the film do not show specific changes they had during the course of the film Word of God says that the movie is meant to be the Grand Finale, with episodes produced after still occurring before it. King Neptune shows signs of this. Patrick gets into an argument with King Neptune over how many days SpongeBob needs to find the crown. We have a mariachi band playing in the background as a live-action man is squirming helplessly. There are some pretty heavy themes addressed over the course of the movie, such as depression, alcoholism, and murder. In fact, the particular scene of Patrick and Spongebob at shell city is so emotional it literally causes the audience to break out into tears. Which is all totally at odds with the TV show. The writers of course always manage to put a fairly comedic spin on things anyways, leading to several a Mood Whiplash. SpongeBob attempts to bribe Dennis with five "Goober Dollars". The Patty Wagon, as seen in the page image. The credits show pictures of SpongeBob in his new life as the manager of the Krusty Krab 2. Plankton sheds these to Perch Perkins when he explains how he was able to sell Krabby Patties. The clock seen in the Goofy Goober Steamboat has the 12 numbers in scrambled order. Unlike the rest of the series, this movie is considerably a lot darker and has plenty of horror elements. Plankton is more depraved and vicious than in the series, to the point that he sadistically shows excitement and joy when King Neptune is about to kill Mr. Krabs, not to mention the monsters that abound in the way of SpongeBob and Patrick, the mercenary Dennis sent by Plankton to kill the duo, and how the heroes die at the hand of the Cyclops. Plankton has conquered Bikini Bottom and enslaved the population, Mr. Luckily, things get better. Krabs spends the movie frozen. Pearl and Gary make cameos. In the beginning of the movie, Squidward catches SpongeBob in the shower with him, and after a small conversation with SpongeBob, Squidward kicks SpongeBob out of his window. Once the smoke clears, SpongeBob is left dangling on the end of a rope suspended above the stage in a neat reference to the literal Greek tragedy deus ex machina. SpongeBob and Patrick get the crown, but manage to lose the bag of winds. They have very little time to get home, and all is hopeless. Every single fish that was taxidermied springs back to life through the same means. The movie begins with SpongeBob as the manager of the Krusty Krab, saving the day after a guy gets no cheese on his patty. The crowd hoist him over their shoulders and cheer him, but then the cheers turn into his foghorn alarm and SpongeBob wakes up. In this case, a milk product rather than liquid milk; specifically, ice cream. Moderately justified in that SpongeBob is also sleep-deprived. Dystopia Justifies the Means: What Plankton does to Bikini Bottom. Earn Your Happy Ending: After enslaving all of Bikini Bottom with his mind controlling helmets, Plankton converts it into Planktopolis, complete with giant stone statues of himself. All the pirates in the movie theater cry over SpongeBob and Patrick drying out under the lamp at Shell City. Not counting the live-action sequences and the Dream Intro, the majority of this film runs six days according to King Neptune and Patrick. Counting the day where Plankton steals the crown and the Krusty Krab 2 did its grand opening, the film took seven days, under a whole week. The movie seems to have this as a Running Gag. Invoked but ultimately subverted in the beginning of the movie: After putting toothpaste on his tooth brush, SpongeBob uses it to brush his eyes, though he has no pained reaction to this act. Plankton, in contrast to his usual Affably Evil, and Dennis the hitman who is very soft spoken and even polite. Her only contributions to the story were to be a love interest for Patrick, stop her father from killing Mr. Krabs, give SpongeBob and Patrick their "mustaches", and stall her father long enough for SpongeBob to come back with the crown. Plankton sends a hitman named Dennis after SpongeBob and Patrick. A band of pirates go to a movie theater to see the movie. The audience knew it was a trap, though, because of all the piles of fish skulls and bones. It can also be considered a Disc-One Final Boss because an even bigger monster eel eats it. Out of all the villains in the movie, the Cyclops comes closest yes, even closer than Plankton and Dennis to killing SpongeBob and Patrick: And unlike the other villains in the movie, they were clearly far from his first victims. Incidentally, this is subverted with Dennis. Though Plankton describes him as a bloodthirsty predator, he has a tendency to get interrupted before he can actually hurt SpongeBob and Patrick. Nonetheless, he manages to be somewhat terrifying. Even something like this can be made to fit: Plankton mind-controls King Neptune near the end. The "Cyclops" actually a deep-sea diver.
