It would use strong visual images to communicate directly the atmosphere of the destination and the everyday life of its inhabitants. With the financial backing of a local hotel, he published Insight Guide: The book won a photography award and a gold medal from the American Society of Travel Agents. Hoefler meticulously produced other Insight Guides to Asian destinations, all illustrated with superb, full-colour photographs. The concept was adapted from a market-leading series in Germany. Realising that substantial resources would be needed to update, improve and expand, Hoefler sold his share in the company over a period of years to the Langenscheidt group, which embarked on an ambitious expansion program. Insight FlexiMaps, the first product in this new program, were an immediate success.
