Sample letter format to bank for internet banking Posted Date: Sample Letters and Letter Formats Author: Read this article, which provides detailed information and a sample letter format, about how to write an application to your bank to avail the facility of internet banking. It also tells you about the cautions to be exercised while handling internet banking. Internet banking A savings bank account without an internet banking facility, is almost unthinkable these days. Online shopping, topping up your mobile, booking tickets for rail, bus and air travel, movie tickets, paying bills and taxes; everything can be achieved by means of internet banking. In a recent survey, it has been ascertained that online transactions - be it with a debit card, credit card or through internet banking is on the rise and every year it is touching new levels. It is more of a necessity to have an internet banking facility these days. When you are opening a new savings bank account, the internet banking facility comes along with it by default. But, if yours is one of those old accounts, or if your bank has just introduced this facility, then you need to write an application to your bank requesting them to link the facility of internet banking with your savings bank account. For your reference, I have provided a sample letter format in this article that will help you draft an application for internet, net or online banking facility. Information to be given in the application In the application, you need to mention your name s - depending on single or joint account, account number and name of the branch, where the account is held. You may have to fill an additional form given by the bank. You have to mention on whose name the internet banking facility is to be provided, whether for a single person or for all the account holders. You have to clearly mention, whether you want logging or visiting rights only or transaction rights as well. In case of former, you will only be able to see the balances and transactions in your account. Finally, in case of a joint account all the account holders will have to sign in the application as well as relevant places in the form given by the bank. A word of caution Net banking has changed the world of shopping and doing transactions. Internet banking has pros as well as cons. It is very cost efficient, very fast, very easy and can be done sitting in the comfort of your home or office. At the same time, online banking comes at some costs too. All online transactions have a certain risk element involved in them. There is always a chance of losing your hard earned savings to some online fraud, if you are not cautious enough. There is always a risk of your account getting hacked. There are numerous such instances, which comes in the newspapers regularly. One has to be very careful in handling internet banking accounts. A little carelessness, and it can cost you all your savings. Remember not to reveal your password to anyone. The password should be so selected that it should have a mix of small and capital letters, numbers, special symbols and should be sufficiently long enough. They should be hard to guess by anyone and hard to be detected by hackers. The password should never be written anywhere and is only to be memorized, as far as possible. Also take care, not to log on to your internet banking account when you are at a public place like internet cafes. As far as possible, use net banking in the safety of your home in your personal computer or smartphone. Many a times you will be receiving phishing mails in your e-mail account. Never ever respond to such mails. These mails will often ask for your bank account details including the password for internet banking. Always remember that your bank will never ever ask for your account details. In case someone is asking for your account details, it clearly indicates that they are trying to defraud you. Report these phishing mails to your bank and to the police if feasible. It is a very good practice to change your net banking password from time to time. If used with care, internet banking will provide you with lots of conveniences.
