You have heard that it was said, "An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth." But I tell you, "Do not resist evil." Although to the modern ear this law sounds quite harsh, in its own context this law of retaliation limits the damages that can be demanded by the injured party. His answer to violence is non-violence. This is still regarded as a sign of contempt in many cultures. To respond in this way was to make a statement favoring non-resistance over reprisal. He offers three more examples of non-resistance. For a poor Jewish peasant, this was serious. We are told that the clothing of the day was somewhat layered, much like the Bedouin of the Middle East today. To give up the coat was one thing, but the outer cloak was a protection from the weather, the sand, and might even be used as a bedroll at night when they were traveling. This was more than merely giving away some extra coats in the closet! Again, we may find it difficult to understand the command to walk the extra mile when compelled. Scholars reason that the only person who would normally compel someone to go a mile might be Roman soldier. And Jesus also advocates absolute generosity, no questions asked: He again uses his formula, this time blending two texts together "one from the Scriptures, and one from another source: This teaching on love from the law becomes the cornerstone of human relationships in the New Testament Matthew Some believe that this teaching comes from the Manual of Discipline from the Qumran community some notes in Biblical translations direct us to the Qumran Manual of Discipline ix, The Qumran community were believed to be an ascetic and highly disciplined sect of Judaism called the Essenes, who lived in a kind of monastic lifestyle near the Dead Sea. The implication is very clear. Jesus describes the character of God as completely loving and impartial: For he makes his sun to rise on the evil and the good, and sends rain on the just and the unjust. He then elaborates on this principle: For if you love those who love you, what reward do you have? If you only greet your friends, what more do you do than others? We may feel the same way about tax collectors that people did years ago! But the disciple is to be different. The disciple is to be like their Heavenly Father: Therefore you shall be perfect, just as your Father in heaven is perfect. Jesus continues to raise the bar on the expectations of a disciple. These standards, like his teaching on anger and lust, seem impossibly high. But at least those teachings relate to internal attitudes. When Jesus teaches about violence and lawsuits and military oppression, he is addressing external pressure. Or a world of peacemakers in which violence is answered with courageous gentleness; and where generosity and servanthood prevail over oppression? In our culture, we are not taught to turn the other cheek or to be humble in the face of oppression, or to love our enemies. And that reprisal must be total and disproportionate and satisfyingly explosive. I admit I am not a pacifist, although I admire the moral courage of the Mennonites and the Quakers and the Church of the Brethren. His courage in the face of war, as he saved the lives of one soldier after another, earned him their undying gratitude. But what about personal non-violence. He quoted Jesus from our passage today, in the King James Version: Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth: But I say unto you, That ye resist not evil: But whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also. I know you are naturally combative. Much harder to love the unlovely. And being like God the Father is nothing less than loving like God the Father.
