October 27, 3 Minutes Deadline has reported that Cartoon Network will move forward with a new version of their late 90s hit, Johnny Bravo. The show is being retooled for modern audiences and will be released in Johnny Bravo debuted in We reached out to Christy Millhouse, president of Cartoon Network, for further details on the new show. The show will be titled, Suzy and Johnny and is geared to be a more woman-friendly show. The Johnny Bravo character will be a sidekick to a young woman named Suzy. Suzy, a little girl in the original series will be the same age as Johnny in this new series and the new main character. The show will explore the dangers of street harassment and the struggles that the modern woman faces today. The pilot episode will start with an apology to the audience from Van Partible, the original creator of Johnny Bravo. The rest of the episode will be Suzy explaining to Johnny why his approach to women is wrong. During our online correspondence, Ms. Millhouse let us know what this new cartoon meant for the legacy of Cartoon Network. We had this musclehead character harassing and sexually objectifying women for laughs. We influenced a generation of young men. We have Johnny Bravos out there now who think approaching women aggressively with bad pick up lines while flexing their muscles and dancing is okay. We did not reach out to her for comment. She called us up. The muscles and ugly yellow hair fin are gone. And with that goes the chauvinistic humor too. The influence of the old show is felt to this day. Some man tried to holler at me as I biked to work. I do not cook. I am a strong proud independent woman who orders take-out every night. No woman should feel as threatened as I did when that man said that to me. Events like this occur because of shows like the old Johnny Bravo. With a new Johnny comes a new catchphrase. Antony for any more details, but she let us know the new show has had its conflicts behind the scenes already. She said it was humorous for a muscly guy to be a dumb wimp who was terrible with women. She said she found the pick-up lines to be witty. I told her none of that is ever funny. Want to smell me? She had to be let go. She thought the misogynistic comments were funny because society pressured her to find that funny. The poor girl had no mind of her own.

He recalled that, as a child, he would hang out in abandoned houses and vacant lots around his neighborhood in South Central where he would watch adults get drunk, abuse drugs, gamble and engage in pit bull fights. Williams stated that after the adults finished the dog fighting they would make the children fight each other, including himself. Williams began to participate in these street fights regularly as a child, where adults would bet on him and give him part of the proceeds for winning his fights. Williams was often the target of older bullies and street thugs in his neighborhood and, by the age of twelve, began carrying a switchblade in order to protect himself. Williams was expelled from George Washington Preparatory High School and was blackballed by several other high schools in the South Central area for fighting, and eventually began doing stints in Central Juvenile Hall. Gang activity[ edit ] In the late s, juvenile crime increased in South Central as older gangs disbanded to join the Black Power Movement, most notably as part of the Black Panther Party, initially to protect black people from police brutality and corruption in the Los Angeles Police Department. Increasingly violent youth gangs formed in their place, which Williams initially despised as predatory, but because of his viciousness and willingness to fight older youths Williams earned the respect of many gangsters on the West Side. These gangs were mostly small-time neighborhood cliques that operated independently from each other, and leadership was not chosen but determined naturally. By his release from custody in early, aged seventeen, Williams was physically bigger and stronger. According to Williams, upon his release from custody the review board asked him what he planned to do after being released, to which he replied "being the leader of the biggest gang in the world. Brims and the Chain Gang. The purpose for creating the gang initially was to eliminate all street gangs and create a "bull force" neighborhood watch in South Central. And eventually, we morphed into the monster we were addressing. Williams formed the West Side Crips using his own influence, having befriended so many clique leaders and street thugs on the West Side. Washington, Williams and Thomas went on an aggressive and violent recruitment campaign throughout the black ghettos of Los Angeles, where they challenged the leaders of other gangs to one-on-one street fights. This process resulted in most gangs agreeing to join the Crips, and they were converted from small independent cliques into subgroups sets of a gang within the larger gang. The Crips quickly became the biggest street gang in South Central by both numbers and territory, however, numerous gangs still resisted losing their independence. As leader of the West Side Crips, Williams became the archetype of the new wave of Los Angeles gang members that would engage in random acts of violence against rival gang members and innocent people alike. Williams and his best friend, Curtis "Buddha" Morrow, would noticeably participate in these activities, striking fear into both street criminals and the residents of South Central, Watts, Inglewood, and Compton. Crips leader[ edit ] However, soon after the foundation of the Crips other leaders were either murdered or incarcerated, and Williams was regarded as the de facto leader. In, Raymond Washington was arrested for 2nd degree robbery and served five years in prison in Tracy, and soon after was murdered. Mac Thomas was murdered under mysterious circumstances in the mids. Williams began to live an ironic double life, where he worked in a legal job as a youth counselor in Compton while also serving as the overboss for one of the largest gangs in Los Angeles. Williams would work as a counselor and study Sociology at Compton College during working hours, then spend his free time participating in numerous violent attacks against the Bloods. In, Williams was wounded in a drive-by shooting while sitting on the porch of his house in Compton. The shooting was committed by members of the Bloods, who shot at Williams from their car as he was letting his dog out for a walk in the evening. Attempting to avoid getting hit, Williams dove to the ground from the porch, but was shot in both of his legs. Williams was told by doctors that he would never walk again, but after a nearly year-long process of physical rehabilitation and an intense workout regimen, he ultimately regained his ability to walk. After the shooting, Williams re-developed a substance abuse problem when he began smoking PCP. Williams had begun dabbling in street drugs around the age of twelve, and as a preteen befriended a neighborhood pimp who, in return for performing errands for him, would reward Williams with money and drugs, particularly Quaaludes, barbiturates then known as "Red Devils" or marijuana. He lost his counseling job in after being implicated in a robbery that was committed by two youths from a group home that Williams supervised. He was denied an opportunity to compete in an amateur bodybuilding contest after it was discovered that he was a gang leader Williams would later appear on the variety show The Gong Show performing a posedown routine. Eventually his gangster lifestyle was beginning to take a mental toll on him, which included a brief stay in the psychiatric ward of a hospital after Williams experienced a bad trip while high on PCP. With each of these setbacks Williams increasingly found himself using PCP, and supported his drug habit by intimidating and robbing drug dealers in South Central. Murder convictions[ edit ] In , Williams was convicted of four counts of murder committed in two of three separate incidents. Williams always maintained his innocence, though subsequent court reviews concluded that there was no compelling reason to grant a retrial. The prosecution stated that Williams met with a man identified in court documents only as "Darryl" late on Tuesday evening, February 28, Williams, Darryl and Coward then went to the home of Tony Sims in Pomona, where they discussed possible locations to obtain money through robbery. Afterwards, they went to another residence where Williams left the others and returned with a. Darryl and Williams entered the station wagon, Coward and Sims entered another vehicle, and then embarked on the freeway. The first incident occurred at a nearby Stop-N-Go supermarket, where Darryl and Sims, at the request of Williams, entered the store with the apparent intention of robbing it. Darryl was carrying the. The clerk at the Stop-N-Go market, Johnny Garcia, had just finished mopping the floor when he observed a station wagon and the four men at the door to the market. Two of the men entered the market and one of the men went down an aisle, while the other approached Garcia asking for a cigarette. Garcia gave the man a cigarette and lit it for him. After approximately three to four minutes, the men left the market without carrying out the planned robbery. The prosecution stated that next Coward and Sims followed Williams and Darryl to the 7-Eleven market located at Whittier Boulevard in Whittier, where the second incident occurred. Owens put the broom and dustpan he was using on the hood of his car and entered the store to serve them, and was followed in by Williams and Coward. As Darryl and Sims walked to the counter area to take money from the cash register, Williams walked behind Owens, pulled the shotgun from under his jacket and told Owens to "shut up and keep walking. Coward said that he next heard the sound of a round being chambered into the shotgun, then heard a shot and glass breaking, followed by two more shots. Williams had shot at a security monitor and then killed Owens, shooting him twice in the back at point-blank range as he lay prone on the storage room floor. According to the prosecutors, at approximately 5: Inside the office, Williams shot and killed Yen-Yi, Tsai-Shai, and Yu-Chin, after which he emptied the cash register and fled the scene. Shortly thereafter he heard a female scream, followed by gunshots. Robert entered the motel office and found that his mother, his sister, and his father had all been shot, and the cash register was empty. The forensic pathologist testified that Yen-Yi Yang suffered two close range shotgun wounds, one to his left arm and abdomen, and one to the lower left chest. Tsai-Shai also received two close range wounds, one to the tailbone, and the other to the front of the abdomen, entering at the navel. Yu-Chin Yang Lin was shot once in the upper left face area at a distance of a few feet. Witnesses testified that Williams referred to the victims in conversations with friends as " Buddha -heads. The jury also convicted him of robbery in both cases, and found that he personally used a firearm in the commission of the crimes. The jury returned a verdict of Guilty, and the judge sentenced him to death. According to the District Attorney, the husband was undergoing sentencing for receiving stolen property and tried for extortion. The two shells recovered from the 7-Eleven crime scene were consistent with shells fired from this gun, with no exclusionary markings. Opponents also pointed out that he received a significant amount of money from outside sources. They maintain that the trial record indicates that none of the lawyers, and particularly the prosecutor, additional evidence in a November petition for clemency. The defense, however, has neither stated whether or not his mother was actually Filipina, nor refuted the evidence that McLurkin was black. The trial record shows that after the jurors returned their guilty verdicts, Williams said, "Sons of bitches" in a voice sufficiently loud that the court reporter included it in the trial transcript. On the day that the jury began its penalty-phase deliberations, an alternate juror reported to the bailiff that he was going to get all of them. Williams became inmate CDC C at San Quentin State Prison in northern California, and spent 6 years in solitary confinement in the late s for multiple assaults on guards and fellow inmates. The State courts affirmed the conviction, and the lower federal court denied the habeas corpus petition. See below for the full text of the documents filed in these proceedings. California opposed the clemency petition through the office of the Los Angeles County District Attorney , who along with the Los Angeles Police Department and other law enforcement groups, disputed that Williams had in fact reformed. They stated that he refused to inform officials on other gang members or the tactics and communication methods that the gangs used, as Williams said he did not want to be a " snitch. The San Francisco Chronicle writer Bob Egelko doubted this method, based on the courts handling the appeals, and quoted Austin Sarat , professor of law and politics at Amherst College and author of Mercy on Trial, a book about clemency: I know of no case in which a death row inmate has been spared solely on the basis of post-conviction rehabilitation. Supporters of Williams also made another plea directly to Governor Schwarzenegger to stay the execution. In the hour, they interviewed advocates of both sides of the issue and expressed their support of the impending execution. Celebrities also joined to stop the execution, including Snoop Dogg , who appeared at a clemency rally wearing a shirt advertising the Save Tookie website and performed a song he had written for Williams. Williams to join me in sending a message to all communities that we should all unite in peace. In his denial, Governor Schwarzenegger cited the following: Stanley Williams insists he is innocent, and that he will not and should not apologize or otherwise atone for the murders of the four victims in this case. Without an apology and atonement for these senseless and brutal killings there can be no redemption. In this case, the one thing that would be the clearest indication of complete remorse and full redemption is the one thing Williams will not do. He states that he had observed Oglesby receive police reports on Williams and others. Oglesby told Von Ellerman that he was using the documents to testify against Williams and others "to gain a reduction or eliminate charges against him. He was the 12th person to be executed by the state of California following the U. Supreme Court decision of Gregg v. It has nothing to do with machismo, with manhood, or with some pseudo former gang street code. This is pure faith, and predicated on my redemption. So, therefore, I just stand strong and continue to tell you, your audience, and the world that I am innocent and, yes, I have been a wretched person, but I have redeemed myself. And whether others choose to believe that I have redeemed myself or not, I worry not, because I know and God knows, and you can believe that all of the youths that I continue to help, they know, too. So with that, I am gratefulâ€¦I say to you and everyone else, God bless. Witnesses described the mood in the execution chamber as somber, and Williams showed no resistance as he was led into the execution chamber. After Williams was strapped to the gurney, he struggled against the straps holding him down to look up at the press gallery behind him, and to exchange glances with his supporters. And that is exactly what he did. He kept them on, and he kept lookingâ€¦" With a look of frustration on his face, Williams angrily asked the technicians, "You guys doing that right? Williams shed one silent tear but otherwise showed no emotion as he was executed. Kevin Fagan, a reporter for the San Francisco Chronicle , wrote a detailed description of the execution: The most notable thing was that Williams had supporters at the back of the roomâ€¦ Mrs.

Share 3 triplet Pookies, uncommon and rare due to being easy to kill in gang: And they said they are "the face of real life children Pookies are always yellow and they are the most known and numerous type of baby in the game, the other one being chicks which are the normal babies and kids. Orphan is when both parents of an underage are dead. They hatch from weird eggs that are different than normal penguin eggs, it is unknown where the eggs come from. Most pookies only like females which is against the law in real life, one of the main reasons Agent Extreme makes fun of them, calls them Orphans, and makes them sad and cry, then he kills them after getting their hopes down. Basically, no Pookies are smart and wise. Keep in mind that Pookies are usually teenagers and even adults pretending to be baby penguins on a videogame, but always playing with inappropriate ways. Pookies can be commonly found during the Afternoon and the Evening in Penguin Standard Time, in the same places they used to go. It is unknown why Pookies are even called Pookies in the first place. It is also unknown where the word even originated from as well. Some Pookie haters believe it is from the word "Spooky". Makes sense due to how scary Pookies are. Some Pookie Haters also believe the name originated from "Poop", which also makes sense due to how terrible Pookies are as well. It could also be from "poop" due to how pookies poop so much. Some Pookies can be killed, however they will be back when you go away or simply log off and return. Still there are many of them. They are characterized for being very dumb. They are kind of different to CPR pookies. They come in different colors, they are very rare, they cannot get a place to get adopted because there is currently no pet shop on CPI, they have better made clothes because of the clothing customizer, and they are very hard to skill. You can find one if you pay attention, they use a tutu and white tights some come with white tights with a buckle decal, and often use words as "cries", "WAAHH", "goo goo". Because they have never played CP they do not know what skill means. It is very recommended by Agent Boo to Protest instead of skilling. They are a mockery to every real life orphans: Pookies claim and they all clearly said it to have no family and pretending to be poor and hungry but they are clothed like normal or rich penguins and often carries toys, plushies, make up stuff and even a bag full of their toys. And people are being blinded by their cringy attitudes They report people for nothing and only for their own selfish pleasure. That is why they got so many people angry at them and Pookies claim they did nothing, playing the fake victims. Like all kind of Pookies, Tummies are also a mockery to real life birth babies: They even talk when they are inside of the mother, again inaccurate. Also they are breaking the rule of CP: And that is why they are the most cancerous kind of all the Pookies. The truth is that all Divas are the real faces of Pookies: Pookies think they talk like babies: They all talk this way since their creation and it looks really idiotic. In Petshops, Pookies were so many that they cause to lag the rooms, being unable to buy a damn puffle. And they are doing it on purpose. They also love to block doors for fun, which make people angry at them, then Pookie Lovers claim they did nothing wrong as always. All Pookies need attention because they are spoiled idiots that love being attention whores: Pookies and Habbo Babies have a lot of common: And Habbo Babies were way before Pookies, being in while Pookies were made in, which it can mean Babies from Habbo decided to migrate to Club Penguin and put their ugly roleplays Businessmoose is a known former Moderator in the Club Penguin Staff Member to hate Pookies, being maybe the only one staff to notice the Pookies. Rsnails do dislike the Pookies about their acting and behavior but it is yet to be confirmed. They are maybe the 2 Staff to hate Pookies. They have their own language called "Pookiese" with their own Pookie Vocabulary as well. No one knows why they are called Pookies or even where the word originated from. The pookies were discolored, but in the show it showed the main protagonist being scared off by a Pookie whenever the main protagonist saw one. The only thing people do know, is that Pookies started appearing in, around the same year when Disney bought Club Penguin. In, Pookies started to become popular. Nothing else is known about it. They go to the Pet Shop and normally say "Free Egg! If the egg does not get adopted, it may hatch in the Pet shop. The eggs pookies hatch from are notably different in color and shape from regular eggs, such as the ones chicks hatch from. It is unknown where the pookie eggs come from and how they got to Club Penguin. Despite having evolved from reptiles, cats and dogs hatching from eggs is weird, because they are mammals. All Pookies are the same, they are all Divas. Just like this one in this pic, causing drama. Pookie Tummy no age - They are the complete opposite of Eggs. Then they are all red since they are covered in blood and you have to clean them up. They are vulnerable when they are about to be out of the womb, you have to beat them and kill the mother, which is very simple. They are the most cancerous type of Pookies to ever exist. They are dumb because birds do not give live birth, they hatch from eggs. Usually are put up for adoption at the Pet Shop so that their mumu or dada picks a different pookie. Act like orphans when put up for adoption. Prep - Selfish. Think themselves as the best ones. Only think on themselves. Like to hang out at the stadium, university and Dance Club. Females think that they must have a boyfriend in the blue team. Usually put up their pookie for adoption and pick a different one. Unusually keep their biological Pookie. Old around 70 - Grammy if female and grandpa if male. They are easy to kill. Death at around 70 - Rare. Notable Pookies There are some notable Pookies on Club Penguin, that you may want to keep an eye out for. You can also put a picture of them, where you saw them, and what server they most commonly go on. You can also put some notes about them as well, such as what type of Pookie they are. Sales had three siblings: Marvin Supman , Dr. His older brothers had been nicknamed "Ham Bone" and "Chicken Bone. When he became a disc jockey, he began using the stage name Soupy Hines. After he became established, it was decided that "Hines" was too close to the Heinz soup company, so he chose Sales, in part after vaudeville comedian Chic Sale. One of the characters he created was "White Fang", a large dog that played outrageous practical jokes on the seamen. While at Marshall, he performed in nightclubs as a comedian, singer and dancer. He moved to Cincinnati, Ohio in , where he worked as a morning radio DJ and performed in nightclubs. Improvised and slapstick in nature, Lunch with Soupy Sales was a rapid-fire stream of comedy sketches, gags, and puns, almost all of which resulted in Sales receiving a pie in the face, which became his trademark. Sales developed pie-throwing into an art form: He claimed that he and his visitors had been hit by more than 20, pies during his career. Sales occasionally took the studio cameras to the lawn of the Detroit Public Library , located across the street from the TV studios, and talked with local students walking to and from school. His lunchtime program on weekdays was moved to early morning opposite Today and Captain Kangaroo. One of his character puppets was Willy the Worm, a "balloon" propelled worm that emerged from its house and used a high pitched voice to announce birthdays or special events on the noontime show; but the character never appeared when Soupy moved to Los Angeles. In his lunchtime show, Sales always wore an orlon fabric sweater. In many of his shows, he appeared in costume, performed his dance, the Soupy Shuffle , introduced many characters such as Nicky Nooney, the Mississippi Gambler, etc. The show briefly went back on the ABC network as a late night fill-in for The Steve Allen Show in but was canceled after three months. All of the puppets on the show during its Los Angeles run were also operated by Clyde Adler. His fame was significant enough to warrant utilizing him as a "Tonight" show guest host in the period between Jack Paar and Johnny Carson. This version was seen locally until September 2, The New Soupy Sales Show: Appearing on the show were both puppets and live performers. A great deal of his show was characters off camera, an arm or a voice and the viewer had to, like in old radio, visualize in their minds what the characters looked like, for instance, White Fang and Black Tooth. The same applied to many visitors at his front door. All one would see was an arm and hear a voice as Soupy described the person out there. White Fang, "The Biggest and Meanest Dog in the USA", who appeared only as a giant white shaggy paw with black triangular felt "claws", jutting out from the corner of the screen. Fang spoke with unintelligible short grunts and growls, which Soupy repeated back in English, for comic effect. Black Tooth, "The Biggest and Sweetest Dog in the USA", also seen only as a giant black paw with white triangular felt claws, and with more feminine, but similarly unintelligible, dialogue. She caused some rivalry of affections between Black Tooth and White Fang, but later jilted them both for Joe Dogmaggio. Pookie the Lion, a lion puppet appearing in a large window behind Soupy s , was a hipster with a rapier wit. In the Detroit shows, Pookie never spoke but communicated in whistles. That puppet also was used to mouth the words while pantomiming novelty records on the show. Hippy the Hippo, a minor character who occasionally appeared with Pookie the Lion. Frank Nastasi gave Hippy a voice for the New York shows. Clyde Adler also voiced Hippy in the shows done in the late s. Regular live characters included: The Mask, evil nemesis of Philo Kvetch, revealed in the last episode to be Nikita Khrushchev , who had been deposed about a year earlier. With animated squeezings of his rubber air bulb, the latex accordion worm flexed in and out of a little apple. Willy was "The Sickest Worm in all of Dee-troit" and suffered from a perennial cold and comically explosive sneeze. Clark Bent, actually Clark Kent or "Superman. He always had trouble finding a phone booth to change into "Superman. Presidents" from their pants and pocketbooks. Sales described the incident in his autobiography Soupy Sez! My Life and Zany Times. During the show, Sales would answer a knock at the door and interact with an actor seen only as an arm. Occasionally, the person at the door was a celebrity, such as Burt Lancaster or Fess Parker. Some reports say the gag was furthered by the crew switching the studio monitors so that Sales would think the stripper image was going out over the air. A second, nonbroadcasting, camera captured the uncensored version, while a stagehand moved a balloon back and forth in the doorway, giving at least some indication to the home viewers what was supposed to be behind the door. Sales was forced to try to keep the show going without revealing the risqué scene backstage. The prank was recreated when the show originated in Los Angeles. The Los Angeles prank footage survives. When Sinatra started his own record label, Reprise Records, he signed Sales to a recording contract. He had been a guest panelist on one episode of the original version in Sales usually was the first panelist introduced and occupied the chair on the far left side facing the camera, next to Arlene Francis. Sales was also a panelist on the revival of To Tell the Truth; he had appeared as a guest on the show during the mid- to late s. Other game show appearances included over a dozen episodes of the original Match Game from to as well as one week of the revived version in , a week of shows on the s edition of The Gong Show, a couple guest spots on Hollywood Squares December 12, and April 4, as well as a few appearances on the combined version Match Game-Hollywood Squares Hour in 1984 and a recurring role in all versions of Pyramid from to and He also made an appearance on Pictionary in Please help improve this section by adding citations to reliable sources. Unsourced material may be challenged and removed. His program was between the drive time shifts of Don Imus morning and Howard Stern afternoon, with whom Sales had an acrimonious relationship. On December 21, 1997, Stern revealed this was a stunt staged for "theater of the mind" and to torture Sales; in truth, the piano was never harmed. Sales autographing books at the Big Apple Convention in Manhattan, He had a sporadic film career that spanned over 40 years, including:
