

1: Journey Beyond Linear Time: Experience Life Through the Passage of Spirit by Raphael Jara

The Journey Beyond Life covers what most of the world knows about the next life, then carries us one step further, with additional knowledge of our eternal self and family relationships that will strengthen our love for our Savior, erase fear of death in the reality of the other side and increase our commitment to live a better life.

The real reason is actually our own potential, either we do not have right kind of potential or we are unable to release our potential. Everybody has potential, it is life itself. The potential cannot be cultivated in a day. It gets accumulated over the years. What ever potential you have today is the sum total of what you did in past and in present life. The right deeds cultivate positive potential while wrong deeds cultivate negative potential. All these potentials are not in active form, they are sleeping potentials. They do no good to our life. They are like the treasure lying in a locker whose key is lost. Nobody can do anything about the quantity and quality of your potential which you have already accumulated. However there are ways, which can help you in releasing your dormant potential, the positive potential. May be it is not in the stars, May be it is not in the lines on the palm, May be it is not in the crystal ball, Not even in well thought out strategies, It might only be words, In those few words may lies the secret, Waiting to trigger the piled up potential. The Laws Whatever experience we gain in our life, never goes waste. Death is not the end of life it is a new beginning, it is only a door to another life. Whatever we have experienced will get passed on to next life. Life is not simply a material existence. Everybody lives in a unique state of mind. Since childhood the mind experiences various transformations. Our daily experiences, likes and dislikes develop the mind and it gets set into a unique state. As we grow old, mind settles down to a unique permanent state. However our memories allow us to relive those states of mind for brief periods which we have experienced in the past. Reliving those states is the way to know what went wrong. Thus our every feeling, thoughts and act interact with outside world and put us in certain situation. It may be a happy situation or unhappy situation. Based on the result we keep on interacting in various ways to remain happy. Unhappiness arises out of our limitations. Everybody has to take the burden of his physical and mental and spiritual limitations. With out burden there is no life, these burdens makes us act in such a way so as to lessen these burden. Moving around, gaining knowledge, interacting with others makes us strong and extend the limitation imposed on us. Unfortunately the interactions are not simple like collision of two balls. The results are not always predictable and may set a chain reaction giving rise to multiple long term results. No body can claim to predict and change your future drastically. However there are simple laws to guide your destiny. You are what you repeatedly feel, think and do. You are the result of your karmas. Like attract like 4. Your future depends on the fact; in what way your present status is aligned with the outside world nature and society people. Nature and society is dynamic process which keeps on changing. You have to keep on realigning to maintain your relevance. The potential of cluster keeps on increasing till it is triggered. The trigger releases the potential. There are good and as well as bad clusters according to our karmas. Theory Simple things with less duration are easy to predict. But incidents which are separated by complex process and long period are difficult. Simple things follow laws of physics, chemistry, mathematics etc with little uncertainty and natural factors. But complex processes are governed by difficult laws in which natural and life forces has dominant role. Life is an extremely complex system interconnected to many things in many ways. An aero plane cannot fly until its complex system of machinery and controls are not energized. To get access or to set them in motion, all complex system has a key or a switch. Life also has many keys and switches. When you press a button or click a mouse, the machine gets energized and automatically starts doing various functions. Similarly life has many buttons if you are aware of those buttons and press them many things in life starts functioning automatically. In our present day interlinked democratic society government decision is also a switch which automatically affects millions of people. In machines the functions of parts and results are rigidly and directly linked. There are few parts and they are linked with others in a well defined way and function according to well defined principle and formula. But in government decision the outcome is loosely linked in a probabilistic way. But if you hit a fellow being may be a stranger, with your fist, how he will react is uncertain. It is almost impossible to get the exact switch which controls our life, only most probable can be given. So we have to try more than one switch to arrive at a most appropriate one. The author has devised a simple questionnaire to determine the probable switches for anyone. Procedure It is true that during the course of life some peoples have natural trigger happens and their course of life suddenly changes. But all are not so lucky or unlucky course may change in an undesirable way also. How to make the course correction? The answer is hidden in our ancient and contemporary wisdom. In ancient times the seeker is given a small mantra verse by the master, which he has to recite. Zen masters when they know that his pupil has reached the stage of enlightenment they just clap or hit at the right moment to trigger the realization. Author intends to do something similar without your physical presence and profile. Based on the answers in questioner, a key or switch is generated; it may be anything like words, quotes, photos Most of us have huge potential to do and achieve something in life but those potential are in subdued form, waiting for a spark to make them ignite and explode. The event or cause which may trigger will vary from person to person. Each person is subdued or constrained by- Birth- The basic nature an individual is born with As a result of his karmas of previous birth. Some are aggressive, happy go lucky, down to earth etc, Upbringing- The circumstances in which you grow. Family, education, society etc Past events and experiences- Life is full of incidents, they leave there mark on us. Habits- They are formed when our basic tendencies past karmas interact with outside world. Education- whatever we are taught at home and at institutes and work places moulds our thoughts and feeling. Etc Every person is different and have different destiny. Nobody can accurately predict and change the course of destiny. Words and sentences have different meaning to different people. It is for the individual to find the meaning in those words and sentences. We will only give the words and sentences best suited to you. You simply have to fill the following form and send it to us through Email. We after analyzing will send you the wisdom which may either be a verse, quote, a paragraph, picture, photo, and music in presentation form, instruction or sometime just nothing. Do not wait for it. It will arrive when time is ripe. Write it down and place it somewhere from where it can catch your eyes e. Same should not be recited in a disciplined way as a routine. The trick is simple, you should not find the key; instead key should find you. There is a reason for that. We want you to overcome the problems with determination. Take it as the period of learning and experience. It is a great opportunity to build right potential. You should not forget the clusters of bad negative potential. The process of overcoming the odds will consume your bad potential gradually, otherwise who knows the bad potential may self trigger some day and explode with drastic consequences. It is just like traveling to an unknown place. All the ups and down of traveling makes your journey exciting and enrich you to face any future problems, in the mean time it takes away your worries, stress and tensions. In fact going through all those experiences is an act of building a robust machine for yourself and its switches will be revealed to you some day. However we will be of help in preventing you from falling into a ditch on the way. We will bring you out from a situation of hopelessness. Remember no doctor can cure your old age; no power can change your destiny. There are 74 nos of questions.

A Word on Herbalism Roughly four years ago I began my journey into herbalism. Since then I have learned so much, but have barely scrapped the surface. My health, diet, and views have changed astronomically over the past few years. When I share information, I do so as a beginner. I plan to list out my experiences, not give expert health advice. Herbalism is the use of plants as an alternative form of medicine. Instead herbalism seeks treatment that has less harmful side-effects first. Herbalism views health and medicine differently then conventional methods. There are many different ideals that are connected to natural medicines. I have found these to have improved my life. In the future, when I refernce herbal remedies, I do so with these principles in mind. First, Do No Harm This is the first rule of herbalism. Many conventional treatments contain harmful side effects. They heal one area and may harm another. For example, Motrin is eliminated through the kidneys. Large amounts over time can harm your kidneys. Many medications can cause stomach upset and nausea. By the end of the bottle I was struggling with a lot of nausea. In many cases people take medication to treat the symptoms caused by other treatments. In herbalism the aim is to choose medicine with less harmful side effects. When I feel an illness setting in I make tea out of elderberry flowers. This boosts my immune system so my body can destroy the illness before it takes hold. The worse side effect of the tincture is the taste, which is over quickly. Both are easier for my body to break down. This technique is usually effective. My recent illness is the only exception so far. This principle also applies to lifestyle choices. I consider what I ate that caused the onset all that buttery movie theater popcorn seemed like a good idea when I was watching Spiderman. I learn my lesson. I avoid what caused the problem kindaâ€¦ I have a popcorn weakness. The theaters make it sooo good. I do no harm. Treat the Cause, Not the Symptoms This is the next big difference in philosophy. In herbalism you find the cause and treat it first. Conventional medicine does not always aim for the cause. Headaches are the perfect example. When they hit, most people take a pain pill. The pill only treats a symptom, it does not solve the cause of the headache. Herbalism seeks out the cause. Most headaches are due to dehydration. The cure is to drink more water. Often I develop headaches from congestion. For those I can drink hot peppermint tea or take a decongestant. Could it be a symptom of another issue? Just be aware of the cause. Medicinal remedies are plants and food are plants. The chemicals interact with your body if you eat it as a headache cure or if you serve it for dinner. Many medicinal plants are used to promote overall health. Many references list all the good vitamins and minerals of different plants. I use them everyday. They interact with my body on a daily bases to increase and maintain health. I develop a kind of relationship with my plants. Whole Plant Medicine Any plant contains thousands of chemicals. Have humans discovered how all of them affect and interact with the body? Not by a long shot. We do not fully understand how the chemicals interact with us and themselves. In conventional medicine a few compounds are taken and used in large amounts. I believe that when a whole plant is used the body benefits. We have adapted to the plants around us. Studies can be confusing. Science is not at fault. There are factors that are not included in the studies because we have not discovered, or fully understood them. Everything In Moderation There can be too much of a good thing. The body needs and craves salt, sugars, and fats. They are good for usâ€¦ in moderation. Too much will harm us. It is the same with other nutrients. That miracle super food may be good for you, but not if you eat a ton every single day. Many plants are considered bad since studies show they cause harm. In these studies they often take a large concentrated amount of one chemical from the plant. When we actually consume the plant we intake a far smaller dose and all the other chemicals that interact with it. A Lifestyle Instead of a Pill Herbalism promotes a healthy lifestyle. My medicine is my life choices instead of a pill. Many are used to a pill that will immediately remove any symptom. Herbalism improves health gradually through an overall lifestyle choice. I used to have terrible sinus issues. Every night I took a decongestant which lessened the pressure enough that I could sleep. I woke up to find the medicine wore off and I was extremely stuffy. I never found it. I tried everything and nothing worked as well and as quick as the decongestant I used. I lost hope that I would find it, but stuck to herbalism as I felt it was better for my other ailments. Then on a cold May day I realized something. That winter I had been able to breath through my nose. Gradually my health improved. I still get stuffy sometimes and need decongestant, but it is no longer the norm. The only explanation I have is lifestyle change. Herbalism encouraged me to adopt healthier changes. I also slowly developed the habit of drinking hot herbal tea daily. Many herbs work best by building up over time. If I had jump in faster I may have experienced a sooner change. It took patience, but was soooo worth it. Other then congestion I have noticed other gradual changes in my health. I become sick much less often then my friends and family. When I feel sick, the symptoms are usually not as severe and end quicker then others. I have felt stronger and healthier overall. I have become more in tune with my body. Plus I have learned so much more about plants and medicine. So there you have it. To me, the practice of herbalism is less about the medicine and more of a philosophy of care.

The Journey Beyond Life has 20 ratings and 8 reviews. Tim said: Guess what? There is no volume Two. Not sure if this was written to capitalize upon the d.

In the beginning was the "Word"! I had already resigned my post of manager of university partnerships and scholarships based in Kabul. And I was charged with bringing the American and the Afghan together to do it. In the back of my head it was between 11 and Did not matter to me! I smoked about three packs of cheap illegally imported dry Japanese Seven Stars or the good old Camel Cigarettes a Day. Sometimes I drank bad coffee. I felt like I was trying to bring together the two opposites of a magnetic together in the center to truly listen to each other. And I was fighting the battle inside my head every minute of my waking hours and in my nightmares. I left the organization for whose mission of Family Health can only be achieved by covering the family degrees. In other words health is not just mechanical to be fixed in the hospital. I left it broken-hearted! But That full story is part of the career section I am working on for this blog. Here in this section, I have promised you to write about my education. So I am doing exactly that here. You will also have to understand that I differentiate between my education and my learning. You know these days all the talk in the town is about machine learning. Well, we will get to that later in this journey. We are just beginning here. I promise I will try to remind you everytime we need to wear seatbelts in this journey on the flying carpet. But my friend, You will have to promise that you will make sure to wear Your seat-belt when you are driving a car. See the difference between flying carpets and driving machines is that flying carpets do not need your attention. And since we both know how distracted you are â€” the nice car makers in Michigan or across the border in Canada have put ropes to tie yourself down. Just in case if you get that text that you have waiting for from your bff! You promise to do that and we are all good to go! But then again how do you trust people to do the right thing! In Ancient China, they believed that people will govern themselves if they are allowed to make their own decisions. According to that philosophy, I should not even ask you to promise me to do the right thing! And I should not have to promise that I will do the right things! Damn it we both know the right thing to do without anyone else telling us. We will get to the part about Muslim Shiekh and Sufi Mohammad al-Ghazali later, and that is not part of my education but that is part of my learning, he told me that knowledge is already in my heart. It is like a little fire shimmering. It was my choice to fuel it to create a SUN or let it shimmer under mountains of ashes but never die. I did the first half of my life. I am doing the second in the other half.

By Lisa Brick The way our culture and technology have developed it is possible and easy to spend days face to face with our smart machines indoors. While we connect with people digitally, on phone, facebook, through pictures and video, there is an increasing tendency to move through our days with our headphones on, viewing small, medium, and large screens while avoiding eye contact or communion with the environment or the actual living, breathing human beings around us. Connecting Time allows us to feel that we belong to a larger whole than the body we inhabit. We are more than thoughts emerging from a body. We are whole beings connected to the tribe of humanity and the ecosystem and planet from which it sprung and from which it receives its sustenance. How often are you aware of the people who grow, pack, deliver, unpack, and display your food for purchase? What about the mechanics that keep the subway and highway systems running, the individuals who clean it, the men and women who plan and manage it? How often do you allow yourself to feel the rain? To soak in the warmth of the sunshine or the cooling effect of the breeze? To wonder at the spiders that catch the ants and other smaller insects in their webs to eat? Whether we are aware of it or not we exist in a complex and interconnected web of life, all mutually arising and interdependent. Connecting Time is when we allow ourselves to feel this, to appreciate it, and to act, moved by appreciation. Our brains are biologically wired to connect. When we choose to be intentional about feeling the connection we are capable of within ourselves and between others and our planet we experience being grounding. This grounding stabilizes our moods by honoring our biological wiring to be connected. We are not alone. We are supported at all times, regardless of whether we are aware of it or not. When we are conscious of the connections we are more present, powerful. Connecting Time honors our power, purpose, abilities, and the reality of our existence. When we honor our connections we experience gratitude for being alive on this beautiful planet of ours. Gratitude gives birth to generosity and engenders a desire to provide and protect that which nourishes us. This desire to provide and protect moves us to give back to that which gives forth, a desire otherwise known as generosity. Through Connecting Time we interact with people in positive ways. We support their happiness, their success, their joy and health. We become selfish in the most positive of ways—we want what is best for others so they can continue to love and support us! It is the basis of sustainable contribution to others and to our planet. This is a different and more enlivening way of approaching our world than the usual competitive environment our modern society projects. Being together in person adds dimensions of experience that are absent with digitized communication, like touch, smell, body language, and eye contact. These additional dimensions of in-person communion utilize important brain capabilities which are underutilized and can atrophy when the main form of connection is digital. Whenever possible make a daily practice of connecting in-person with other human beings. Connecting Time with the planet is getting out in nature, whether it is a park, a forest, or beach and feeling the vastness of the sky, the warmth of the sun, the movement of the clouds, the brightness and changing faces of the moon, the trees, plants, insects, birds, fish, and other mammals with which we share the planet. Connecting time with the planet is also caring for it—disposing of litter in appropriate places, finding ways to generate less of it ex. Be aware, know intellectually, and feel emotionally that both receiving and giving are happening. You receive so very much from society and our planet every moment—receive appreciatively and give back generously. You will be creating a sustainable cycle of mutual benefit! Go on, be selfish and give yourself Connecting Time to be and create wellness. Lisa Brick, Journey Beyond Partner Our team of coaches at JBD is passionate about helping men and women navigate the emotional difficulties of relationships, breakups and divorce. We work together with you to open the possibility that your current relationship challenges can lead to a rewarding voyage of self-discovery and an immensely more pleasing life experience. Tommy Price is powerful heart-centered Transformation Coach. He understands transformation from the inside out through his own deep personal transformational work becoming a coach. The word transformation is used a great deal but is often watered down. The example of a caterpillar to a butterfly is the usual example. Most believe the caterpillar goes into the cocoon, grows wings, and comes out a butterfly. The process is much more extreme and transformational than that simple example. The most extreme part occurs in the cocoon and is never seen. If seen, the process stops. Inside the cocoon the caterpillar changes at the genetic level dissolving itself to free up what scientist call imaginal cells. There is one imaginal cell for every part of the future butterfly. These imaginal cells live off the dissolved caterpillar, grow, and become a beautiful butterfly. The work inside the cocoon is extreme, deep, and messy but worth it and necessary for the butterfly. If the extreme, deep, messy work never happens, no butterfly emerges. Maybe you see the beautiful people around you as butterflies. You may consider our self to be the caterpillar desiring to sprout wings and fly free. You never see the work those beautiful people do to transform into the person in front of you. Tommy believes you and I have imaginal cells in our being desiring to be released. Letting go of baggage is the first step in your transformation and releasing your imaginal cells into your being where they grow and expand. From unhappy and divorced after 29 years, to the first ever healthy relationship with a woman. From the day in and day out drag of a job to successful hypnotherapist. Everyday my clients take on messy, deep, exciting, life changing work to transform their lives. You too are able to transform your life to whatever you imagine.

Physical stimulation, both passive and active, supports creativity, mental and physical health, happiness, and brain growth. Exposing yourself to new physical experiences, learning new skills, practicing and refining existing skills, expanding your capabilities ever so gently from wherever you are now, results in your brain releasing certain neurohormones. The laying down of new neural networks is how your brain stays healthy and grows! By reinforcing neural networks that result from exposing yourself to new experiences and information in multiple ways you are keeping your brain growing regardless of your age and supporting it to be more efficient at remembering new information and connecting that information to what you already know. Maintaining a flexible, capable brain is vital for brain health and for designing and implementing a life you love. Physical Time is also crucial for emotional health. Stress hormones are disassembled in the lungs, liver, kidney, and through the skin when exercising strenuously. Stress hormones, in addition to compromising immunity and sugar metabolism, interrupt the transmission of information in and out of the prefrontal cortex. When you are experiencing significant fear or anger you are unable to think logically, process your emotions effectively, experience pleasure, or relax. The more physically engaged you are, the quicker your body can disassemble the stress hormones coursing through your bloodstream. On top of deconstructing the hormones that create stress and anxiety, when engaged in prolonged 20 minute plus physical activity your body produces endorphins. Endorphins contribute to feelings of relaxation, peace, and pleasure. The next time you are experiencing significant fear when there is no immediate threat heart pounding, breaking out into a sweat, tunnel vision focus on what you are afraid of, etc. Physical Time plays a major role in the elimination of toxins from the body by: It increases strength and flexibility. Your confidence increases, you look and move better, and you have more energy to put towards your life pursuits. Even sexuality is enhanced with regular physical activity. Physical Time ranges from gentle to extreme. Extreme physical activity on a regular basis is not necessary for well-being and is often if not always detrimental in the long run.
