Finding Joy on the Mountain Climb is a story of encouragement and hope, enriched with scripture and prayer. Written during a chronic illness battle, Arnold-Grine shares how a deep personal relationship with God helped her take One Step at a Time.

Her parents, Joseph Davidman and Jeanette Spivack married, arrived in America in the late 19th century. Davidman grew up in the Bronx with her younger brother, Howard, and with both parents employed, even during the Great Depression. She was provided with a good education, piano lessons and family vacation trips. I was an atheist and the daughter of an atheist". She wrote about the influence of these stories: Lewis, who in turn led me to religion. Davidman resigned her teaching position to work full-time in writing and editing. She joined the American Communist Party in 1936. Although much of her work during this period reflected her politics as a member of the American Communist Party, this volume of poetry was much more than implied by the title, and contained forty-five poems written in traditional and free verse that were related to serious topics of the time such as the Spanish Civil War, the inequalities of class structure and male-female relationship issues. She wrote at least four, but they were not used and she returned to New York City to work for The New Masses where she wrote a controversial movie column, reviewing Hollywood movies in a manner described as "merciless in her criticisms. During the marriage, Gresham wrote his most famous work Nightmare Alley in 1941, while Davidman did freelance work and cared for the house and children. Gresham sometimes had drunken outbursts, once smashing his guitar on a chair. All my defenses "all the walls of arrogance and cocksurenness and self-love behind which I had hid from God" went down momentarily and God came in. Davidman at first studied Judaism, but decided to study all religions and concluded that "the Redeemer who had made himself known, whose personality I would have recognized among ten thousand" He was Jesus. In 1942, they became members of the Pleasant Plains Presbyterian Church. Both experimented with L. The couple became estranged, even though they continued to live together. After an introduction by a fellow American writer, Chad Walsh, Davidman began a correspondence with C. Lewis[edit] Davidman had become interested in C. Lewis while still in America. She first met writer C. Lewis Jack in August 1942, when she made a trip to the United Kingdom, after a two-year correspondence with him. After several lunch meetings and walks accompanying Davidman and his brother, Warren Lewis wrote in his diary that "a rapid friendship" had developed between his younger brother and Davidman, whom he described as "a Christian convert of Jewish race, medium height, good figure, horn rimmed specs, quite extraordinarily uninhibited. Though Davidman was deeply in love with Lewis there was no reciprocation on his side. Davidman intended to try to save the marriage, but she agreed to a divorce after a violent encounter with Gresham, who had resumed drinking. He married Rodriguez when the divorce became final in August 1943. Lewis paid the school fees and found Davidman and her sons a house in Oxford close to The Kilns. Joy was the only woman whom he had met My mistress; but at the same time all that any man friend and I have good ones has ever been to me. It sold 3, copies, double that of US sales. Lewis agreed to enter into a civil marriage contract with her so that she could continue to live in the UK, telling a friend that "the marriage was a pure matter of friendship and expediency". In October 1943, Davidman was walking across her kitchen when she tripped over the telephone wire and fell to the floor, thereby breaking her left upper leg. At the Churchill Hospital, Oxford, she was diagnosed with incurable cancer, with bone metastases from breast carcinoma. It was at this time that Lewis recognized that he had fallen in love with her, realizing how despondent he would feel to lose her. He wrote to a friend: You would be surprised or perhaps you would not? In March 1944, Warren Lewis wrote in his diary: Sentence of death has been passed on Joy, and the end is only a matter of time. Lewis had developed to the point that they sought a Christian marriage. She helped Lewis with his writing, organized his financial records and wardrobe, and had the house renovated and redecorated. The couple went on a belated honeymoon to Wales and then by air to Ireland. In October 1944, a check-up revealed that the cancer had returned, and as of March 1945, was not responding to radiation therapy, as before. In April 1945, Lewis took Davidman on a holiday to Greece to fulfill her lifelong wish to visit there, but her condition worsened quickly upon return from the trip, and she died on 13

Playa Del Carmen, Tulum Because we were up until 4am from partying the night before, we left this day to wake up late. Remember the rain changed our plans a bit? We had planned to go to Tulum, Coba, and some Cenotes but we had to cut it out of our schedule. Instead, after waking up late, we headed to Tulum where we arrived too late to enter the ruins. So instead we enjoyed walking around and eating some delicious Mayan food. There is tons of food and shopping options. Next time we go, we hope to stay in Cancun and enjoy this city with more time. Xcaret Some may think the cost is pricey, but with everything that Xcaret offers Juan and I believe it is SO worth it. We rushed through everything because we wanted to see as much as we could. I was so glad we did! We followed the map and started with seeing all the animals. This was followed by attractions, then water activities, and last with the shows. Our favorites attractions were the Mexican Cemetery and the Underground Rivers where we saw real bats hanging in the caves. We left the Underground River until the end so we could change into dry clothes and be ready for the shows. We did all three in a row! Again, the food was amazing. Chichen Itza, Yucatan You cannot go to Cancun and not experience one of the wonders of the world! We learned about the Mayan ceremonies that took place at one time and got a chance to take pictures of the famous ruins. It was so much information it was hard to retain, but we gained so much knowledge about the country we were born in. Though we only had 15 minutes here, we enjoyed it a lot. Another stop included a visit to the cenote X-Cajum which was probably one of our favorite experiences in all our trip. To swim in such natural body of water and beautiful features was just amazing. Another stop included a pit stop for lunch. All of this included free drinks on the bus and a guided tour in English or Spanish. Hotel We had originally planned to be at the hotel on Thursday but the thunderstorm forced us to change it from Sunday to Thursday. On these last two days, we decided to get an all-inclusive hotel which is completely worth it! We took these days to rest before heading back home. We definitely wanted to arrive well rested instead of tired. Let me tell you that we regretted not spending more days at the beach or in this case at an all-inclusive hotel. We loved that the hotel was beautiful and gave us an incredible view of the beach. We loved that it had great options and delicious food. And we loved that it had awesome pools, which we happened to spend almost a whole day at the one next to the bar in front of the beach. The colors were so unnatural and something we had never experienced. It was almost crystal clear and had different shades of blue. When we rented a jet ski, we had the opportunity to go deeper into the ocean. The color changes as you go farther. The funnest part of swimming in the warm sea, was fighting against the waves. We definitely became children at this point. And with memories of a spectacular trip, we headed home with a vacation experience we will never forget! Have you ever been to Cancun? What was your favorite experience or what did you like best?

To empower women and men to find peace, joy, and purpose in life by giving them the tools to heal physically, emotionally, mentally and financially.

Joy on the Mountain! Before I start, I would just like to say, He is risen! He is risen indeed! Today we rejoice on a Mountain of Glory; and as we rejoice, we see who the fool really is, and where the joy really is. In our Old Testament reading, Isaiah compares heavenly life to a great feast on a glorious mountain: It takes nine months of waiting, but the experience of seeing your new born baby for the first time is amazing beyond words! It was well worth the wait, to say the least! There are many seasons of waiting that we have to go through in this journey of life. In fact, in a way, life itself is one big season of waiting. As Scripture says, no one who waits for the Lord will be put to shame, or made a fool of. In the Church Year, we have this season of waiting called Lent. No one likes to be made a fool of. They even insisted that He be crucified, which was considered the most humiliating way for a person to die. They did that to try to destroy His reputation so that no one would believe in Him after He was gone. They failed miserably, because here we are today, along with countless followers of Christ all around the world, singing for joy, proudly proclaiming His resurrection; shouting just as loud as we want: But hanging there on the cross, Jesus looked a failed fool. Finally, his suffering came to an end: He bowed His head and died. He defeated the devil; He saved the world! Then came the third day; His soul rejoined His body, and Jesus rose to life. Now we can see what God was doing all along, and it was brilliant! Jesus beat the devil at His own game; He used death to defeat death. Jesus died indeed; He rose indeed; He lives indeed; and He will raise us indeed. Paul makes the resurrection of our Lord clear and certain to us in our Epistle today. He reminds us that Jesus rose on the third day and appeared to Peter, and then to the disciples, and to of the brothers, and to his earthly brother, James, and to the apostles, and later on, even to Paul, himself. In our Gospel this morning, we heard the story of the women at the tomb. When they got there, to their surprise the stone was already rolled away, and a young man in white, an angel, was sitting on it. He was waiting for them with instructions from Jesus: Let me answer that with a story. And you know how young children can hear things differently than adults do? Actually, that may have been the case, or not far off. Because the first thing Jesus did after he rose was to descend into the prison of Hell; not to suffer, but to show himself alive; to show the devil that he had failed to stop him from saving the world; and to show the world who the fool really is. The devil was a fool to think that He could match wits with Jesus. He never had a chance. Jesus is unmatched in power, in wisdom, in strategy, in mercy, and in all His divine attributes, his amazing qualities. In Biblical times, kings were very wealthy, and give extraordinary gifts. No king back then, no billionaire today, can give the kind of gifts Jesus can give. No one can forgive like he can forgive; His forgiveness gives eternal life. No one can love so unconditionally, as he so loves the world. No one can bring joy into life like He can, and no one can give life like He can; abundant, glorious, eternal, resurrected life. How foolish we would be to turn it down; how happy we are to have it; what a joy to know and believe the Easter Gospel; and what an honor to follow Christ. We rejoice to be loved here by our Lord, and to love one another here! We rejoice to live in His grace here, and share His mercy here! We rejoice to proclaim the Gospel here, and to shout: He is risen, indeed! May the joy of our risen Lord be yours forever, and may the peace of God, that passes understanding, guard your heart and mind, in Christ Jesus, our unmatched, victorious, wise and glorious, risen Lord.
