One room that we really need to stay on top of is the bedroom. In my opinion, when a pillow has outlived its usefulness, you need to get rid of it, not save it for what-ifs. Now, for the socks with holes in them that are really bad, those ones you can actually get rid of. The same goes for the single socks. And in fact, we are so passionate about this very topic that we have an article featuring 7 great uses for single socks. We all have these random pieces of jewelry that hang around and get passed over everytime we choose what to wear. The truth is, I know that there are lots of people in my life who would be interested in things like this. You can find someone else who might really love it. You can donate it to a second-hand shop. Or maybe you have shoes that you used to wear, but you never quite pick them to go with an outfit anymore but are still hanging on to them? The Junk Drawer The nightstand or dresser junk drawer is a common species in pretty much every bedroom, in pretty much the entire world. I go through mine a couple times a year because inevitably things just end up in there. So, get in there and declutter that drawer! There are so many people who will gladly accept donated magazines! He works from home now, but he still has all of these ties hanging around. White Undershirts White undershirts are funny things. Seriously though, if you would be horrified if anyone actually saw that shirt in public, get rid of it! Closet Cleanout I recommend cleaning out your closet twice a year when the seasons change. Doing this closet clean out twice a year is super helpful, it keeps you on top of what you have and what you need , and it inevitably ends up saving you closet space. A few years back when Chad and I did our initial closet cleaning video, we got rid of all of the mismatched wire and plastic hangers and moved on to wood hangers great deals on bulk wood hangers at Amazon! Once we did that we noticed that our closet just looks so much nicer and more uniform. Now, every now and then we do find a plastic or wire hanger circulating through and we just prune it out. Every week, Melissa delivers new videos dishing expert advice on cleaning products, tools, DIY substitutes, and practical, timesaving solutions to everyday problems.

I knew my followers would have some advice, or if nothing else, would empathize with me. Here are just some of the pictures that were shared or sent to me with their own junk drawer organization tips! She used iPhone and iPad boxes to create a home for all the odds and ends. Her hubby's stuff stays in the garage and the kids' stuff stays in their rooms. This is her little space! After my last house I knew I had to have it organized. So now I have a couple different organizers. So far, so good! You make each section the size you want. Same result but not nearly as large or impressive. The most typical place to find a junk drawer is in the kitchen, but sometimes they branch out to other parts of your home. Who wants to spend their time going through a drawerful of old and broken bits and pieces? But clearing out that drawer can have a whole lot of benefits. Not everything is suitable for donation. Likewise, if there are things in your junk drawer that might find a better home elsewhere, then put these to one side for relocation. So instead of letting them take up loads of space in your home, why not donate them? In fact, as you can probably tell by the names, Cell Phones for Soldiers and Phones 4 Charity are founded upon mobile phone donations! Most charitable organizations will accept them. However, it is better to check first. Not only could your used cell phones be recycled or passed on to someone in need, but donating them in this way is also beneficial for the environment as they contain materials that can be harmful if simply thrown away. Instead these materials can be re-used. Note, you may want to wipe your old phones first, in case they contain any personal data! Donating Old or Broken Jewelry You can also donate your old jewelry to help those in need. Most charities will accept donations, and then depending on the organizations, and the donation, they will either sell it on in one of their shops, auction it in the case of fine jewellery, melt it down or sell it for scrap. As such, pretty much anything goes. Fine jewelry, costume jewelry, broken or damaged pieces, single earrings, broken watches, you name it, you can donate it! What About Old Eyeglasses? Yup, you can donate those too! The old glasses are then given to people all over the world who may not be able to afford new ones, while the money raised from recycling goes toward setting up eye clinics in remote areas. This way, you can give someone the gift of better eyesight in ! Alternatively, and if appropriate, you could drop unwanted gifts or un-used items into your local hospital or church. They always appreciate donations, particularly toys for children. Ideally, your junk drawer should still contain the following:
