Kaddish and Other Poems () is a book of poems by Allen Ginsberg published by City Lights Bookstore.

Background[edit] The lead poem " Kaddish " also known as "Kaddish for Naomi Ginsberg ", was written in two parts written by Beat writer Allen Ginsberg, was first published in Kaddish and Other Poems. In the table of contents, the poem is titled "Kaddish: Ginsberg wrote the poem about his mother Naomi after her death in , who struggled with mental problems throughout her life. Naomi suffered many psychotic episodes both before Allen was born and while he was growing up. She went in and out of mental hospitals and was treated with medication, insulin shock therapy, and electroshock therapy. She died in an asylum in Kaddish in Judaism[edit] The title " Kaddish " refers to the mourning prayer or blessing in Judaism. Proposed film version[edit] Ginsberg wrote a screenplay based on the poem. Robert Frank was to direct it, but money could not be raised for the project. The Adventures of an American Theater Overview[edit] On Naomi Ginsberg[edit] Kaddish is not a linear story. Part I opens with Ginsberg reflecting on the passing of his mother. It tells of her being an immigrant from Russia, going to candy stores, eating ice cream and drinking soda. The poem suggests that she often looked to him for protection because of her paranoid fantasies and often confided in him. There were also times when most sounds and any light terrified her. Ginsberg does not only write about the bad times, but also the good times. The times when Naomi was doing well are explained at length and reflect the love and hope he had for his mother. At many points throughout the poem, Ginsberg comments on the approach of his own death. He also talks about other members of his family and events that surrounded his life with his mother, such as the Great Depression. It questions the importance of religious authority and authority in general. Each line is quite long, and Ginsberg has said these long lines are meant to be read in a single breath. It is as if the poem is just a collection of his memories spilled onto the page. There is no uniform structure to the poem. Some lines are indented, some are not. Ginsberg uses hyphens as punctuation often, and the sentences are often run-ons, brimming with different ideas and images. One interesting device Ginsberg uses in this poem is capitalization. The capitalization of the words denotes their heightened importance in the poem.
