The Kaplan Nursing School Admissions Test is a pre-admission assessment that predicts a student's nursing school success. Because the first step in any successful nursing program is selecting the correct students, a test that determines student aptitude is essential.

I was in school as well and worked , so I would have to set time aside to study for this exam. The more questions you do, the better you will get. Do not get discouraged if you get many wrong as you are studying because I found that the test was a lot easier than the questions from the Kaplan practice guide. The test is broken down into 4 sections with certain topics that you need to know. Personally, the Kaplan book for me was completely useless for the Math portion. The word problems on the test were fairly easy and were proportion related for example: I did chapters , they are really small chapters and perfect practice for this test. You can also use it as help for your dosage calculations class we eventually must take. Khan Academy and YouTube helped tremendously also in breaking each subject down. Determining logic of a passage, Comprehending details, Drawing basic inferences, Identifying the purpose of a passage 22 Questions in 45 min I absolutely hate reading comprehension and I was surprised on how well I did. You must do as many practice problems as possible and really analyze why are you getting the question wrong. READ the question and ask yourself what are they asking for? I would read the question first and then go to the paragraph and look for answer. The Kaplan guide was okay for the Reading portion, but any other study guide that has reading comprehension will do fine. I almost ran out of time on this section and guessed quickly on the last 2 questions please never leave any unanswered. These questions on the test were not fair in my opinion and some I felt were nursing based. Take each system and write out what are the key functions of each. Kaplan book again was useless in my opinion. Assessing passage development, Assessing paragraph logic, Assessing mechanics of writing 21 Questions in 45min Again another frustrating section for me and the Kaplan book DOES NOT have any practice questions on writing which sucks so I had to figure it out on my own. This section is hard to study for, but as I was doing the test I would ask myself does that make sense? I think I got lucky on this section. Questions on the test also asked to place sentences in the paragraph which was confusing, I am going to place a link to a site that has a few practice questions that helped me with that. I used a binder to keep my study materials together, whatever works for you. Take small breaks as you study and create a study schedule to help with time management. Remember practice, practice, practice and you will be fine. Do not give up, if becoming nurse is your dream you will do it!

Taken 18, times This Quiz has 20 questions. There are four main sections of the nursing entrance exam: Do you have what it takes? Find out by taking this short quiz. Questions are based on the following passage, which is excerpted from The National Institute of Public Health In any given 1-year period, 9. The economic cost for this disorder is high, but the cost in human suffering cannot be estimated. Depressive illnesses often interfere with normal functioning and cause pain and suffering not only to those who have a disorder, but also to those who care about them. Serious depression can destroy family life as well as the life of the ill person. But much of this suffering is unnecessary. Most people with a depressive illness do not seek treatment, although the great majority even those whose depression is extremely severe can be helped. Unfortunately, many people do not recognize that depression is a treatable illness. What is a Depressive Disorder? A depressive disorder is an illness that involves the body, mood, and thoughts. It affects the way a person eats and sleeps, the way one feels about oneself, and the way one thinks about things. A depressive disorder is not the same as a passing blue mood. It is not a sign of personal weakness or a condition that can be willed or wished away. Without treatment, symptoms can last for weeks, months, or years. Appropriate treatment, however, can help most people who suffer from depression. Types of Depression Depressive disorders come in different forms, just as is the case with other illnesses such as heart disease. This pamphlet briefly describes three of the most common types of depressive disorders. However, within these types there are variations in the number of symptoms, their severity, and persistence. Major depression is manifested by a combination of symptoms see symptom list that interfere with the ability to work, study, sleep, eat, and enjoy once pleasurable activities. Such a disabling episode of depression may occur only once but more commonly occurs several times in a lifetime. A less severe type of depression, dysthymia, involves long-term, chronic symptoms that do not disable, but keep one from functioning well or from feeling good. Many people with dysthymia also experience major depressive episodes at some time in their lives. Another type of depression is bipolar disorder, also called manic-depressive illness. Not nearly as prevalent as other forms of depressive disorders, bipolar disorder is characterized by cycling mood changes: Sometimes the mood switches are dramatic and rapid, but most often they are gradual. When in the depressed cycle, an individual can have any or all of the symptoms of a depressive disorder. When in the manic cycle, the individual may be overactive, overtalkative, and have a great deal of energy. Mania often affects thinking, judgment, and social behavior in ways that cause serious problems and embarrassment. For example, the individual in a manic phase may feel elated, full of grand schemes that might range from unwise business decisions to romantic sprees. Mania, left untreated, may worsen to a psychotic state. In the first paragraph the author claims: Depression only hurts the person who is depressed. Depression is not a major problem in the United States. Depression is a treatable illness. The primary focus of this passage is: To convince a person who is depressed to seek treatment. An argument for the treating depression. Describing to the general public the different types of depression. A complex argument as to why depression exists in America. In the final paragraph, the author claims: Dysthymia is the most severe type of depression. Bipolar disorder is extremely common among those who are depressed. Mania is often just as destructive as depression. Manic-Depressive Disorder always comes on suddenly. In the first paragraph, the author mentions the amount of depressed people in America in order to argue that: Depression is not something people should be concerned about. There should be a National Depression Awareness Week. The gravity of the situation in America, and that we should be more aware of how much depression plagues America. Almost everyone in America is depressed in some way. According to the author which of the following is true: Dysthymia is extremely debilitating People who are severely depressed can still enjoy everyday life. Most people who are depressed do not seek treatment. Agoraphobia most nearly means:
