Our statements of mission, vision, values, and strategy describe why we exist, who we are, what we do, and how we do it. These statements provide insight, offer motivation, and point the way forward as we seek to grow and achieve our goals in theatre and in life. We are a professional quality community theatre where children can grow and develop into successful and fulfilled adults. Watch a few of our testimonial videos from EVCT parents as they lend a little perspective about what they think of EVCT and how our programs have impacted their children. Robert and Patricia Goyer were always active in theater while growing up in Indiana. To donate to this fund, go to www. Where Are They Now? EVCT held and continues to hold, a very special place in my heart. It was here that I learned how to be an actor, back when I was 11 years old, in the ensemble of Little Princess , I believe! Karen and Becky in particular pushed and supported me in every role, show after show, year after year. You showed me that I had somewhere I could belong, and somewhere I could thrive. I feel nostalgic today, as I remember the mentors who made it possible for me to do what I do, and love what I do. As a parent I have observed this in her, as well as other children, in the productions and have been very impressed with the leadership and production effort put forward by EVCT. They have enriched the lives of all the families that have been touched by them, they have produced consistently high-quality productions and have been supportive great friends to the arts. When I first performed on the Mesa Arts Center stage, I realized I wanted to be a performer and surround myself with such positive people and a great environment. Whether your child is acting, designing a set, or writing a production, he or she will learn how to work with others. Theatre in the Digital Era With society increasingly relying on digital platforms for learning and communication, attention spans are getting shorter. It also forces them to use their imaginations rather than relying on CGIs and special effects that are so common in movies. Kids work for weeks or months at a time honing their craft, reading lines, building sets, using their imagination and critical-thinking skills for incorporating props, and getting into character for the final production. She is the second of three daughters. Garner has described herself as a typical middle child who sought to differentiate herself from her accomplished older sister. Career beginnings and Alias[edit] As a college student, Garner did summer stock theater. In addition to performing, Garner helped to sell tickets, build sets, and clean the venues. She met Stephen Colbert while filming an episode of Spin City and became an occasional babysitter for his children. Will Joyner of The New York Times praised her ability to "provide the leavening ingredient of innocent insight" [36] but Ken Tucker of Entertainment Weekly felt there was no center to the character, as played by Garner. During a two-episode guest appearance, she befriended Abrams and met her first husband Scott Foley. Earthquake in New York and in two episodes of the action drama The Pretender. In , she appeared briefly opposite her husband Foley in the drama Stealing Time and had a small role as a nurse in the war epic Pearl Harbor. Abrams, wrote the part of Sydney Bristow with Garner in mind: I wanted to show that. Transition to film[edit] While Alias was airing, Garner continued to work in film intermittently. She had an "other-worldly" experience when Steven Spielberg called to offer her a role as a high-class call girl in Catch Me if You Can She played a teenager who finds herself trapped in the body of a year-old. Garner chose Gary Winick to direct the film [52] and they continued to look for other projects to do together until his death in Although filmed in in between seasons of Alias, it was not released until early and failed to recoup its production budget. Her supporting role in Juno as a woman desperate to adopt a child was described by Kyle Buchanan of New York Magazine as a turning point in her career: In preparation for the role, Garner worked with vocal and movement coaches and took French lessons. Garner, I am pleased to report, makes Roxane a girl worth pining over In , Garner became a spokesperson of skin care brand Neutrogena. She first appeared opposite Matthew McConaughey in Ghosts of Girlfriends Past , portraying the childhood friend of a famous photographer and womanizer McConaughey. Gervais was keen to cast Garner "always happy and always pleasant to everyone" "against type. She looks as if the wheels in her head are not just turning but falling off and needing to be screwed back on. But the question of whether the actress has deeper emotional layers to bring to the screen is not answered here. Perhaps someday someone will give Garner a chance to be something other than perfectly nice. The role is like a caricature of her performance in Juno, minus the ultimate and essential redemption. The film was released in selected cinemas and was warmly received by critics; Stephanie Merry of the Washington Post felt she "gives the movie a powerful jolt of emotion. I want her to see the passionate commitment Mark Shriver and Hillary Clinton have to make the world a better place for everyone. My kids take karate for example, and we have our classes at the same time every week. So the guys know when we have karate, and so 20 of them wait there for us every single class. The couple separated in March She, her husband, and her daughter Violet obtained a restraining order in
