Krissy and the Big Snow has 4 ratings and 0 reviews. When Krissy's Brownie Girl Scout Troop gets snowed in, their day trip to an old-fashioned farm turns.

Tripper is a San Diego native who is a veteran of the United States Navy , where he was a member of a boxing team. Jack was, of course, straight the comedy stemming from having to "play gay" provided much of the story for the sitcom , but to bypass Mr. Roper and later to Mr. Jack attended LA Tech on the G. Bill to follow his dreams of running a small French restaurant one day. He pursues a degree in culinary arts and works odd jobs from time to time. After completion of his schooling, he finds full-time employment as a chef , working for a popular restaurant owner named Frank Angelino Jordan Charney. Jack is known for being a klutz. He is extremely clumsy and accident-prone, and is well known for his comic pratfalls. Despite having been a boxer in the Navy, he often cowered and allowed other men to bully him mainly because of their larger size. Though she loves him, Vicky turns Jack down since she does not want to marry and prefers that they live together instead. Jack refuses at first, but then he changes his mind and they move into the apartment above his bistro. Janet and her roommate Chrissy Snow and later roommates Cindy Snow and Terri Alden share an apartment in Santa Monica, California , and need a third roommate to help pay the rent after their old roommate, Eleanor, just had her baby, married, and moved out. On the morning after a going-away party they threw for Eleanor, Janet and Chrissy find Jack Tripper sleeping in their bathtub. Upon getting to know Jack, who at the time is staying at the local YMCA, Janet and Chrissy suggest that he move in as their new roommate primarily because he is skilled in cooking, a skill that both girls lack. Their old-fashioned and curmudgeonly landlord, Stanley Roper , is opposed to the idea of a young man sharing an apartment with two young attractive women. Thus, Jack is allowed to move in under this guise. Janet worked in and ultimately manages the Arcade Flower Shop. She is very fond of plants, which are seen throughout the apartment. Janet is from Speedway, Indiana. She graduated from college, but her major is never revealed. She is the daughter of Ruth and Roland Wood. She speaks Italian , although not fluently as displayed in the episode "Loan Shark". Like her character, DeWitt is from Speedway and her father is of Italian descent. Janet was portrayed as the intelligent, responsible, and "reliable" roommate as opposed to her more ditzy blonde counterparts Chrissy , Cindy , and Terri , with early episodes focusing on her self-consciousness over being less endowed than her female roommates, or at being perceived as less spontaneous. Perhaps because of her above-mentioned responsibility, Janet is the one who often reprimands Jack over his mischief. In the series finale "Friends and Lovers", Janet and Phillip marry in the apartment with the rest of the gang in attendance. After Janet returns from her honeymoon, Phillip and she settle in their newly married life in another part of town. Zenor was not picked for the second filming of the pilot, so actress Susan Lanier took over the role of Chrissy. Somers ultimately won the permanent role in the third and final pilot. In one episode, she explains that she was named "Christmas" because her father was a big fan of Bing Crosby whose song " White Christmas " became a signature song of his. In another episode, she states that her name is Christmas due to having been born in December. She explains to the nurse that her father named her Christmas because "she was the best present he ever got. Every Sunday, the Snow family would go to church to hear her father preach. She always loved her family and friends, and upon moving to Santa Monica , she assured them that she would eventually return home to Fresno. In her early 20s, Chrissy moved to Santa Monica, where she found a job as a typist. She found an apartment, owned and operated by Stanley and Helen Roper , which she shared with two other women, Janet Wood and Eleanor Garvey. In the pilot , a pregnant Eleanor got married in a reception in the apartment, but went into labor just as she was cutting the cake. After Eleanor had her baby and moved away, Janet and Chrissy were left needing a new roommate to help with living expenses. On the morning after a going-away party the girls threw for Eleanor, they find a man in their bathtub who had passed out and, after waking up, claimed that he was a friend of one of the party crashers. The girls suggested that the man, Jack Tripper, move in as their new roommate instead of other, less desirable candidates one of them being a pompous, nasal-voiced woman named Patricia, nicknamed "Pattikins". Chrissy is depicted as being quick to laugh at her own jokes, and quick to cry in an exaggerated, whining fashion as a young child would do. As the naif, she frequently and unknowingly makes suggestive double entendres and is often oblivious to the attention she receives from ill-intentioned men. Her roommate Janet remarked that Chrissy totally fell apart at the slightest hint of "sweet talk. In , she appeared on 50 magazine covers. Somers was promoted as a rival to Farrah Fawcett by her manager, Jay Bernstein , who also managed Fawcett and other actresses of the day, such as Cheryl Ladd. After marrying former game show host Alan Hamel whom Somers met for the first time while modeling prizes on a game show he hosted , Somers made him her manager. Somers was eventually axed from the series in the fifth season after a bitter and highly publicized salary dispute with the producers. On the series, her character of Chrissy was written out as having moved back home to Fresno to care for her ill mother. A couple episodes after Chrissy left, her cousin Cindy moved into the apartment with Jack and Janet for the remainder of the season. Upon the arrival of Terri Alden in season six ; references to Chrissy vanished, only to be referred to once when the trio was being interviewed and Chrissy was mentioned as "the other girl" with whom Janet was living when she met Jack. Ironically, Priscilla Barnes , who landed the role of Terri, had auditioned for the role of Cindy, but was turned down. Cindy hails from Fresno, the daughter of Mr. Raised on a farm, she grew to have a great love of animals, and enjoyed helping her father and mother out on the farm. Although Cindy is a very pretty girl, she claims she always "played second fiddle to Chrissy, because she was so beautiful. One day when Cindy was a young woman, Mrs. She said it was the most boring thing she had ever read and told Cindy that it would be a good idea if she did more with her life and got out of Fresno. Cindy debuted on the show in after producers needed a replacement for Chrissy after Suzanne Somers was fired over her salary dispute. Her replacement would be Terri Alden, a nurse. Producers of the show were seeking a permanent third roommate and were not confident with Jenilee Harrison in that role. Cindy did, however, continue to make appearances on the show during the sixth season, and was retained as a supporting character and given cast billing credit. Her last appearance is in the episode "Janet Wigs Out" near the end of season six. Cindy and Janet have a falling out when Janet buys a blonde wig and develops a condescending attitude toward her friends. When Janet wants to keep her wig a secret from her date, Cindy tries to prevent herself from revealing the truth. Terri was born in Longmeadow, Massachusetts, [2] works as a registered nurse , and is portrayed as far less "ditzy" than her predecessors. A dedicated professional at work, Terri is more relaxed when off duty and out of uniform. He has a love-hate relationship with his wife, Helen. Although they care deeply for each other, Helen and Stanley regularly bicker and engage in one-upmanship, with Helen usually the intellectual victor. One of his catchphrases is "Not tonight, Helen; I got a headache. Stanley is generally friendly toward the trio, but can be very angry if the rent is late. He is told that Jack is homosexual to bypass any objections he might have to a man living with two women. Stanley drives a run-down Chevrolet Bel Air , which he attempted to sell to the trio, but reneged when he learned he could get a lot more money for it from another buyer who thought it was the classic and far more valuable model. Brookes III who eventually sells them their house. Stanley intensely disliked Jeffrey, and the feeling is mutual. When Jeffrey arrived for the showing, Stanley began telling a false story that the house was perfect for his "drums" and "wild parties. Jeffrey then posted a phony "sold" sign in front of the house to deter them. Helen always yearns for romance and sex with her uninterested husband, Stanley, and he almost never delivers, which frustrates her. Helen enjoys a friendship with the three tenants who live above her, to whom she affectionately refers as "the kids". Helen, unlike her husband, knows that Jack is not gay, but out of fondness for the trio, plays along with the charade. Contrary to her tightfisted and very suspicious husband, Helen does not mind that Jack lives with Janet and Chrissy, and is very understanding of their situation. She frequently tries to defuse tense situations between her husband and the trio. Eventually, Stanley and she move to Cheviot Hills, an affluent neighborhood of Los Angeles, where her natural snobbishness asserts itself, often aided and abetted by her sister, Ethel Armbruster, who clearly despises Stanley. Despite her attempts at adopting the behavior of her more affluent neighbors, she still retains her kindness. Helen was frustrated with Stanley because he forgot their anniversary. Furley was out of town at the time. A very tired Mr. Furley returned home early and went straight to bed, unaware that he was not alone. Roper came in the bedroom and said, "Helen, if this a supposed affair with Mr. Furley is what you want, so be it. Later, Stanley came back and started fighting for Helen against Mr. Furley, which made Helen happy. Soon, the two went to sleep in Mr. Ralph Furley is the landlord and manager of a Santa Monica apartment building that is now owned by his brother, Bart, who acquired it from Stanley Roper. Furley is very subservient and seems to fear his brother Bart. Like Stanley Roper before him, he was also tricked into believing that Jack was gay for him to continue living with Janet and Chrissy in fact, Mr. Roper was the one who told Mr. Furley about this when he sold the building. Because of his own playboy lifestyle, Mr. Furley probably would have approved of the situation himself; but he knew his brother Bart would never tolerate a straight man living with two women.

Chrissy, who worked in a law office as a typing receptionist, was played by Suzanne Somers. Zenor was not picked for the second filming, so actress Susan Lanier took over the role of Chrissy. For the final product, Somers won the part. In one episode, she explains that she was named "Christmas" because her father was a big fan of Bing Crosby. In another episode, she states that her name is Christmas due to having been born in December. She ends up in the hospital and explains to the nurse that her father named her Christmas because "she was the best present he ever got". She was born into a very religious family and always loved her family traditions, such as Christmas with all her relatives. Every Sunday the Snow clan would go to church to hear her father preach. She always loved her family and friends, and upon moving to Santa Monica she ensured she would be back. She found an apartment, owned and operated by Stanley and Helen Roper, which she would share with two other women, Janet Wood and Eleanor Garvey. In the pilot episode, a pregnant Eleanor got married in a reception in the apartment, but went into labor just as she was cutting the cake. After Eleanor had her baby and moved away, Janet and Chrissy were left to hunt for a new roommate. In their bathtub, they found a man who was passed out and who upon waking claimed that he was a friend of one of the party guests. They decided to select the man, Jack Tripper, as their new roommate instead of other, less desirable candidates, such as a pompous, nasal voiced woman, Patricia, nicknamed "Pattikins". Romance Chrissy was very innocent likely due to her small-town suburban religious upbringing, and she frequently and unknowingly would utter suggestive double entendres. She was also leered at by many men on the series, even though she was rarely interested in anything other than love. Her roommate Janet remarked that Chrissy totally fell apart at the slightest hint of "sweet talk. Departure With Suzanne Somers playing the role, Chrissy had emerged as a breakout character in the show, as Somers also began to achieve TV superstar status as a celebrity. In, she appeared on fifty magazine covers. Somers was promoted as a rival to Farrah Fawcett by her manager, Jay Berstein, who also managed Fawcett and other actresses like Cheryl Ladd. After marrying her husband Alan Hamel, Somers made him her manager.
