

1: Sanilac County Michigan

Daniel Chance is a surly widower lost in grief over his wife's death years earlier. Even if he were interested in her, Lovejoy knows their friendship could have no future because she must return to Salt Lick Holler where the people depend on her training in medicinal herbs.

Her journey to college was not an easy one. I know that I made many mistakes as a parent. Jessica has had her share of hardships and difficulties because of that. But she is my perfect daughter! I do hope you will take the time to read her story. I believe she is off to college tomorrow because of her willingness to look deep into herself, acknowledge all of who she is and in that moment step truly into herself as a young woman. Jessica, I am so honored to be your mother and so grateful that you are my daughter. Thank you for all of your gifts you so openly share. For me, Mary exemplifies all the qualities I associate with courage. In the face of fear, doubt, and the unknown, she turned to God and looked within herself to follow what she intrinsically knew was the right decision. She stood by her son at a time when everyone else turned their backs from him, and even though she was unsure about her own future, she bravely stood her ground. Though I think it is presumptuous to compare myself to Mary, I too have had to bravely step into the unknown. Like Mary, I have had to believe in my own opinions and courageously take a leap of faith. However, I did not possess nearly as much grace as Mary while on my own journey of discovering exactly what possessing courage means. As many of you know, I grew up in New York City. New York is an amazing place to grow up in, filled with culture, and exciting opportunities. However, the city can often be an isolating place and a world where young adults have to be extremely self-reliant and independent. When I began high school, the exposure, pressure, and chaos of the city began to take its toll on me. I slowly drifted from the young girl who dreamed of being a dancer and morphed into an unrecognizable version of myself. My life revolved around my social life. I no longer placed any value on family, integrity, or love. My self-destructive behavior became a vicious cycle, plunging me into a deeper and deeper depression. I was a lost soul. At my lowest points, I thought my life had no value and that no one would care if I were gone. However, I was mistaken. In the summer of , I was given the opportunity to change my life. It was over that weekend that my aunt and uncle learned about the chaotic state of my life. Shortly after the wedding, out of the goodness of their hearts, they offered me a place in their home, the opportunity to pull my life together, and to make the dreams I had long since given up on become a reality. That summer I spent a great deal of time contemplating what my new life was going to be like. I thought there was no chance of me ever actually fitting into their family dynamic. I figured I would always be viewed as the charity case. Additionally, I pondered what school would be like. I worried that I would have no friends and I knew I would be isolated from all I was familiar with halfway across the country. Through out that entire summer, my apprehension kept increasing. However, despite my fears and doubt about the next chapter of my life, I knew that I had to take that leap of faith. I knew that in order to create a life I could be proud of, I needed to swallow my pride and try. I accepted that it would not be easy, that at times I would want to give up, but I was determined not to do so. I knew I was better than what I had become. So I left New York and began a new chapter here. Though I have faced my fair share of difficulties, moving here has ended up being the most incredible experience of my life. Overall, my life experiences have taught me that courage is not about being fearless, but rather courage is about acknowledging your fears and still choosing to follow your heart. I am blessed to have shared so much with you and your Mom! We are all always growing and learning! Thank goodness. You, your Mom, and the relationships we all share have contributed to my life in such honest, pure ways. Xo September 29th, - And how we live this truth over and over again in our lives!
