Posted on 17 February 16 at Curse your sudden but inevitable betrayal! That long list of ouija words was from a Halloween special event the devs did. Ah yes, just seen the massive thread on Steam Laugh it up, fuzzball. I only used it once for the 1 collectible. Gamer has been removed Posted on 17 February 16 at I can also tell you the ouija board is not used for anything but the memento, as far as I can tell. Maybe we can try and make sense of what each action does? Oh, and I used the crank to open the door, instead of using the chain where you hear someone scream every time you pull it. The crank is in a secret room behind a wardrobe just before the door fyi. Oh and I also found the secret room with the demon deer head and the "am I going crazy? Exit the room with the ring, and move your cursor along the wall to the left, the hand should pop up in one spot to pull open the wall. No idea if there are other such room, I kept an eye out but never found any more. Well I just finished a playthrough with all collectibles and I got the wife portrait again. So I guess it makes no difference. Right at the start of the game, did you go into the secret room that has the pistol, little models of rooms and the demon deer head? Did you feed the toy cat? Did you turn the crank on the Jack in the Box in the nursery? Did you turn the crank and raise the painting tied to a rope from what I think is an old swimming pool? Did you push the wheel chair down the corridor towards the end of the game? Laugh it up, fuzzball. Thanks to everyone for all your help and advice to so we can finally all achieve GS for this game. Magoo, driving a car underwater, thinks all the shipwrecks and litter at the bottom of the ocean are urban decay in Beverly Hills, saying "Look how they let the old Backus mansion run down. Among other things, Charlie Brown and Lucy discover the lunar and command modules from Apollo 10 nicknamed "Snoopy" and "Charlie Brown," respectively , and a Peanuts Sunday strip. For that matter, the caps that the astronauts wore under their helmets were referred to as "Snoopy Caps" for their resemblance to the aforementioned animated pup. No doubt Snoopy would enjoy it. In another episode of the series, it is declared that the Vince Guaraldi piece that would be permanently affiliated with the Peanuts characters through the specials was named "Linus and Lucy" "by coincidence. Matt Groening is there, too. In "Silence of the Clamps" the crew finds a robot who claims that his name is Billy West. Fry calls it a "stupid, made-up name". In "The Honking," Calculon reveals that he is almost a thousand years old, and has had many different identities during his lifetime. In the final arc of Spider-Man: When he sees Webb, Lee remarks "Who is that exotic woman? In one Darkwing Duck episode, Darkwing tries to sell a screenplay about himself, but the studio rejects him. However, to get him back, the head of the company refuses to publish the comic, resulting in said Disney line. An in-universe example is how some episodes of the series show famous fictional characters as both fictional and real people interacting with the other South Park characters. For example Mickey Mouse "The Ring" , Freddy Krueger "Insheption" and Dick Dastardly "Handicar" are actual people in said episodes, but also appear among the fictional characters in the "Imaginationland" trilogy. Jesus is also both a South Park citizen and a fictional character in Imaginationland together with other religious figures. Best not to think about it too much! Not that big a paradox, though, considering the nature of the show. And if you accept the premise of Animated Actors , "Killems" could just be a cross-species impersonator. In a gag similar to the Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scene in Airplane! Matt Groening is known in The Simpsons as the creator of Futurama. At one point he wanders into Cheers , the same bar containing the same characters from the show. One of the the characters shown though not in a speaking role is Frasier Crane, played on Cheers by Kelsey Grammer, who also plays Sideshow Bob on The Simpsons this would also seem to indicate that Springfield is somewhere near Boston though probably not. Both Ricky Gervais and Steve Buscemi have appeared twice on the show - once as themselves and different episodes playing separate Ink-Suit Actor characters. What makes this especially funny is that in the earlier episode Homer had actually worked as an errand boy for Baldwin and Kim Basinger and Ron Howard too and had spent a great deal of time with him. The voice of the marine biologist should have been very familiar to him. Trouble is, those movies have already been referenced by name in-series several times before.
