Alice Eichholz Provo, Utah: It is important that you use the information found in this database to locate your ancestor in the records that this index references. Usually more information is available in the records themselves than is found in an index. Finding the Original Marriage Record: Unfortunately, Liahona Research and Hunting For Bears did not always provide information on the origin of each entry. However, careful researchers who wish to examine the original source will find sufficient information to lead them to that source. Since marriage applications and certificates are issued by the county, copies of these records may be obtained by contacting the appropriate county. The specific office in a county where marriage records may be kept varies from county clerk to probate clerk. Although marriage records are kept by the county, copies are often located in the state archives, in libraries, or in historical societies. To find these microfilm copies, begin by checking the Family History Library Catalog available online at www. Once a possible microfilm source is identified, you will need to order that microfilm to your local LDS Family History Center more information about Family History Centers available on www. For many researchers, it may be easier to check the FHL records first, before contacting the county clerk. Cautions About this Collection: There are records that may have been overlooked, misspelled, or not available to the researchers.
