What are the certifications available? There is no specific prerequisite. Do you want to understand the ITIL framework? Are you working in an organization that provides IT Services? You may want to know how it will improve the efficiency of these services? Is your organization implementing or has already implemented ITIL? Have you answered yes to any one of the above? Once you are certified, you have an awareness of the ITIL framework. Your credentials will say that you understand the framework of ITIL V3 foundation and have knowledge of the 5 phases, their interaction, how the processes are helpful for business value. What is the total duration of the exam? In addition to these, you need to know about the general concepts and definitions of IT Service Management. Added to these, check your knowledge about the principles and models across the life cycle phases. Moreover, you need to understand the 25 processes, 4 functions, roles and responsibilities, and automation of the IT service management. The decision drives the process. How do you choose one? What is important in deciding the provider? Check out the experience of the faculty. Make sure you get real world examples of the processes being discussed. Of course, the cost is definitely a key aspect that you should consider. What kind of access provision will you get for the videos if choosing ITIL online courses? If you are attending a training from an Accredited Training Provider, make sure you understand the concepts well. If it is self-study, be doubly sure. When instructor gives examples, relate to your work area and check if you fully understand, else clarify immediately Jot down key points or those you feel need more study. Many online resources, mind maps, process diagrams, etc. Check out some good resources You should take some practice tests to check your readiness for the ITIL V3 Foundation exam Apply the continual service improvement concept to your study cycles. Other, go for training from Accredited Training Organization ATO who will provide the training and conduct a proctored exam. Based on your interest, you can choose the next level of certifications. You can choose from Practitioner, Intermediate, Expert and Master. You generally need to complete the previous level to appear for the next level. This showcases your ability to tailor the processes and apply to your organizational needs. At this level, the emphasis is on Organizational Change Management, Communication, Measurement, and Metric to enable improvement activities. Examination for Practitioner level: You do not need to be a Practitioner for appearing for the Intermediate level. This level has different modules from which you can choose how many and which ones you want to appear for. Primarily, you have Service Life cycle and Service Capability. What modules are available under each? Therefore, choose which modules are your choice from the ones listed here: Service Life Cycle Modules.

The new exams are numbered , and The last day for and the combined is August 20th For the , you get until September 24th or 21st according to some emails from Pearson. No more bridges and hubs, replaced by a basic understanding of firewalls, wireless controllers and access points. LAN switching is the same as usual, nothing really new in there. Routing stays pretty much intact. Some good no more Frame-Relay! LAN switching topics are much more detailed. Major addition are switch stacking and chassis aggregation benefits. Some security features are also present: Routing topics are pretty much the same: No more Frame-Relay, rejoice my friends! Major change in WAN technology: Configure and verify single-homed branch office connectivity using eBGP IPv4 limited to peering and route advertisement using Network command only. Only a few commands to learn, basic understanding of BGP, and a great addition to your knowledge. Infrastructure services, configure and verify basic HSRP is there. Additions are Cloud related topics, traffic path to internal and external services, virtual services, etc. New addition to the ACLs: Todd Lammle covers that in his new videos according to his recent posts here. Major change here with the addition of network programmability, function of a controller, northbound and southbound APIs. The exam seems to get slightly harder with the addition of SDN topics because finding "the cisco answer" might be somewhat difficult. Cisco has a very particular approach to SDN. The composite exam is aimed at people who are already certified and need to recertify. It is not for beginners. There are less questions, but they are usually harder. A quick search on this subreddit will turn up several threads where someone attempted the composite and failed, only to take the two exams approach and pass with high scores on both. A. Togay Koralturk is an expert on green buildings and sustainability, and is the author of the LEED Complete Study Guide series, which is widely adopted as the primary course material for bachelor's and master's degree classes in architecture and civil engineering in universities throughout the United States.

The guide could double up as a handy cheat sheet for those currently controlling IT processes as well. But, there is a catch. The free sections include service strategy, a good part of service design and service operations. A number of review questions are available, which are helpful to boost your self confidence before taking the exam. On an earlier occasion, this book was passed on to me by one of my team members. The pdf is brief, and each section defines the goal of the process, and activities that are a part of the process. The tone, speed and the path undertaken to explain the concepts is down to earth, and best suited for those seeking to get into service management. This will also serve well for those who are looking for direction in corporate training. Like Taruu, range of topics is good, but the descriptions are not sufficient from an examination standpoint. All topics are additionally available in German and Spanish. Check out the wiki and let me know what you think: But, v2 processes are explained in patterns that go something like this: The way of working between v2 and v3 is quite similar, perhaps with an addition or two in the latter version. So, referring to a v2 process does in no way waste your time, nor disorient your thoughts and thought patterns. The IT Skeptic Blog by Rob England A blog on a topic of interest is definitely worth the time, especially if the writer knows what he is doing, and keeps doing it frequently. He picks up day to day issues he faces at work, and makes blog posts out of them. The topics are interesting, especially for those who can relate to them. The reader base is quite active in commenting and the blog has a great community behind it. Check out the blog and join in on the discussion at The IT Skeptic. Many who had completed their v3 certifications started to sweat and those who planned to take the exam, decided to wait and watch. They host a handful of blogs, and the articles posted make the time worthwhile, while posing several questions to the reader. A number of case studies along with industry research makes up for the free content available on the website. Are Free Resources Any Good? Free resources that are widely available on the web are nuggets of information compared to the deep knowledge the world has to offer for money. Ready to test your skills in ITIL?
