I went to see Big Hero 6 last week, and it was a truly fabulous film! If you haven't seen it you should go soon. The movie stays on point never wandering, building steadily on a message that is made very real as you see the characters respond to the action that whirls into their lives.

Wyleoff family in this region are descendants through her from Isaac Van Arsdale as well as other collateral branches of the VanArsdale family many of whom settled in Hopewell Township who have traced their geneology to Isaac VanArsdale through eight generations. About thirty of the names of VanArsdale are found on the roster as enrolled among the officers and illeg. She was born Abt. The house carries a mortgage of guilders. On 10 may , Jan Pouluszn van Aersdael and his sons sign a contract not to divide the inheritance of Geertje Halters. In return it is agreed that son Philip may live in and work the largest of the two houses in the Naaijerstraat, with the proviso that he will look after his younger brothers and also pay the interest on the mortgage. His father may also live and work in the same house and the house next door will be rented out. Since one of the children is still underage the need the permission of the town council which they obtain. On 24 Apr Philip Jansz van Aersdalen, on behalf of himself and his brothers, also on behalf of Symon Jansz van Aersdalen, his overseas brother and as gaurdian for his youngest brother, all of them being heirs of Jan Pouwlesz van Aersdalen, transfers to Pieter van Stompwijk two houses and land on the Naaijersrtaat for guilders. The register of New Netherland, page He died several years ago, but was very active in researching the Van Arsdalen family. Other information comes from Mabel Spell. When he received the news of their deaths, he decided to remain in America. However, Mabel Spell disagreed with this statement. She believed that Symon Jansen was unmarried when he arrived in New Amsterdam in at the age of State Library pamphlet file. It is written by a Mr. The four page file is Titled: Sketch of the VanArsdalen Family. After fulfilling the object of his mission,, and with his baggage on board the vessel awaiting the day to sail for his native land, he received a letter from his father stating that a pestilence was then raging there and that his wife and two children had departed this life. This sad news changed his design of returning to holland and he settled at Flatlands on Long Island. KY and eventually moved to Crawfordsville, ind. He lived in Ky and Gibson co. His age at application was 95 years old. Unger Since his family name seemed to indicate a Dutch background as most likely, one of Simons descendants some years ago asked the CBG to undertake a thorough research project. The records at the CBG revealed that the name Van Arsdale occasionally showed up in the early 17th century in the city of Leiden. As this was the only connection it seemed reasonable to start the project there in the municipal archives. From Leiden the trail led to Gouda where finally the papers including the letters were discovered pertaining to the legacy of fl. Simon Jansz van Aersdal is named in this paper, but the fact that he lived in New Netherland was not mentioned.. As a result the importance of the article for the American van Arsdal family was not recognized.

Further research showed that before his departure Simon had been married in Amsterdam to a certain Marijtje Baltusdr. She gave him two children both of whom died at a young age. Simon was a potter in Amsterdam, an occupation which he seemed to have exercised in his early days in New Netherland as well. The pre-marriage papers to the above Marijtje Baltusdr. From other family sources it is clear that this was meant to be the village of Nukerke, near Oudenaarde in East Flanders. Jan Poulusz van Aersdal, first a carpet weaver, later a mustard maker, and his wife Geertje Philipsdr. Halters were according to some documents in Gouda the parents of Simon. Jan Poulusz van Aersdal moved to Gouda around , where he became a member of the reformed church, and bought a house in the Naaijerstraat. He also bought the house next door and later, in , he combined the two houses into one in . Since that time the house probably changed little, although it is unclear how much of the original two houses remained. On 1 March Pieter Verveen and his wife Geertruijt van Haesdaele, living in Gouda, made their last will and testament. The surviving partner will have full control over the estate. Thereafter, after deduction of legacies 1, guilders a year plus 1, guilders in cash to Philippina Joosten van Haesdaelen and an amount of guilders for Lijsbeth Hensbeeck the remainder shall be divided one half amongst the closest relatives of Pieter, the other half for those of Geertruijt. However if this sum is not claimed within six years after the death of the longest living spouse, then that amount shall be distributed amongst the other heirs. Will executed before Johan van Middelant, Notary in Gouda. Who discovered his name to have been "Isaac" and the date of his arrival is a puzzle to the writer. The account which is possessed by various members of the family in manuscript, reads as follows, not giving the name of the first American progenitor: After fulfilling the object of his mission and with his baggage on board the vessel awaiting the day to set sail for his native land, he received a letter from his father stating that a pestilence was then raging there, and that his wife and two children had departed this life. This sad news changed his design of returning to Holland, and he settled at Flatland on Long Island. There he married a Miss Jansen. His son, his only child as far as ascertained, Simon Jansen Van Arsdalen, became a man of standing in his native town. Ege now deceased says that "all the family records have been preserved for a period of two hundred and fifty years," but no clue is given as to by whom. As to his being "the common ancestor," Mr. Bergen is certainly correct, for even if his father preceded him, nevertheless as he is stated to have had but one son, Symon, this would make of Symon a "common ancestor. All others on the roll who were born in America are classed as "native. It is uncertain how old Symon using his own spelling of his Christian name was when he arrived. He may have come with his father, but it cannot be that his father married in this country and then Simon was born here. From another entry in the same family manuscript quoted from above, it is clear Symon must have been at least twenty-one when he received a deed for land in . So we assume Symon was born about , if not earlier, and in Holland. His armorial bearings now constitute the public arms of the bailiwick of Arsdale. From him descended Symon Jansen Van Arsdalen, who emigrated to New Amsterdam in and located at Flatlands, where he served as a civil magistrate and an elder of the Dutch church; and our records prove him to have been a person of means, education and influence. He died about , leaving sons Cornelius and John, from whom the entire Van Arsdale family in this country have sprung. The reference to the coat-of-arms of the ancient family is that which Riker states appeared in a bookplate of . In the usual Holland work containing coats-of-arms it does not appear. However, it is stated that, some years ago, the wife of ex-Governor Bedle brought from Holland a copy, and a reproduction of it has been made by a Plainfield artist for some members of the Van Arsdale family. The same has an irregular shield, with the usual four quarters. The first and fourth quarters consist of arrow heads upon a silver ground; the other quarters are plain red. The crest is a helmet, surmounted by what may be feathers, but has more the appearance of a tree. There is much other ornamentation in silver and gold, as was the custom in early Dutch and German armorials. As in most Dutch families a claim is said to have been made to land on Manhattan by some Van Arsdales in the early part of last century. It is thus stated by a descendant, who has written to us from Nebraska: This was an old tale when my grandfather was young.

Jeremy Adam Smith explores how the science of purpose could help explain white supremacy. Certain emotions and behaviors that promote health and well-being can also foster a sense of purpose—specifically, awe, gratitude, and altruism. Here we arrive at altruism. In one study, for example, Daryl Van Tongeren and colleagues found that people who engage in more altruistic behaviors, like volunteering or donating money, tend to have a greater sense of purpose in their lives. Interestingly, gratitude and altruism seem to work together to generate meaning and purpose. In a second experiment, the researchers randomly assigned some participants to write letters of gratitude—and those people later reported a stronger sense of purpose. More recent work by Christina Karns and colleagues found that altruism and gratitude are neurologically linked, activating the same reward circuits in the brain. Listen to what other people appreciate about you Shawn Taylor with his family Giving thanks can help you find your purpose. But you can also find purpose in what people thank you for. Like Kezia Willingham, Shawn Taylor had a tough childhood—and he was also drawn to working with kids who had severe behavioral problems. Unlike her, however, he often felt like the work was a dead-end. No specifics, but youth work was my purpose. Dani Burlison never lacked a sense of purpose, and she toiled for years as a writer and social-justice activist in Santa Rosa, California. But when wildfires swept through her community, Dani discovered that her strengths were needed in a new way: Many people told me about finding purpose in family. Amber Cantorna was raised by purpose-driven parents who were right-wing Christians. This family and community fueled a strong sense of purpose in Amber: To be a blessing to other people. Often, the nobility of our purpose reflects the company we keep. A new sense of purpose came with the new community and identity she helped to build, of gay and lesbian Christians. What do you have in common with them? What are they trying to be? What impact do you see them having on the world? Is that impact a positive one? Can you join with them in making that impact? What do they need? Can you give it them? Tell your story Amber Cantorna Reading can help you find your purpose—but so can writing. Purpose often arises from curiosity about your own life. What obstacles have you encountered? What strengths helped you to overcome them? How did other people help you? How did your strengths help make life better for others? At first depressed after losing everyone she loved, Amber soon discovered new strengths in herself—and she is using her book to help build a nonprofit organization called Beyond to support gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender Christians in their coming-out process. One study found that those who see meaning and purpose in their lives are able to tell a story of change and growth, where they managed to overcome the obstacles they encountered. This is a valuable reflective process to all people, but Amber took it one step further, by publishing her autobiography and turning it into a tool for social change. There are two modes of establishing ones reputation: to be praised by honest men, and to be abused by rogues. ~ C.C. Colton.

Early life[edit] John L. Riker was born in Manhattan in New York City. His father, James Riker Sr. Riker is said to have been given his second name, "Lafayette", by his grandfather, John Van Arsdale, in honor of Gen. Lafayette , who had arrived at Staten Island on the day that Riker was born. Lafayette at the Battery , on that day. Despite a lapse of forty-four years, Van Arsdale was recognized by Gen. Lafayette, which so pleased him that later that day when he visited his newborn grandson, he named him "John Lafayette". Anna was the eldest daughter of Hannah E. Riker, who was the younger sister of his father, James. A year or two later she gave birth to a son, John L. The following year his father James Riker Sr. Riker studied law and passed the New York state bar exam in He was appointed the colonel of a volunteer regiment, initially known as the Anderson Zouaves , that he had raised in New York under the auspices of Major Robert Anderson "the hero of Fort Sumter. In early Riker was courtmartialled for creating a false roster, for extorting money from sutlers and for keeping a woman in his headquarters. Riker was killed in action at the head of his regiment on the right wing of the Federal line at the Battle of Fair Oaks on May 31, Morton , Ex-recorder Frederick A. Wood of Kings County and several officers of the Anderson Zouaves, arrangements were made for his funeral. At the meeting Lieut. Bradley incidentally remarked that the Colonel was not struck while waving his sword, as he never drew his sword at all, but spent most of the time quietly smoking his cigar. A newspaper report says that Riker was an honorary member of the company, while another report says that when Riker left New York for the seat of war he wore a scarlet shirt under his Zouave jacket. With recollections of Capt. John Van Arsdale of the Veteran Corp of Artillery, by whose efforts on that day the enemy were circumvented, and the American flag successfully raised on the Battery, New York, , p. Note that researcher John Tierney suggests that while Riker had passed his bar exam in there is not yet any clear evidence that he practised as an attorney. It is possible that the two could be confused.
