Lonely Planet September 10, Exploring the landscape Test your mettle on a day trek following the steps of Australian Diggers along the Kokoda Track, or climb Highland peaks for a glimpse of both sparkling coasts on a clear day. Prowl through jungle-clad scenery with village guides, en route to thundering waterfalls or in search of magnificently plumed birds of paradise. On the coast, hundreds of islands and atolls cry out for exploration. You can travel by slow-boat along pristine stretches of shoreline, staying overnight at peaceful villages. The life aquatic The Solomon Islands and PNG are world-famous diving destinations, with excellent conditions most months of the year. Live-aboard boats and first-rate dive resorts provide access to sites far from the hordes. The waves are equally uncrowded for surf lovers, with fantastic reef, point and beach breaks scattered around the northern shores. Cultural wonders Home to more than distinct languages and lifestyles, Papua New Guinea and the Solomons provide fascinating opportunities to be immersed in traditional cultures. Festivals aside, there are myriad ways to have a paradigm-altering experience: Bountiful rewards Travel is rarely easy in Melanesia, but the rewards are bountiful. After a few weeks of hard travel you can find your way to a pristine swath of coastline and unwind for a few days in a beautifully sited ecofriendly resort or bush-material village guesthouse overlooking the sea. Spend your days snorkelling coral reefs, walking sandy beaches or paddling up placid rivers. By night, watch the sunset, feast on fresh seafood and watch the sky slowly fill with stars while daydreaming about the great adventures still ahead. Top experiences -- Diving PNG and the Solomons rank among the best destinations on Planet Scuba, with an irresistible menu of underwater treasures: A handful of beautifully set dive resorts provide the idyllic gateway to your undersea adventure. Today you can wander the abandoned, apocalyptic streets of this once-thriving community and take in adventures further afield. You can visit Matupit Island, with its village of megapode egg-hunters, go diving in wreck-strewn Simpson Harbour and peer back in time at eerie WWII bunkers hidden in the hillsides. There are great views to be had, particularly from atop the volcanoes looming over the town. A profusion of dive sites at South and North Marovo offer excellent fish action, suitable for all levels of proficiency. This is why I travel. Outside Kavieng, a handful of thatch-roof guesthouses scattered on tiny islands near Lavongai provide the type of getaway that would make Robinson Crusoe proud. KK Flying between regions: Tribal fighting is still an issue deep in the Highlands but rarely involves outsiders or foreign travellers. Carry a bilum a traditional string bag rather than a daypack. Always keep at least K50 "raskol bandit money" in your pocket to appease any would-be thief. Hide the rest in a money belt or your shoe. Speak to people rather than be aloof. Be especially careful on the fortnightly Friday pay nights when things get pretty wild. If you get held up, try to stay calm. Most robberies are fairly unsophisticated affairs.
