Tony Wheeler graduated from the University of Warwick and London Business School, and was a former engineer at the Chrysler corporation. The pair met in London in and, in July, they embarked on an overland trip through Europe and Asia, eventually arriving in Australia in December. The route that they followed was first undertaken by vehicle on the Oxford-Cambridge Overland Expedition. The Wheelers offer practical advice, such as the importance of not mentioning "arch enemies, Iran or Israel" in Iraq, as it is a "very hard-line socialist Arab country"; casual observations, such as their description of Singapore as a "groovy place"; tips of an illegal nature, such as where to obtain fake identification or an explanation of why one should have their "last drag" of the drug cannabis before they arrive at the Iranian border; and emergency options for people in need of money, whereby places that "have a good price for blood" are identified. Other travel guide brand names also emerged in the early s, such as Rough Guides and Bradt. The couple discovered writers in bars and also told people that if they could return to Australia with a completed book, then Lonely Planet would publish it. It was very rough and ready. One writer came back with a page guide to Jamaica—"every pirate who stopped in got his biography"—and we had to cut it by two-thirds. For a long time we had a problem that every writer wanted to rewrite the history. Crowther was renowned for frequently inserting his opinions into the text of the guides he wrote, giving the guide books real, gritty and un-politically-correct passion and sometimes covering topics such as where to purchase the best hashish. His writing was instrumental to the rise of Lonely Planet. The journalist used the term "Geoffness", in tribute to Crowther, to describe a quality that has been lost in travel guides. Lonely Planet is a highly respected international brand and a global leader in the provision of travel information. The Lonely Planet story in North America, [8] describing their relationship, their initial overland journey and the founding of Lonely Planet. In early, Bradt guides founder Hilary Bradt announced her retirement, alongside veteran independent publisher Charles James of Vacation Work—"both founded their companies in the early s like the Wheelers. Then, shortly before the Lonely Planet deal, the owners of Rough Guides sold their year-old company to Penguin Books. Factors such as a global recession and the appreciation of the Australian dollar were cited as influential. Kelley noticed the opportunity and approached BBC Worldwide in April without an explanation for why he was interested in Lonely Planet. The BBC did not make an offer immediately, but in March, the details of the sale were announced to the public. The Trust consequently initiated a review of the investment, while the Trust vice chairperson said to the media that "at the time of purchase there was a credible rationale for this deal. Based solely on a handshake agreement, Kelley hired Houghton to help establish media company NC2 Media—"the name "NC2" is short for in situ, meaning "in position" in Latin—which then launched its first venture OutwildTV, a website featuring sponsored expeditions, followed by a gear blog. Houghton then met with employees at the Footscray, Australia headquarters on 18 July to announce a restructuring process that would result in staff layoffs. He revealed to the media at the time that between 70 and 80 positions would be made redundant from the overall business. Houghton confirmed the ongoing existence of a Melbourne-based office, while the restructure occurred over a 6- to month period following the July meeting. On 18 July, at the Footscray headquarters, Houghton "walked up in front of a microphone in Melbourne, where most of the redundancies occurred. However, asking the rhetorical question" Is he [Houghton] the right year-old? The jury is out on that one. You open your phone, and it says, "Hey, glad you enjoyed the Colosseum, which was on the itinerary we helped you make. We know you love coffee. Time for a cappuccino! The best cappuccino place in Rome is two blocks away. Here are walking instructions. So you should get a macchiato. And this is how you ask for it. And Daniel [Houghton] is finding more. The Sydney Morning Herald reported that a disgruntled former user alerted the BBC to numerous posts related to paedophilia. A source close to Lonely Planet management told the Herald that BBC executives still smarting from the Jimmy Savile scandal went into "full freak out, panic attack mode" over posts about the age of consent in Mexico and child prostitution in Thailand. However, a BBC Worldwide spokesman denied there was any evidence of paedophilia discussions on the site. Its Korean edition, with a digital edition for iPad, was launched in March . In October , Lonely Planet announced a U.

Escape June 15, The remains of this empire can be seen at the fabled temples of Angkor, monuments unrivalled in scale and grandeur in South-East Asia. Comeback capital Just as Angkor is more than its wat so, too, is Cambodia more than its temples. The chaotic yet charismatic capital of Phnom Penh is a hub of political intrigue, economic vitality and intellectual debate. All too often overlooked by hit-and-run tourists ticking off Angkor on a regional tour, the revitalised city is finally earning plaudits in its own right thanks to a gorgeous riverside location, a cultural renaissance, and a wining and dining scene to rival anywhere in the region. This is the place to experience the rhythm of rural life and timeless landscapes of dazzling rice paddies and swaying sugar palms. The south coast is fringed by tropical islands, with just a handful of beach huts in sight. Inland from the coast lie the Cardamom Mountains, part of a vast tropical wilderness that provides a home to elusive wildlife and is the gateway to emerging ecotourism adventures. The Khmers have been to hell and back, struggling through years of bloodshed, poverty and political instability. Thanks to an unbreakable spirit and infectious optimism, they have prevailed with their smiles intact. No visitor comes away without a measure of admiration and affection for the inhabitants of this enigmatic kingdom. Buzzing Siem Reap, with a superb selection of restaurants and bars, is the base for temple exploration. Beyond lie floating villages on the Tonle Sap lake, adrenalin-fuelled activities such as quad biking and microlighting, and such cultured pursuits as cooking classes and bird-watching. Motorbikes whiz through laneways without a thought for pedestrians; markets exude pungent scents; and all the while the sounds of life, of commerce, of survival, reverberate through the streets. But this is all part of the attraction. But the city has risen from the ashes to take its place among the hip capitals of the region, with an alluring cafe culture, bustling bars and a world-class food scene. Visitor numbers have risen steadily in recent years and stand to skyrocket now that flights from Siem Reap have been initiated. For the time being, despite the boomtown rents, the city and its sandy bits remain pretty laid-back. While backpackers continue to flock to the party zone of Serendipity Beach, more subdued Otres Beach, south of town, has made a comeback. That and the emergence of the southern islands as cradles of castaway cool give non-backpackers a reason to visit. Home to the hardy Bunong Pnong people and their noble elephants, it is possible to visit traditional villages and learn about elephants in their element at the Elephant Valley Project. The landscape is a seductive mix of pine clumps, grassy hills and windswept valleys that fade beguilingly into forests of jade green and hidden waterfalls. Wild animals, such as bears, tigers and especially elephants, are more numerous here than elsewhere, although sightings are usually limited to birds, monkeys and the occasional wild pig. Eclipsed as a port when Sihanoukville was founded in , laid-back Kampot makes an excellent base for exploring Bokor National Park and the verdant coast east towards Vietnam, including several superb cave-temples. Famed for its spectacular sunsets and splendid seafood eating at the Crab Market, a row of waterfront shacks by a wet fish market, is a quintessential Kep experience , it was founded as a colonial retreat for the French in Published this month, RRP:
