He flits from one girl to another, and does not believe in love. Until he finds that special girl. He meets a girl named Ananya and they like each other. They become friends and keep in touch through Facebook. Rishi soon realizes that he might be in love with Ananya. He tells her so one day. Ananya, however, knows about his irreverent attitude towards everything in life, and does not trust him. She refuses to take him seriously, and rejects him. Saddened and a little wiser, Rishi concentrates on his studies and gains admission into an engineering college. He tries to forget his hurt and seriously focuses on his studies. Then, he meets another girl, Pragya, and falls in love once more. But, is Pragya really to be trusted? Someone warns Rishi about her, but he does not believe that person. Along with writing Rochak loves reading books, acting in plays and playing computer games. Recently Spectralhues got in touch with this young promising author. Here are some excerpts from an interview Rochak Bhatnagar gave to Susmita Bose. What kind of response have you been receiving? I do get a lot of mails from eager readers from across the country. It is always good to know what people think about your work. Fortunately though, most of the opinions and response on the book have been positive. Of course, tastes vary and not everybody likes the same thing. People have different likes and dislikes. Some may like it or some might think I have wasted my and their time How much life changed after the success? It is always exciting to see your name as an author on a book and your work being read by the world. The happiness could be compared to that of a mother holding her new born baby! The release of the book has completely turned my life to degrees. My friends treat me like a mini- celebrity. My email is filled with feedbacks, and facebook has become a bit crowded. Once in a while when someone recognizes me in a public place and comes up to me, it really gives a good feeling. But, as they say there are still miles to go. Well I think two things have motivated me to write. Firstly, as a child I was an ardent reader and secondly my family. I wanted to tell my story in a way that not only entertained the readers but made them think too. How much Rishi resembles Rochak? Basically, I would say that Rishi somewhat resembles me. I too believe in the existence of true love and for me too, my friends constitute my world. Are the central characters based on real persons known to you? In a way yes. Actually, I just wrote the characters and incidents that came to my mind randomly. I get my inspirations from everything around me, all the people around me, almost everything I see and observe. I apprehend everything around me and let my pen run loose. Love is one of the most intriguing, mystical and vibrant emotions ever experienced by the human race. Nevertheless it is also the most complex emotion, yet to be fully understood or defined. Ask anyone what love is? And the most common answer you could come across is that, it is a feeling which cannot be completely defined! Strange but true, that an emotion which in the history of mankind has changed destinies and shaped the life of millions, would still be in a state to be fully understood or comprehended. In fact it is anywhere and everywhere. One should have the patience, perseverance and more importantly an eye to judge and make the right choice. How was your experience with your publisher? Apart from the efforts of an individual, the success of any book depends largely on the encouragement and guidelines of many others. My publisher has been great. He is experienced, cooperative and understanding. Tell us something about yourself. How writing happens to you? I was born in Delhi and did my schooling from Amity International School. Friendship and love are my weaknesses and these make me even stronger. A voracious reader, my interests include writing and painting. And As I have already mentioned above, since childhood I was an ardent reader. I always wanted to write something. I was writing the novel since the last one year, but I did not have any specific desire of getting into the writing business. When my friends were busy chatting and bunking lectures to watch a movie, you could see me penning my novel down. Your take on this? Well, we too noticed this similarity which was totally coincidental. Though after reading, I assure you that that story plot of both the books are different, both teach you the meaning of love in different sense. If you are given chance then what book, specially a love story, you want to re-write? Though the story is more than perfect but, there are some incidents which need to be updated or changed. And finally, when we will see another Rochak Bhatnagar book? I am working on my second one. Any message to Spectralhues readers? Journey of life started with a full bag of luck and an empty bag of experience. The goal is to fill the bag of experience before the bag of luck gets empty. Get down and start writing. And never try to write something that does not come from your heart. Thanks for your time Rochak! Wish you all the best for your future projects. And all, may be. It may be the vigor. And, ban all averse with immaculate overture of graciously fathomable words firm in views. Justifying the undying conscience. And, dares to stay true. True to the world. And, to the words. With a dream in eyes it exists. The sprite that never shies away. The spirit that never dies!

Love Happens Only Once D "People often wonder, how do you know you are in love with some one? And I was in deep love with Pragya! I loved her not because of what she had but because of what I felt for her. I cared for her not because she needed care, but because I wanted to. I was always there for her, not because I wanted her to be with me but because I wanted to be with her. A walk with her in the silence of dark night, when I could feel each step, each single sigh, when warmth of her hand shared her emotional state and each word of her had a special significance of how much she loved me. And how much I loved her. If I had the power, I would wish to wake up every morning feeling her warm breadth on my shoulder, feeling her so close so that I could see her beautiful eyes first thing in the sunlight, sleep every night kissing her wonderful and charming face and hugging her close to me as we fall asleep. When you are in love, it all is a strange feeling. We think about it, sing about it. Dream about it and loose sleep worrying about it. When we discover it, we fear loosing it. But in all love is the constant source of pleasure, of happiness. It is a four letter word, easy to spell, difficult to define and impossible to live without. And my love for Pragya was uneasy to define. If I start telling you how much I loved her, the whole universe will go short! Every time I thought of her, I thought only of how lucky I was to have her in my life. The way she would smile when I would make her laugh, the tender way she would hold me nearer, the look in her eyes, when she would tell me she love me, all filled me with wonder. I thanked god every day for the gift of her and her love and I hoped and dreamt of our future together. I belonged with her and she with me and with the love between us; we will be together for eternity. The warmth of her lap could be felt in my heart. The affection of her touch would make me forget the world. The way she would roll her hands in my hair would make me love her like crazy. It might be night for everyone, but for me it was morning, as I could see her bright eyes. The sweetness of her hug would take me to dreamland. She made me feel heaven with her. For me she had become my everything. My morning would start with her, and night would end with her. She was my sweetheart, my Barbie doll and my Shakira. I loved her a lotâ€¦. More than a lotâ€¦â€¦.

After reading the interview of Mr. Bhatnagar, I was intrigued. When his mates were preparing for board exams, he was busy flirting with girls! When another friend was searching for a substitute Dad, he was busy kissing his girlfriend in a ladies washroom! Meet Rishi and enter into his world full of fun, flirting with random girls, hanging out with friends and his love-interest Ananya. If you think LOVE is just another four letter word, think again! The story starts with a guy name Rishi giving a speech in the freshers party. She eve told me that you are the perfect boyfriend any girl could get. What sort of sane man would discuss something as private as his love story with a complete stranger? And as simply as he put it, he is a bastard. The story starts when he is in tenth grade and how he ditches a girl and throws her feelings at her face. So a year passes, he is in the eleventh grade and there is this drop dead gorgeous girl in school, and one glance at her, Rishi is smitten. After a brief meeting with her they meet again after three years. They spend most of their time together. Rishi has feelings for her since the day he met her but never managed to say it to her face. Of course he had to face a rejection. Then he realizes what has he been doing all these years, but he has learned his reason and so he gets his love interest in the end. YA is not my favourite genre, but it is not my least favourite either, so I gave it a try. The characters are badly portrayed, bad tenses, bad language, abrupt scenes, a completely predictably plot and the formation of sentences is very odd. A guy for whom relationships are just a waste of time falls for a girl at first sight? Love is a strong word, a strong emotion. But the first time he sees her, all he wants is to gather her in his arms and tell her he loves her? Sure there is an attraction, a spark, but the first meeting with her changed him entirely as a person? The story could have been developed but the novel -la is too short for that. I think Rochak Bhatnagar is a nice writer and I am concluding this from the interview alone , but this story was not for him. He should take a break, practice and write something better.
