Fish auction in Honolulu, Hawaii There are traditionally four types of auction that are used for the allocation of a single item[citation needed]: English auction, also known as an open ascending price auction. This type of auction is arguably the most common form of auction in use today. Dutch auction also known as an open descending price auction. Items are allocated based on bid order; the highest bidder selects their item s first followed by the second highest bidder, etc. In a modification, all of the winning participants pay only the last announced price for the items that they bid on. In this type of auction all bidders simultaneously submit sealed bids so that no bidder knows the bid of any other participant. The highest bidder pays the price they submitted. Furthermore, as bidders cannot see the bids of other participants they cannot adjust their own bids accordingly. However, many other types of auctions exist, including: Multiunit auctions sell more than one identical item at the same time, rather than having separate auctions for each. This type can be further classified as either a uniform price auction or a discriminatory price auction. All-pay auction is an auction in which all bidders must pay their bids regardless of whether they win. The highest bidder wins the item. All-pay auctions are primarily of academic interest, and may be used to model lobbying or bribery bids are political contributions or competitions such as a running race. A type of auction, used in England for selling ships, in which the highest bid laid on the table by the time a burning candle goes out wins. Bidding fee auction, also known as a penny auction, often requires that each participant must pay a fixed price to place each bid, typically one penny hence the name higher than the current bid. That is, a bidder can specify that he or she will pay for items A and B, but only if he or she gets both. Unique bid auctions Many homogenous item auctions, e. When the bidding starts no new bidders can join, and each bidder must continue to bid each round or drop out. It has similarities to the ante in Poker. In practice, an auction advertised as "absolute" or "no-reserve" may nonetheless still not sell to the highest bidder on the day, for example, if the seller withdraws the item from the auction or extends the auction period indefinitely, [37] although these practices may be restricted by law in some jurisdictions or under the terms of sale available from the auctioneer. Reserve auction is an auction where the item for sale may not be sold if the final bid is not high enough to satisfy the seller; that is, the seller reserves the right to accept or reject the highest bid. In the latter case, the decision to accept a bid is deferred to the auctioneer, who may accept a bid that is marginally below it. A reserve auction is safer for the seller than a no-reserve auction as they are not required to accept a low bid, but this could result in a lower final price if less interest is generated in the sale. This, coupled with the dynamic bidding process, improves the chances of reaching the fair market value of the item. The top two bidders must pay their full final bid amounts, and only the highest wins the auction. The intent is to make the high bidders bid above their upper limits. In the final rounds of bidding, when the current losing party has hit their maximum bid, they are encouraged to bid over their maximum seen as a small loss to avoid losing their maximum bid with no return a very large loss. Silent auction is a variant of the English auction in which bids are written on a sheet of paper. At the predetermined end of the auction, the highest listed bidder wins the item. Other variations of this type of auction may include sealed bids. Losing bidders must pay the difference between their bid and the next lowest bid. The winning bidder pays the amount bid for the item, without top-up. Once only two bidders remain, each submits a sealed bid. The higher bidder wins, paying either the first or second price. Both finalists receive a premium: Other auction types also exist, such as Simultaneous Ascending Auction [48] Anglo-Dutch auction, [49] Private value auction, [50] Common value auction Genres[ edit ] The range of auctions that take place is extremely wide and one can buy almost anything, from a house to an endowment policy and everything in-between. Some of the recent developments have been the use of the Internet both as a means of disseminating information about various auctions and as a vehicle for hosting auctions themselves. Here is a short description of the most common types of auction. This section possibly contains original research. Please improve it by verifying the claims made and adding inline citations. research should be removed. September Learn how and when to remove this template message Government, bankruptcy and general auctions are amongst the most common auctions to be found today. A government auction is simply an auction held on behalf of a government body generally at a general sale. Here one may find a vast range of materials that have to be sold by various government bodies, for example: Also in this group you will find auctions ordered by executors who are entering the assets of individuals who have perhaps died in testate those who have died without leaving a will, or in debt. Police auctions are generally held at general auctions although some forces use online sites including eBay to dispose of lost and found and seized goods. Land and property auctions â€" Here one can buy anything from an ancient castle to a brand new commercial premises. Antiques and collectibles auctions hold the opportunity for viewing a huge array of items. Internet auctions â€" With a potential audience of millions the Internet is the most exciting part of the auction world at the moment. Led by sites in the United States but closely followed by UK auction houses, specialist Internet auctions are springing up all over the place, selling everything from antiques and collectibles to holidays, air travel, brand new computers, and household equipment. Titles â€" One can buy a manorial title at auction. Every year several of these specialist auctions take place. However, it is important to note that manorial titles are not the same thing as peerages, and have been described as "meaningless" in the modern world. The attraction is that someone else has already paid substantially to set up the policy in the first place, and one will be able with the help of a financial calculator to calculate its real worth and decide whether it is worth taking on. On-site auctions â€" Sometimes when the stock or assets of a company are simply too vast or too bulky for an auction house to transport to their own premises and store, they will hold an auction within the confines of the bankrupt company itself. Bidders could find themselves bidding for items which are still plugged in, and the great advantage of these auctions taking place on the premises is that they have the opportunity to view the goods as they were being used, and may be able to try them out. Bidders can also avoid the possibility of goods being damaged whilst they are being removed as they can do it or at least supervise the activity. Private treaty sales â€" Occasionally, when looking at an auction catalogue some of the items have been withdrawn. This means that the goods have already been sold off, usually to a trader or dealer on a private, behind-the-scenes basis before they have had a chance to be offered at the auction sale. These goods are rarely in single lots â€" photocopiers or fax machines would generally be sold in bulk lots. Charity auctions - Used by nonprofits, higher education, and religious institutions as a method to raise funds for a specific mission or cause both through the act of bidding itself, and by encouraging participants to support the cause and make personal donations. June Learn how and when to remove this template message Each type of auction has its specific qualities such as pricing accuracy and time required for preparing and conducting the auction. The number of simultaneous bidders is of critical importance. Open bidding during an extended period of time with many bidders will result in a final bid that is very close to the true market value. Where there are few bidders and each bidder is allowed only one bid, time is saved, but the winning bid may not reflect the true market value with any degree of accuracy. Of special interest and importance during the actual auction is the time elapsed from the moment that the first bid is revealed to the moment that the final winning bid has become a binding agreement. This section does not cite any sources. June Auctions can differ in the number of participants: In a supply or reverse auction, m sellers offer a good that a buyer requests In a demand auction, n buyers bid for a good being sold In a double auction n buyers bid to buy goods from m sellers Prices are bid by buyers and asked or offered by sellers. Auctions may also differ by the procedure for bidding or asking, as the case may be: Without modification, auction generally refers to an open, demand auction, with or without a reservation price or reserve, with the item sold to the highest bidder.

TO THE HIGHEST BIDDER. Alice Joyce as a country girl struggling to pay off the mortgage on the old farm in "The Highest Bidder," a Vitagraph feature. A plot old enough, and in the present case often lacking in plausibility, but well acted as it is, and attractively presented, the picture should find a goodly amount of favor.
