

1: Why Older Women Like Younger Men: Reasons Why Women Become Cougars | PairedLife

I could deal with three to eight years younger but 10 plus was a big age gap for my conservative, borderline militant ideas about love. I'm an open-minded person living in an open society so was.

Contact Author Why do women like younger men? Why would an older woman want to date a younger guy? Why do women become cougars and what makes a woman fancy a toy boy who is younger to her by a decade? Still wondering why women like younger men? Source 1 Men of their age may not be as attractive and handsome Age is not kind to anyone. A woman may date a younger man if she feels that men of her age are not as attractive or handsome any more. This applies especially to women who have not allowed the years take toll on their bodies by being motivated to work out and stay fit. They may feel that they are compromising by going out with a man who is their age, but looks at least a decade older. She would rather date a man who is a decade younger but looks almost her age. Advantage of increased relationship experience over her toy boy lover An older woman will have more relationship experience than her young lover. This makes the woman feel more capable of handling the ups and downs of a relationship. She will derive pleasure in knowing that she is in charge of the relationship. A young guy may also not mind the woman taking charge in the relationship as long as her behavior does not come across as annoying or nagging. This is a win-win situation for the younger man and the older woman. In either of these situations, the woman is likely to have had much more experience in the bedroom than her toy boy lover. Dating gets very difficult for women as they age. A woman may be able to confidently enter a relationship with a younger guy knowing that she has had more experience in the bedroom than him. There are no insecurities and the fear of not living up to expectations is transferred from the older woman to the younger guy. Many older women date younger guys simply because most men of their age are either married, in a relationship or not bothered at all. An older woman may naturally start dating a guy who is younger than her because of this reason. Yet, she will be called a cougar because the term itself points to women who date men younger than them by many years. The rut of life can frustrated any individual after some years. Dating a younger man could be a way of letting off some steam. The playful romance, romantic outings and youthful love can make her feel like she is reliving her twenties. The presence of a younger man will also keep a woman updated with the latest trends, helping her become trendier. She will get to keep up with the latest in music, movies, fashion and media – something which she never had a chance while being burdened by the responsibilities of marriage, children and work. This concept is similar to the mentality of a child or a toddler, who will always go for the candy that he or she is not allowed to eat. The elusive nature of having a relationship with a younger man can attract an older woman who is looking for something that will thrill her and completely change her life. This is because the woman presumably has worked for many years and is in a very healthy financial situation. She can buy her younger lover gifts, take him out on dates and even take him shopping. This thrill of taking the lead in money matters may be quite an exciting and nurturing feeling for the older woman. In comparison, men in their twenties have fewer things to worry about. This makes them more fun-loving and spontaneous. Younger men will be willing to go out for that midnight pizza without worrying about an early morning the next day or they will happily party on a weekday without fussing about a hangover on the next. A younger man will also be relatively less occupied, making him readily available for impromptu dates. All these things make a relationship with a younger man a lot less serious and a lot more fun. A relationship with a younger guy may be seen as a way of bringing the spark back in the bedroom. A woman who has just stepped out of a loveless marriage may feel the need to get the groove back in the bedroom. While this is generally not the sole reason why older women like younger guys, rediscovering what it feels to be loved and cherished by a man can make a woman prolong her relationship with her toy boy. Proving that she still looks attractive An older woman may look forward to dating a younger man to passively feed her ego and self-esteem. Knowing that she can easily attract a guy many years younger to her will make her feel more beautiful. A woman in her late thirties or forties will obviously feel smitten when a man who is a decade younger compliments her for her looks. It will make her forget the age difference because she will feel like the prettiest woman in the world when a younger man finds her attractive.

2: 15 Reasons Why Women Love Older Men

I don't think there's anything wrong with loving a younger man any more than there's a problem with an older man loving a younger woman. If you two respect each other and care for each other then there's really no problem and anyone who judges that is being foolish.

According to Victoria Houston, author of Loving a Younger Man, nearly forty percent of all women marrying between the ages of thirty-five and forty-four are marrying younger men. As Sarah, a thirty-seven year old divorced mother of three, says about her relationship with Troy, age twenty-four, "Older men scare me. At this stage, I want someone to share my life, not take it over. He probably divorced a woman like me. She loves from strength rather than weakness and has a younger friend and companion as well as a lover. Younger men grew up as more women entered the workforce, so they are supportive of women who want both a career and a family. Are you ready for a younger man? Take the following test and share the results with a friend. It may change the way you look at men. Write down everything that comes to mind, like "a more equal relationship," or "greater passion. Count the pros and cons and see which list is longer. Now look again at what you might gain. Are the positives quantitatively or qualitatively stronger than the negatives? What is a more passionate, equal relationship worth to you? Like any major life decision, it helps to write down the pros and cons and see how you feel about the answers. One thing is certain-women who open their hearts and minds to younger men find the love they deserve. A woman with a younger man enjoys the freedom to be the best she can be. He shares her life in a new and different way that allows her to combine work and love rather than having to choose between the two. Such couples are much more likely to share power and decision-making. For women, a younger man means:

3: Why older women and younger men are a perfect match

When it came to finding love in New York, Amber Soletti, a year-old who lives in the West Village, had no luck dating older guys or men her own age.

The phenomenon of men dating younger women is depicted everywhere in pop culture. Hollywood movies frequently cast much older male actors to star alongside young actresses, and the same actors are often snapped by paparazzi dating much younger women in real life. The Power Dynamic Is Skewed "Power dynamic" is a term that recognizes that power in social relationships can come from many sources: Speaking in general terms, older people have more social power than younger people, and, in a variety of demonstrable ways and despite measurable progress in this area, men have more power than women. Hence, when you combine the two variables "an older man and a younger woman" the power dynamic favors the older man. The bigger the age gap between you, and the younger she is, the more skewed the power dynamic will be in your favor. Other variables like race, class and gender identity will also factor in to the power balance of your relationship. It certainly depends heavily on the age of the younger woman rather than just the quantity of the age gap. For example, when a rapper in his late 20s dates a year-old celeb, people find it suspicious and harmful, but fewer people think a much larger, plus-years age gap between some celebrity couples is objectionable if the woman is in her 30s when they got together "these are fully grown women capable of making their own decisions and much less likely to be affected by peer pressure. Again, though, these are not hard and fast lines or rules, and you need to draw your own moral lines. She Is, By Definition, Not Mature A young woman can be smart, witty and worldly, but she is, by definition, not mature or experienced. If your prospective partner is fresh out of high school, having never weathered a job loss, heartbreak or any of the other hallmarks of adult life, you are a going to struggle to relate to each other, and b she is not going to be well-equipped with the tools needed for a serious relationship yet. She Might Be Expecting Too Much From You Stereotypically speaking, when a young woman dates an older man she may have a few qualities in mind that she expects you to have: She may think that guys her own age are immature and directionless, and be looking for an older guy to provide more stability for her. She might have completely unrealistic expectations of men in general, or she might simply have unrealistic expectations from you in particular that you are never going to be able to meet, and you will need to work those out before starting something serious. You Might Be Expecting Too Much From Her Similarly, you might be tempted to date a younger woman rather than someone your own age because of a cliched idea that they have a relative lack of "issues", are more wild, fun, flexible, and so on. The only way you can figure this stuff out is to talk openly about your expectations. While not everyone moves through life at the same pace and ticks off the same milestones at the same time university, work, marriage, babies, buying a house, etc. These issues can, of course, affect couples who are the same age and who have different priorities, but relationships with a large age gap are especially susceptible to the "stage of life" problem. Should you date a younger woman? It pays to look very closely and honestly at your reasons for considering dating a younger woman. If that scares you, you might not be ready for a relationship at all, let alone one with a younger woman.

If you're ready to accept that age is just a number, then your pool of eligible bachelors just got a hell of a lot bigger—and might include some much younger dudes.

Cancel 0 Love knows no bounds and no limits. True love can conquer anything, right? Birds of a feather flock together for a reason: Like any relationship, ours had its ups and downs, most of them not age-related. But in case you might be falling for an older guy, here are a few of the highs and lows of loving an older man you can look out for: Get used to them. Instead, you live in the now, which in your case means going on lots of spontaneous breakfast-and lunch dates, turning down extra shifts to spend time with him, and to take the dream vacation you always wanted to go on. Because you know that time is limited. The look you get when you casually talk to new acquaintances, and the talk turns to significant others. You have tried all variations: At first startled, they will quickly rearrange their face into a neutral expression mixed with a forced little smile. Labelling you as a gold digger this very minute? You want to tell them: Because over the years, in many encounters like this one, you have learned the golden secret: You know the truth, your close friends and family do, and everybody else is unimportant. So you smile a private little smile to yourself, and simply say: We have lived it, baby! Most likely you will experience a variation of the following scenario, and you will get a kick out of it: The custom official waves you forward, and you are the first to arrive at the desk. He greets you cheerily with the words: You will benefit greatly from his age advantage. Trouble at work, a fight with your parents, a problem that seems insurmountable? He has been there, done that. Not only can you learn from his experience, he is also here to tell you: It is not as bad as you think; everything will work out. Your circle of friends will encompass all ages, which is a beautiful thing: From people your own age to people of his, their children will range from babies to adults. You get the best of both worlds! You know how the story ends. He has seen the beginnings, middles and endings of relationships, marriages, and people. It may sound cruel, but life is a circle, and he has seen it a few more times than you. You are more aware of its existence, which gives you more time getting used to the idea and to make your peace with it. Men may be unfairly advantaged in the aging gracefully business, but rest assured:

I had experienced that feeling only once before and I was very aware of when and how it had happened and I was certain it was happening again, with him. Despite the nice summer evening, all I wanted to do was go home. But there I was, standing amongst a crowd of people feeling slightly alien. But that was until he told me his age. I could deal with three to eight years younger but 10 plus was a big age gap for my conservative, borderline militant ideas about love. I guess I bought into the idea that it is only men who have younger partners. It is okay for them but not so for women. But do you know when you have a feeling that somehow you have just connected with another person? And so, on my way home, I thought in some of the greatest love stories where age was not an issue. For example, Khadijah, the first wife of Prophet Muhammad. He married her when he was 25 and she was already 40. It is well documented that they had a very happy, loving and monogamous marriage. I also thought in the genius Croatian pianist, Ivo Pogorelich, who at 22 years old married the love of his life, Aliza Kezeradze, He was with her till she passed away and still remembers her to this day as his greatest love and biggest influence. Since when falling in love has anything to do with age? That must have been my dream that night because the morning after the party, a phone call woke me up and it was him asking what I was doing that Sunday. The rest, as they say, is history. When two people love each other, there are no barriers that can stop the feeling that connects them. Love is free and no amount of money can buy you love, it knows of no race, no color, no religion and no age, so when it knocks on your door, why repress it based on the fact that you have been in this planet longer than your beloved? Having a younger partner is not about "enjoying an experience" bound for failure. All relationships are bound for failure if there is no respect or trust. Hardly ever, a relationship ends because of age. Lots of people whose partners are of same or similar age break up because love is either gone, they fell for someone else, or they simply got bored with each other. Women tend to analyze a lot, the why he is not calling, texting, committing, and the rest. The answer is plain simple: This "lack of commitment" or "not ready for a relationship yet" situation, has nothing to do with the year we were born or even maturity. The timing and the extra connection are simply not there for someone to want more. In any case, age is always out of the equation in love matters. In our lifetime, there is no such thing as "forever," and the same applies to relationships. Afterwards, it is up to life to decide whether forever is two years, two months or till death do you part. Life is a journey and our dreams, feelings, goals and aspirations remain regardless of age. The older woman subject is like the online dating taboo of the early 90s; forward 15 years and nobody blinks an eye if a couple mentions they met online. We are made to believe that it is best to have a relationship with someone older or same age because not only would the person be more mature and have more experience but because otherwise, your partner may leave you for a younger woman. Utterly infantile unfounded fears, and guess what? A younger man can fall in love with you too. Video by article author.
