

1: I'm as Mad as Hell, and I'm Not Going to Take This Anymore!

I'm mad as Hell and I'm not going to take this anymore.

We only have life for a short amount of time. Life is so full of damn negativity and stupid bullshit. Today, I change how life is going to be played out for me. For those who decide to say they want some fun in their life, just look around. Seriously, is it worth it to be down most of the time? I know the typical emo stereotype is to sit there, hate life, and just think that nothing will change. I know no one is asking for advice or something, so you can take it for what its worth. But damn, Bimp was so right when he made a post about how he is sick of all this suicidal oh woah is me poetry being made all the time. Come on people, I know you have happy moments, I know we all have crappy moments. Why make those moments the things that make us wither away and just get to where we are at? Why put so much emphasis on finding a guy or girl to date? Chew on this for a second. The people that choose to get married to someone end up with a better chance of getting a divorce. Yes, this definitely looks like a rant and rave topic right here, but its meant to enlighten and say, you make your own decisions in life. You choose the outcome, not your friends, your family, or anyone else. You have the power to go down any path that you want. This reminds me of a movie that I watched not too long ago. The newscaster got on there and said how life is full of bullshit. Just keep saying that to yourself until you get mad and want to change who you are for the better. Not change your person, but change how things affect you, change your future, and change it to something that you really want. Fuck the people that try to hurt you and bring you down. At the end of the day, what did we achieve? We produced another child to experience the same fate as us. No one else can experience anything for you so you only have one chance, one life, where you can do all this for yourself. Whatever the fuck you want to do. I never signed a contract at birth that said I was their property, which essentially, I am. Life as they make it is a filtration system. A little league baseball team. About 1 or 2 of them will go on to play in the Major league and the rest wont. We are constantly being filtered and categorised throughout our entire lives and the government can drain our talents and creativity for their own personal gain. You two ever considered taking over the world? Seriously you guys could be revolutionists. This set me on fire.

But first, get up out of your chairs, open the window, stick your head out, and yell, and say it: 'I'm as mad as hell, and I'm not gonna take this anymore!' The man behind the words of this powerful speech was the American playwright, screenwriter and novelist Sidney Aaron "Paddy" Chayefsky.

I recently watched the movie Network and in it Howard Beale has a mental breakdown live on the 6: Why am I telling you this? Last night I checked my email and had a notification that someone had linked back to my blog. So I checked the link and was absolutely shocked. This person had not only linked to my blog, they copied my whole entire post with photos, formatting etc. Can you say copyright infringement? The reason that I got the pingback was that I had linked one of my other posts as a reference in that post. I contacted this person via tweet she did not respond and by email. Her email response was this: I am using software to auto-post curated articles, and I did not realize the code that generated the attribution link was not functioning properly. I have modified the code so that this should not be a problem going forward. If you would prefer that I exclude all your articles in the future even with the attribution and back link, please let me know and I will configure an exception. So, I did some research on her blog. Quick example for you. You tell me, does it look like this post was written and published by HubSpot?

"I'm mad as hell and I'm not going to take it anymore" declared the longtime news anchor Howard Beale in the film classic www.enganchecubano.com the picture, people everywhere toss open their.

I am an Emotional Empath â€” which means I can sense the emotions of others and sometimes even take them on as my own. This energetic climate can overwhelm me very easily without my extreme self-care tools. The time for being apathetic is over. We are living in a political climate where doing nothing or ignoring the problem in the hopes it will go away simply is no longer an option. I have a voice and it is time to use it. My heart aches over all that is transpiring in this country. The deception, the fear, the hatred, the division. I have a difficult time understanding how in this day and age we â€” as a collective â€” are still so divided. And my sadness around this has now turned into anger â€” and in being totally authentic â€” my anger scares me. To continue to fan the flames of division and further widen that gap. What is happening in our country is shining a light on all that still needs to heal. This is the Divine Purpose that is currently being served. While it may be difficult to live within, it is necessary for our evolution. This also includes seeing our own privilege. I admit that I have not experienced what a person of color has experienced. I can say I have experienced discrimination as a woman. I have experienced harrasment. As a woman, rights and privileges that we now take for granted were instituted within my own lifetime. The Equal Credit Opportunity Act in allowed women to get credit with their own name. Less than 50 years ago! As I write this, it is Election Day. Mid-terms generally have a very apathetic turn-out. As I stated earlier, the time for apathy is over. This is how we as a people of this nation use our voice. We go to the polls! No matter how you vote, it is of vital importance that you get out and vote. That you use your voice! Especially as women, it is so important to exercise the right that many fought and died for. Freedoms that we have enjoyed are being challenged. The right for women to have reproductive control over their own bodies. The right to worship in the manner we so choose. Shootings in places of worship, in our schools and even at the grocery store. Simply because of differences. It has to stop! You may feel powerless to stop any of this. And no matter what the results of Election Day turn out to be, we still can make our voices heard! So, how can you use your voice and help affect a powerful healing? Be Informed â€” Take an interest in what is going on in your community. Be willing to look at the political climate both on the federal and local level. You want to be willing to hear between the lines. So much of the division we are currently living in is due to the unwillingness of both sides to sit down and really listen with an open heart and open mind. Get Involved â€” In whatever way feels good to you. Take part in town meetings. Call and speak with your representatives. Attend a peaceful protest. Be willing to take a stand. Your words will not be heard if you are screaming from the energy of righteous indignation and name calling. Remember, underlying all of this is the energy of FEAR. Practice Extreme Self-Care â€” Politics and religion push our buttons like nothing else can. Know when to stay and when to walk away. Are you willing to do your part and use your voice in an authentic, loving way? Are you willing to take that anger and channel it into loving action? Every little bit â€” done with love â€” helps! I want you to get up right now, sit up, go to your windows, open them and stick your head out and yell - 'I'm as mad as hell and I'm not going to take this anymore!' Things have got to change. But.

I want all of you to get up out of your chairs. I want you to get up right now and go to the window. Open it, and stick your head out, and yell: Last night I hit the jackpot after clicking on Network , the Sidney Lumet film nominated for 10 Oscars, and winning four. Revisiting the film forty-or-so years on it cuts through as a prescient and prophetic vision of malevolent corporate control, way-off-kilter craziness and many scenes that relentlessly pick at the scabs of a very unhealthy set of human conditions. And for all of that occasionally darkly and improbably funny. But all thatâ€™the screaming man at the window, the sky-scraper ascending into space and just what was everyone Mad As Hell at? In Network Peter Finch plays Howard Beale, an ageing news anchor of a showâ€™and networkâ€™floundering by ratings, revenue and reputation. That is untilâ€™on the night that he announces his forced retirement and tells viewers that in one week he will commit suicide live on airâ€™things start to both fall apart and coalesce all at once. It only gets better as Beale descends into madnessâ€™and ratings greatnessâ€™and chaos erupts all around him. Everybody knows things are bad. Banks are going bust. Shopkeepers keep a gun under the counter. We know things are bad â€™ worse than bad. We sit in the house, and slowly the world we are living in is getting smaller, and all we say is: Just leave us alone. I want you to get MAD! My life has value! Go to your windows. But first, get up out of your chairs, open the window, stick your head out, and yell, and say it:

Mad as Hell and not gonna take it anymore. likes. For conservative talk. Christian behavior.

Everybody knows things are bad. Banks are going bust. Shopkeepers keep a gun under the counter. We know things are bad – worse than bad. We sit in the house, and slowly the world we are living in is getting smaller, and all we say is: Just leave us alone. I want you to get MAD! My life has value! I want all of you to get up out of your chairs. I want you to get up right now and go to the window. Open it, and stick your head out, and yell: I want you to get up right now. Go to your windows. But first, get up out of your chairs, open the window, stick your head out, and yell, and say it: Edward George Ruddy died today! And woe is us! So, a rich little man with white hair died. What does that got to do with the price of rice, right? And why is that woe to us? Because you people and sixty-two million other Americans are listening to me right now. Because less than three percent of you people read books. Because less than fifteen percent of you read newspapers. Because the only truth you know is what you get over this tube. This tube is the Gospel. This tube can make or break Presidents, Popes, Prime Ministers. This tube is the most awesome, god-damn force in the whole godless world. And woe is us if it ever falls into the hands of the wrong people. And when the twelfth largest company in the world controls the most awesome, god-damn propaganda force in the whole godless world, who knows what shit will be peddled for truth on this network. So, you listen to me. Television is not the truth. Television is a circus, a carnival, a traveling troupe of acrobats, storytellers, dancers, singers, jugglers, sideshow freaks, lion tamers, and football players. So if you want the Truth, go to God! Go to your gurus. We lie like hell. Just look at your watch. We deal in illusions, man. None of it is true! But you people sit there day after day, night after night, all ages, colors, creeds. You do whatever the tube tells you. You dress like the tube, you eat like the tube, you raise your children like the tube. You even think like the tube. This is mass madness. We are the illusion. So turn off your television sets. Turn them off now. Turn them off right now. Turn them off and leave them off. Turn them off right in the middle of this sentence I am speaking to you now. Last night I got up here and asked you people to stand up and fight for your heritage, and you did, and it was beautiful. Six million telegrams were received at the White House. The Arab takeover of CCA has been stopped. The people spoke, the people won. It was a radiant eruption of democracy. But I think that was it, fellas. That sort of thing is not likely to happen again. Because at the bottom of all our terrified souls, we know that democracy is a dying giant, a sick, sick dying, decaying political concept, writhing in its final pain. The United States is the richest, the most powerful, the most advanced country in the world, light-years ahead of any other country. What is finished is the idea that this great country is dedicated to the freedom and flourishing of every individual in it. Because this is no longer a nation of independent individuals. The whole world, not just us. Diana Christiansen[edit] I was married for four years, and pretended to be happy; and I had six years of analysis, and pretended to be sane. I apparently have a masculine temperament. I seem to be inept at everything except my work. All I want out of life is a 30 share and a 20 rating. It was a perfectly admissible argument that Howard Beale advanced in the days that followed. It was, however, also a very depressing one. Nobody particularly cared to hear his life was utterly valueless. The initial response to the new Howard Beale show was not auspicious. The press was, without exception, hostile and industry reaction, negative. The first known instance of a man who was killed because he had lousy ratings. Dialogue[edit] Howard Beale: A 50 share, at least. We could make a series of it. Suicides, assassinations, mad bombers, Mafia hitmen, automobile smash-ups: Today is Wednesday, September the 24th, and this is my last broadcast. Yesterday I announced on this program that I was going to commit public suicide, admittedly an act of madness. I just ran out of bullshit. Am I still on the air? Bullshit is all the reasons we give for living. So there better be someone somewhere who does know. That man is a noble creature that can order his own world who needs God? That man is full of bullshit. And I was married for 33 years of shrill, shrieking fraud. I just ran out of it, you see. I think we can get a hell of a movie of the week out of it, maybe even a series A series about a bunch of, uh, bank-robbing guerrillas? What are we gonna call it - the Mao Tse-Tung Hour? Look, I sent you all a concept analysis report yesterday. Did any of you read it? But when I took over this department, it had the worst programming record in television history. This network is an industry joke. We better start putting together one winner for next September. I want a show developed, based on the activities of a terrorist group. All I know is that this violates every canon of respectable broadcasting. Your indignation is duly noted; you can always resign tomorrow. Go anywhere you want. Or -- or some broad that you picked up after three belts of booze. Your last roar of passion before you settle into your emeritus years. Is that my share?
