1: Mad Hatter's Holiday by Peter Lovesey, a Mysterious Review.

Mad Hatter's Holiday - the official site of crime writer Peter Lovesey A Sergeant Cribb mystery Shortlisted for the CWA Dagger Awards, The Victorian entertainment chosen for Cribb's next case was the seaside.

This tale is set in England and the beginning of summer. Albert Moscrop goes to Brighton for a seaside holiday, taking with him his latest acquisitions, a couple of telescopes. Albert is a bit of a voyeur and likes to watch people, and Brighton with its promenading tourist population is the perfect place. Albert arrives at the beginning of the "real season", the accommodation prices have risen, and a better class of tourist has arrived. Albert discovers the attractive face of Zena Prothero, and decides to find out more about her. He follows her, her son, and then contrives to meet her husband. And then Zena seems to disappear. Albert feels compelled to go to the police. At the same time a severed hand is discovered in the Alligator cavern at the Aquarium on the Brighton promenade jetty. The Brighton police feel that this is an investigation outside their capability, and send for London expertise in the form of Sergeant Cribb and Constable Thackeray from the Criminal Investigation Department. And so the two strands of the novel converge. Like many other middle class Victorians, his two week stay by the sea is the high point of his summer. But Moscrop has an unusual hobby. Today we might call him a Peeping Tom, but he would describe himself as an "optical enthusiast. Which honestly, how many of us do? This time, his spying has gotten him involved a little too deeply. He sees a remarkably beautiful woman. He spies on her. He follows her stepson, her maid, her husband. And the more he watches, the more he gets tangled up in her life. He contrives a meeting with the family. He sees himself as a rescuer. Is Moscrop to be trusted? Are any of the characters really who they seem? There were some loose ends at the end of the book, but it felt like a realistic conclusion.
