However, most of the people who refuse to make a joyful noise unto the Lord think nothing of shouting, clapping, and cheering at their favorite sporting event or music concert. For reasons not found in Scripture, many churches have adopted a somber, funeral-like atmosphere that squelches any expression of joy.

The point, Thaddeus, is that the Organization makes this distinction as part of their overall campaign to separate themselves from what they view as false religion. False religion sings hymns, but we sing songs of praise. It is perfectly fine for two words to be synonyms and still differ in meaning. So every hymn is a song, but not the other way around. While some remain so proud of self And others they do shun, We best leave judgement on the shelf Our judge is yet to come. I will read it a few times at least, to calm those whirlwind of emotions I had. Due to feelings what is right and not. Member Joseph Anton You can flag a comment by clicking its flag icon. One little nugget I use on my wife is one both my brother and I noticed years ago. It also feels like the more simple the gospel tune is, the heavier it is. Our songs seem completely secular by comparison. Now Joseph was a disciple of Jesus, but secretly because he feared the Jewish leaders. Our Judges appraisal of us and our efforts should be all that matters. I dont comment much but i felt compelled here. Humans beings are inherently flawed and Jesus recognized that in his apostles and taught them with love to love always. We all aspire to be more christlike and issues like the ones here will occur less frequently. I love you all and appreciate your life saving efforts because for some of us here it is really a matter of life and death. Words can be powerful. Actions have consequences much so in this pharasiacal organisation. In the past i would have used some more choice words to express how i feel about the judgemental tone of some of the comments but i think the christian association i have recieved from this site is finally making me truely understand what it means to be Christian. Thanks again brothers and sisters. Much love from Nigeria 10 months ago Meleti Vivlon You can flag a comment by clicking its flag icon. I so appreciate what you have said here. I was just commenting to a friend last night how my own journey has benefited from the interaction with others on these sites. It can still be a challenge, even now going on seven years. We worry less about ourselves and more about others. We care more about not hurting the feelings of others than of being hurt ourselves. Thanks for that understanding comment, Meliti. While many here may have faded, others are fading, while others may be fairly in, at least in person. We are all trying to deal with this in the best way possible, and are affected by existing friendships and the position of spouses and relatives. A special hi to those in the UK, in the hope that one day we might meet up though I have no idea how. Brain that is so good to hear, you have actually met someone who knows BP. Let us know which airport you are coming to. I might be able to meet you off the plane with a big MV card! Member mediator You can flag a comment by clicking its flag icon. Warm greetings to all my brothers and sisters here on BP. I rarely comment but always read the watchtower discussion and comments. I found this array of comments quite interesting respecting the emotions involved and the reactions to one particular persons comments. Robert For all of you to understand where I am in respects to the organization. I am happy to say that I have successfully faded and have not attended meetings for several years now. Of my five believing children all but one has left the organization as well. The last remaining one my oldest daughter called me yesterday and we talked in length â€” she is beginning to recognize that things are not right and is yet struggling, so I am happy to encourage her â€” but with patience. In the past some of my children simply viewed me as being apostate. Having been an elder for many years I understand that they were distraught over me having left. In time they have all gained insight into the why. Patience does have a marvelous influence upon others. What a lot of similar comments. All very encouraging to those of us here. Like many I have family, my own son, well in. Time will see what happens. As regards the songs, I trawled through the last song book, and there are relatively few which I would object to singing, although there are a few lines I do not like in some, while there are plenty about Christian qualities. Like many of you here, I will sing what I can, when I attend, and pass silently over the expressions I find distasteful, and remember the example of Naaman, who apologised to Jehovah for having to bow down to false Gods. I am sure Jesus will understand. I share ur sentiment. Like some others here I am stuck attending some meetings with my believing wife to keep peace. I just stand and look at the monitors and feel very awkward. As a matter of comparison, I went to a few Bible Student meetings. They still sing many songs that go back before Charles Russell. In their song book they have over songs , most of which praise Christ. The other notable thing was all of them sang with gusto and all of them took turns in playing the piano for accompaniment, music and singing is a big part of their worship , rather enjoyed it. Yes, and who are we praising if we sing these words? I thought hymns, psalms and songs of praise were to praise God and Jesus Christ. I have to change the words to quite a few these days. Or stand there In silent protest. I thought this watchtower study was particularly condescending. And yet you stay.

It was ever thus. Six years ago the gentlemen to my left, the Rhetoric class of entered Elements and I had the honour of teaching some of them Junior Cert History. I can still remember how nervous we all were for we were all newbies one way or another. We gradually got to know one another and rubbed along just fine until they passed from my care into Transition Year and then the Senior Cycle, which they are completing this week. And look at them now all grown up. When they arrived in their first year it would have seemed like forever to when they would be undertaking their last lap, and yet here they are classes almost finished coming off the final bend, with the finishing straight in sight and that final journey down the avenue next Sunday. He told me that, perhaps for the first time in their six years, they were keenly aware of the passing of the academic year: While the 37 years that have passed since I first arrived here in have taken a little longer to pass than the last six, they have still moved very quickly. Time is the great gift. None of us knows for sure how big our portion is, which makes it all the more important to use it while it is still ours. The ability to be aware of the passing moments as they pass, as opposed to bemoaning their passing in hindsight is rare. Just be extraordinary If your time in Clongowes is to be worth anything and it is worth much it should be reflected in your lives here and hereafter. Personally I have always settled for just being extraordinary and I commend it to you as well. Each of you each of us is already extraordinary. During our time here we are continually given opportunities to make our mark. They are not always the obvious openings such as a starring role in a play, on a cup team or in debate. But they are there. Step up to the mark. I used to be too shy to do many things for fear that people would look at me, but my mother always told me that when they were finished looking at me they would find something else to look at. She was right; people will always look at you. The thing is to give them something worth seeing.

What does it mean to make a joyful noise unto the Lord? Several places in Scripture command us to make a joyful noise unto the Lord Psalm The verses that follow explain what that means. For example, Psalm Sing praises to the Lord with the lyre, with the lyre and the sound of melody! With trumpets and the sound of the horn make a joyful noise before the King, the Lord! The picture is that of all creation joining together in noisy worship of God. A joyful noise is not merely noise for its own sake. Our world is filled with noise, much of it harmful or distracting. A joyful noise often includes music, such as singing, playing instruments, and dancing Psalm While there is a time for quiet reverence in the presence of the Lord Psalm 5: David danced 2 Samuel 6: We fear that we might be seen as undignified or fanatical. At those times, we are rejecting the opportunity to make a joyful noise unto the Lord. However, most of the people who refuse to make a joyful noise unto the Lord think nothing of shouting, clapping, and cheering at their favorite sporting event or music concert. For reasons not found in Scripture, many churches have adopted a somber, funeral-like atmosphere that squelches any expression of joy. On the other hand, some pretend to be making a joyful noise to the Lord, when in truth they are merely showing off. Some denominations encourage chaos under the guise of making a joyful noise. Hysterical emotionalism, bizarre noises, and screaming are not found in scriptural worship. The joyful noise God desires does not draw attention to the noise-maker or disrupt others. A joyful noise begins within a pure heart and radiates upward, finding expression in ways that honor God. When joy overflows, our actions reflect that joy. Just as God commands us to thank Him because we need to be thankful 1 Chronicles When the fruit of the Spirit dominates our lives, we cannot help but express itâ€”and part of that fruit is joy Galatians 5: God wants us to find such joy and excitement in Him that we cannot contain it. Musical talent has nothing to do with it. A joyful noise incorporates many creative expressions of praise: When the focus of our hearts is God and His greatness, our noise is a sweet sound to His ears.
