The Marzano Focused Teacher Evaluation Model March West Palm Beach, FL Beverly Carbaugh, Robert Marzano, Michael Toth A Focused, Scientific-Behavioral Evaluation Model.

Each of these works was generated from a synthesis of the research and theory. Thus, the model can be considered an aggregation of the research on those elements that have traditionally been shown to correlate with student academic achievement. The model includes four domains: Classroom Strategies and Behaviors Domain 2: Preparing and Planning Domain 3: Reflecting on Teaching Domain 4: Collegiality and Professionalism The four domains include 60 elements: The specifics of each domain are outlined below. For a detailed discussion of these elements, see Effective Supervision: Finally, the model is designed to help teachers systematically improve on weakness in their instructional practices over an extended period of time. Use of the Model Across the Country The model is being used in a variety of states, districts, and schools across the country. At a formal level the states of New York, New Jersey, and Florida employ the model whole or in part as the basis for teacher evaluation. It is also being piloted or considered in a number of other states e. Additionally, a growing number of districts across the country have adopted or adapted the model as the basis for teacher feedback and development e. In all of its professional development with individual schools, consultants for Marzano Research Laboratory use the model as the basis for teacher and feedback. Thus, the model is also being used as the basis for professional development in a wide variety of schools across the country. Web-based tools for gathering, aggregating, and reporting data on teacher status and growth are available from Learning Science International. Contacts that can provide more information about the Marzano Evaluation Model and its use include the following: Use of the Model Within Washington State Individual states, districts, and schools are welcome and encouraged to adapt the Marzano Evaluation Model to their specific needs and interests without outside consulting from Marzano Research Laboratory or other consulting groups. Detailed documents and scales rubrics for each criterion and their elements were developed and are currently being piloted for their efficacy and utility within the district. Additionally during the school year a number of two-day workshops on the model were sponsored by the Washington Education Service Districts ESDs. ESD consultants are authorized to provide consultation and training for the model. Rubrics that can be adopted or adapted are available from the ESDs. Rubrics that can be adopted or adapted are also available in the book Effective Supervision: View the Marzano documents.
