Interactive Read-Aloud Before reading Introduce the story, Miss Bindergarten Stays Home From Kindergarten, and ask students to give reasons why a teacher might have to stay home from school. Ask students if they have ever been sick and what things they had to do to get better. Discuss vocabulary that will help in understanding the text, such as flu and temperature. Talk about what schools and students do when a teacher cannot come to school. Have students explain what a substitute is and how they can help when a substitute comes to their class. Ask if there is anything people can do to help someone who is sick e. Tell students that you will be talking about a way to help keep people from getting sick. During reading Ask questions to guide the discussion and highlight strategies that good readers use. The following questions can be asked as you read the corresponding page numbers, but remember that the reading should be interactive so take cues from your students and tailor your questions according to their needs and responses. Who is Miss Bindergarten calling? What is happening to Franny? Why are both Franny and Miss Bindergarten staying home from school? What kind of cards are the kids making for Miss Bindergarten? What is happening to Lenny? What is happening to Raffie? Do you notice something that keeps repeating in the story, like a pattern? What can you tell from the pictures about how the characters in the story are feeling? Where are we in the alphabet now with Ursula, Vicky, and Wanda? What happened to Mr. Discuss what germs are and how they make people sick, and end the session by telling students that the best way to get rid of germs is to wash them down the drain! Hand Washing Lesson Access the Handwashing Teaching Module for lessons and activities that focus on the importance of hand washing and the general principles of germ transmission. Lesson 3 in the module provides techniques for proper hand washing. An evaluation sheet is provided to assess how well students follow the hand washing steps. Check the Great Ideas for Handwashing Educators for additional education methods related to hand washing. Students may also enjoy the Henry the Hand theme song. Making Cards This session is intended to help students explore the read-aloud in personal and exciting ways and to assess their knowledge of good hand washing techniques. Ask each student to make a "stay well" card for a friend or relative. Enlist an upper-grade class to help students make their cards. Have students access the My Card Maker website and choose the cover for their cards. For the message section, students should dictate or write the basic steps for correct hand washing. Students can then print the cards and give them to their friends and relatives. Make sure that students remember to also tell the recipients about the story they read in class and explain good hand washing techniques to them. The evaluation sheet can be adapted for the purposes of your lesson. When distributing copies of the poster to other classrooms, students can retell the main parts of the story Miss Bindergarten Stays Home From Kindergarten and explain why it is important for students to wash their hands in school and at home. The class or teacher can fill out an evaluation sheet. Help students compose a class book explaining the routines they follow in class each day. If students are advanced enough to write on their own, divide them into groups to write different chapters such as "Our opening routine" or "How we go to lunch," etc. For less experienced students, allow students to dictate the text for their book while you write for them. Students can then illustrate the pages. The final product serves as a good resource for substitute teachers and helps establish the classroom community.
