MLA documentation style uses brief parenthetical citations in the text that lead to the list of works cited. Many government documents do not conform well to MLA standards for brief parenthetical citations and the Handbook does not include extensive lists of examples for various types of government publications. A Uniform System of Citation for more in-depth guidelines on citing legal and legislative materials. A Uniform System of Citation. The MLA Handbook refers to the formats used for print government documents: Legislative references including documents originating from the US Congress should begin with the name of the government entity, e. On the web, or in a database? Title of the database or Web site italicized 2. Medium of publications consulted Web 3. Committee on House Administration. Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act of The Library of Congress. If you have multiple citations to different types of Congressional documents, you can replace the repeated elements with a double-dash. In the examples below, the double-dashes take the place of repeated elements, United States. To cite government documents in parenthetical references, the MLA Handbook refers users to page , Section 6. Citing a Work by a Corporate Author. Following MLA Style guidelines, the first element in a parenthetical reference generally, the author should correspond to the first element in the List of Works Cited. If you are referencing a number of legislative documents, you will need to include enough information in the parenthetical reference to direct the reader to the correct reference in the List of Works Cited. As you can see, even with the abbreviations, this makes for a fairly long reference and may make your paper more difficult to read. One alternative is to include the reference in a sentence. You will need to choose the citation style that best fits your needs and approved by your instructor and use it consistently throughout the paper.

When you have an in-text citation of a print research report, include it on the Works Cited page. Begin with the last name of the author, a comma, first name and a period. Put the title of the article and a period inside quotation marks.

Only complete this section if the report is available online URL: Access date is only required if the source may change over time. Attach quote Enter the quote or text that you are referencing above. Always check for grammar error before handing over your paper. Add reference Glossary of Selected Terms Annotation Brief summary of or your personal thoughts on a source. Can be added to the end of a citation. Date Accessed The month, day, and year a work was accessed or reviewed online. Electronically Published The date month, day, year a work was published online. Not always shown on a webpage. Place of Publication The city, state, or country of the publisher. Depending on the style, you may or may not need this information. Suffix Abbreviation tagged on to the end of a name that provides additional information about a person. This includes suffixes like Jr. Title The title is what the work you are citing is called. If there is no title, some styles ask for a description of the source instead. It is how you find a page on the internet; the address of the web page. Here is one example. Oil on wood, Watercolors on paper, Bronze, etc. Contributor Either a person, group, or organization that contributed to a piece of work. This includes, but is not limited to, an editor, writer, performer, interviewer, and director. Author Person who originally wrote or made a book, blog, poem, play, article, podcast, digital image, etc.

4: Products - Citations

The Modern Language Association's citation system, which is used primarily for work in literature and the humanities, allows for citation of sources in a number of types of writing. If you need to reference an annual report in your paper, be sure to give credit to your source in-text and on the "Works Cited" page to avoid plagiarism.

Each element should be followed by the punctuation mark shown here. Earlier editions of the handbook included the place of publication and required different punctuation such as journal editions in parentheses and colons after issue numbers. In the current version, punctuation is simpler only commas and periods separate the elements, and information about the source is kept to the basics. End this element with a period. Depending upon the type of source, it should be listed in italics or quotation marks. A book should be in italics: An individual webpage should be in quotation marks. The name of the parent website, which MLA treats as a "container," should follow in italics: A song or piece of music on an album should be in quotation marks: Title of container Unlike earlier versions, the eighth edition refers to "containers," which are the larger wholes in which the source is located. For example, if you want to cite a poem that is listed in a collection of poems, the individual poem is the source, while the larger collection is the container. The title of the container is usually italicized and followed by a comma, since the information that follows next describes the container. The container may also be a television series, which is made up of episodes. The container may also be a website, which contains articles, postings, and other works. Interview by Gareth Von Kallenbach. In some cases, a container might be within a larger container. You might have read a book of short stories on Google Books, or watched a television series on Netflix. It is important to cite these containers within containers so that your readers can find the exact source that you used. Accessed 27 May Other contributors In addition to the author, there may be other contributors to the source who should be credited, such as editors, illustrators, translators, etc. If their contributions are relevant to your research, or necessary to identify the source, include their names in your documentation. In the eighth edition, terms like editor, illustrator, translator, etc. A History of Insanity in the Age of Reason. Annotated and with an introduction by Vara Neverow, Harcourt, Inc. Version If a source is listed as an edition or version of a work, include it in your citation. Crowley, Sharon, and Debra Hawhee. Ancient Rhetorics for Contemporary Students. Number If a source is part of a numbered sequence, such as a multi-volume book, or journal with both volume and issue numbers, those numbers must be listed in your citation. Current Conditions and Future Directions. The International Online-Only Journal, vol. Accessed 20 May Publisher The publisher produces or distributes the source to the public. Museum of Modern Art, New York. Problems of the Digestive System. American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, Daniels, Greg and Michael Schur, creators. Publication date The same source may have been published on more than one date, such as an online version of an original source. For example, a television series might have aired on a broadcast network on one date, but released on Netflix on a different date. When the source has more than one date, it is sufficient to use the date that is most relevant to your use of it. This is the way to create a general citation for a television episode. However, if you are discussing, for example, the historical context in which the episode originally aired, you should cite the full date. An essay in a book, or an article in journal should include page numbers. The location of an online work should include a URL. A physical object that you experienced firsthand should identify the place of location. Optional elements The eighth edition is designed to be as streamlined as possible. The author should include any information that helps readers easily identify the source, without including unnecessary information that may be distracting. Date of original publication: If a source has been published on more than one date, the writer may want to include both dates if it will provide the reader with necessary or helpful information. The seventh edition handbook required the city in which a publisher is located, but the eighth edition states that this is only necessary in particular instances, such as in a work published before When you cite an online source, the MLA Handbook recommends including a date of access on which you accessed the material, since an online work may change or move at any time. Accessed 4 May As mentioned above, while the eighth edition recommends including URLs when you cite online sources, you should always check with your instructor or editor and include URLs at their discretion. A DOI, or digital object identifier, is a series of digits and letters that leads to the location of an online source. Alonso, Alvaro, and Julio A. Wiley Online Library, doi: Creating in-text citations using the eighth edition The in-text citation is a brief reference within your text that indicates the source you consulted. It should properly attribute any ideas, paraphrases, or direct quotations to your source, and should direct readers to the entry in the list of works cited. Work Cited Said, Edward W. When creating in-text citations for media that has a runtime, such as a movie or podcast, include the range of hours, minutes and seconds you plan to reference, like so Again, your goal is to attribute your source and provide your reader with a reference without interrupting your text. Your readers should be able to follow the flow of your argument without becoming distracted by extra information. Final thoughts about the eighth edition The current MLA guidelines teach a widely applicable skill. Once you become familiar with the core elements that should be included in each entry in the Works Cited list, you will be able to create documentation for almost any type of source. If you include the core elements, in the proper order, using consistent punctuation, you will be fully equipped to create a list of works cited on your own. Purdue U Writing Lab,

Electronic Submission Margins Except for the running head see below, leave margins of one inch at the top and bottom and on both sides of the text. Text Formatting Always choose an easily readable typeface Times New Roman is just one example in which the regular type style contrasts clearly with the italic, and set it to a standard size, such as 12 points. Do not justify the lines of text at the right margin; turn off any automatic hyphenation feature in your writing program. Double-space the entire research paper, including quotations, notes, and the list of works cited. Indent the first line of a paragraph half an inch from the left margin. Leave one space after a period or other concluding punctuation mark, unless your instructor prefers two spaces. On a new, double-spaced line, center the title. Do not italicize or underline your title, put it in quotation marks or boldface, or type it in all capital letters. Follow the rules for capitalization in the MLA Handbook 67th–68th, and italicize only the words that you would italicize in the text. Begin your text on a new, double-spaced line after the title, indenting the first line of the paragraph half an inch from the left margin. The top of the first page of a research paper. A research paper does not normally need a title page, but if the paper is a group project, create a title page and list all the authors on it instead of in the header on page 1 of your essay. If your teacher requires a title page in lieu of or in addition to the header, format it according to the instructions you are given. Running Head with Page Numbers Number all pages consecutively throughout the research paper in the upper right-hand corner, half an inch from the top and flush with the right margin. Type your last name, followed by a space, before the page number. Do not use the abbreviation p. Your writing program will probably allow you to create a running head of this kind that appears automatically on every page. Some teachers prefer that no running head appear on the first page. The running head of a research paper. Placement of the List of Works Cited The list of works cited appears at the end of the paper, after any endnotes. Begin the list on a new page. The list contains the same running head as the main text. The page numbering in the running head continues uninterrupted throughout. For example, if the text of your research paper including any endnotes ends on page 10, the works-cited list begins on page 11. Center the title, Works Cited, an inch from the top of the page. If the list contains only one entry, make the heading Work Cited. Double-space between the title and the first entry. Begin each entry flush with the left margin; if an entry runs more than one line, indent the subsequent line or lines half an inch from the left margin. This format is sometimes called hanging indentation, and you can set your writing program to create it automatically for a group of paragraphs. Hanging indentation makes alphabetical lists easier to use. Double-space the entire list. Continue it on as many pages as necessary. The top of the first page of a works-cited list. Tables and Illustrations Place tables and illustrations as close as possible to the parts of the text to which they relate. A table is usually labeled Table, given an arabic numeral, and titled. Type both label and title flush left on separate lines above the table, and capitalize them as titles do not use all capital letters. Give the source of the table and any notes immediately below the table in a caption. To avoid confusion between notes to the text and notes to the table, designate notes to the table with lowercase letters rather than with numerals. Double-space throughout; use dividing lines as needed. A table in a research paper. Any other type of illustrative visual material—for example, a photograph, map, line drawing, graph, or chart—should be labeled Figure usually abbreviated Fig. If the caption of a table or illustration provides complete information about the source and the source is not cited in the text, no entry for the source in the works-cited list is necessary. A figure in a research paper. Musical illustrations are labeled Example usually abbreviated Ex. Pyotr Ilich Tchaikovsky, Symphony no. 6. A musical example in a research paper. Use a high-quality printer. Corrections and Insertions on Printouts Proofread and correct your research paper carefully before submitting it. If you are checking a printout and find a mistake, reopen the document, make the appropriate revisions, and reprint the corrected page or pages. Be sure to save the changed file. Spelling checkers and usage checkers are helpful when used with caution. They do not find all errors and sometimes label correct material as erroneous. Do not use the margins or write a change below the line it affects. If corrections on any page are numerous or substantial, revise your document and reprint the page. Binding a Printed Paper Pages of a printed research paper may get misplaced or lost if they are left unattached or merely folded down at a corner. Many prefer that a paper be secured with a simple paper or binder clip, which can be easily removed and restored. Others prefer the use of staples. Electronic Submission There are at present no commonly accepted standards for the electronic submission of research papers. If you are asked to submit your paper electronically, obtain from your teacher guidelines for formatting, mode of submission e. Designed to be printed out and used in the classroom. You will have no problems with a reference page which is essential for getting an excellent MLA paper done. The Best Online Citation Generator A good paper should be based on reliable evidence and proper research. As a result, these students get accused of plagiarism which may lead to a less-than-satisfactory mark or even expulsion. The online generator we offer will not only help you format works appropriately cited but arrange in-text citation as well. Students often use books and academic articles in their research, as these are the most reliable sources. However, many topics require different resources, such as web pages and manuscripts. Unless you are an experienced researcher, you will hardly manage to provide proper citation of sources like this. So, our MLA citation generator is what you need! With our online MLA citation tool, you will format your paper like a professional writer. All you need is to provide the information about the source you are going to cite. But even in these types, you sometimes need to use quotations. Whatever idea you want to rely on, you have to say who the author is. This concerns fiction and scientific literature, academic articles and web pages. Otherwise, this is nothing but plagiarism and will lead to severe punishment at any educational level. Even if you use figures or statistics, you have to indicate where you have found this information to make your work credible. Approve Our Quality The point is that, even if you miss a single citation, you can get in trouble. Each piece of information has to be easily traced by anyone who needs it. That is why we have formats - to make all the information about the source and its author clear. And that is why our citation tool is necessary for anybody who wants to succeed in academic writing. Although it may seem unfair, students often get lower grades because of citation. This influences the quality of their writing significantly. After all, you deserve to avoid the additional stress of post-factum work when you have already finished writing. The format is quite clear and well-structured. MLA presupposes that a paper can have in-text citations. Another important aspect of the format is a reference list containing all the information about your sources appropriately formatted. There are tags used like links. They indicate where exactly one can find the original idea. As far as you indicate the page of the sources used, it may be necessary for the reader to find out about the book edition or the scientific journal name and issue. Your responsibility is to provide your reader with this information. So, this is how the format works, and one has to be very attentive not to make any mistake while citing. The problem is that citation incorporates so many details that it can get somewhat tiresome. Many students get frustrated about it and keep procrastinating for a long time. Fill in the fields with the information demanded. It gets processed immediately, and you get your citation in no time. It works for in-text citations, direct and indirect quotes, and references. Save your time wisely with this citation generator. Besides, you will have to indicate the page number in the source. To create an entry for a reference list, fill in the form with the following: Remember that you can use a wide range of sources and it is somewhat challenging to reference all of them. Today, we are happy to bring our ultimate citation generator to your attention. It is accurate and easy to use. There is no need to think over each comma, colon, or full stop in your reference list anymore.
