

1: Mr Brown Can Moo! Can You? by Seuss, Dr

A man named Mr. Brown can make a bunch of different noises of things, and the book asks the reader/listener whether they can mimic the noises as well. There's a lot of fun onomatopoeia. While "moo" and "buzz" are common words, it includes noises like a hippopotamus chewing gum ("grum grum grum grum") and other fanciful, playful sounds.

It is sickening and chock full of indoctrinating messages to the most susceptible of readers. Adults, please do not read my review to your children. Now, rather than review the book properly, I will suffer and read the book again and post my reactions to each page. By the end of this, you will understand. Oh god you will understand. Not just in a quirky, "makes noises" way, but on a subconscious level. His necktie has three ends This book leaves me cold and traumatized. His necktie has three ends. He has his eyes closed to the world around him, refusing it in its entirety. He moos as he walks in a twisted fashion. Is the moo musical? The cow, unlike Brown, is wide-eyed. Hipbones are wide and prominent. Brown hides behind a bush. Why are you in the bushes, Mr. What does this cow know that it should fear you, prepare to run, and put its tail in an unlikely direction? Please do not draw me into this thing, unknown narrator. There are glove-wearing bees. The picture implies one saying to the other, "Get a load of this clown. Eyes closed, he hides. He buzzes but does not see the bees. The bees know something about Mr. Brown talks to the inanimate. But who put the bottle into the air? His eyes are again closed. There is someone off screen. Is it the narrator? The tri-cornered necktie takes the shape of the angelic. Brown is forced to use his thumb to pop. So moments ago, there was a thumb in his mouth and Mr. Brown is opening a bottle. Are you trying to get me drunk, Mr. Now, close-eyed, he stands on a horse. He makes noises of horse feet. But this is like no horse I have ever seen, Mr. The horse is on yellow ground. The only yellow ground I know of is desert. There are no bushes. This is a desert of nothingness. This horse has no mane. He is going through the desert on a "horse" with no mane. It felt good to get out of the rain. The rain comes later, and it makes me worried. For now, Brown eek eeks like a squeaky shoe. Brown crows, his eyes still shut securely. He is not aware of his own actions. A summary of noises follows: Eek eek cock hoo. Those are the first words of each line. He means the animal cock. But then a question, offset on the page from the noises.
