Craig Brewster Sean Faris: The spoiled son of real estate mogul Russell Brewster and future politician. Samantha Carlton Alexa Davalos: Will Malloy Will Estes: In early episodes we learn that Will is a priest in the present time. Aaron Lewis Dave Annable: Slight geek who left MIT to sell technology and start an Internet company in its early days that blossoms to a multimillion-dollar company. His marriage to Pascal is compromised by his obvious lifelong affection for Carla. Carla Noll Chyler Leigh: Jenna Moretti Amanda Righetti: Patrick is investigating the brutal murder of one of the group during the night of their year class reunion, the identity of which was not revealed at the start of the season. Although his motives are initially secret, viewers quickly learn that Marjorino has harbored a year grudge against Will Malloy, Craig Brewster, and their friends for what he perceives to be unfulfilled justice for the death of his father in a car accident that also involved a car occupied by Will and Craig both of whom had been drinking that night. Although he maintains his composure, it becomes apparent that Marjorino is letting the case consume his life. Each episode viewers are introduced to additional minor characters who may or may not have significantly affected the past. The show was cancelled prior to the addition of another significant minor character: Originally vindictive towards Will, he soon turns his attention to Craig. In the fifth episode, "" first aired November 10, it was revealed that Samantha is the character that was killed. In "", it was revealed that the present day Craig Brewster, who relies on a wheelchair for movement, is actually not paralyzed and can walk. In "", it was revealed that a younger Marjorino in fact plotted to kill Will Malloy for the murder of his father, only to be talked out of it by his future wife. The final aired episode, "", features a cliffhanger where Marjorino is run down by a car in an alley and left bloodied and injured. A dark secret involving Craig and Will, in which Will took the heat for a drunk driving accident when Craig was actually driving the car, since his BAC was below the legal limit. The love triangle between Craig, Sam, and Will, complicated by the child that only Sam knows was fathered by Will. The obvious love of Carla and Aaron, who can never be on the same page at the same time. Will being forced by the FBI to help bring down Russell Brewster for illegal practices, the same man who gave him a job to help rebuild his life after prison. Jenna burning out in acting after ending her farce marriage to the gay producer who helped her build her career. The tension between Carla and her future husband Peter, and Aaron and his wife Pascal, over not only their devotion to their friends, but also their devotion to each other. The mutual attraction between Jenna and Craig. If it were true, this would render it impossible for her to be the speculated killer. Cancellation[ edit ] Originally, Reunion was intended to last for 22 episodes, with each episode chronicling one year in the life of the six main charactersâ€”from their graduation in to the murder of one of them the day of their high school reunion in Fox later gave away outlines the episodes "", "", "" and "" to websites. On June 7, , the episode "" was shown in many countries, but not the USA. The reason why the murder occurred still remains a mystery. The Brazilian channel SBT , at the end of episode 13, inserted a narrator telling an alternative end freely invented for the drama: She [Carla] tries to get them reconciled, but someone breaks into the apartment of Craig Brewster, while Sam was there with her daughter. In a struggle with this intruder, Amy accidentally shot Sam. A narrator explained that an adult Amy, angry over being abandoned as an infant and being abused by her adopted father, accidentally shoots and kills Samantha. Dave Annable verified the events of this ending in October

A young woman named Katie married her birth father, had a baby with him and, after she decided to leave him, lost her life to him, along with the lives of their child and her adoptive father. All three were laid to rest this weekend in upstate New York. She soon became pregnant and gave birth to a girl they named Denise. Alyssa Pladl told the Associated Press in an interview last week that they put the girl up for adoption when the child was 8 months old. They were young and poor, she said, but she also believed Steven Pladl physically abused the baby. In her interview, she did not elaborate. Tony Fusco and his wife, Kelly, adopted the girl, whom they renamed Katie, and raised her with their biological daughter in Dover, about 80 miles north of New York City. She was always eating. She was a vegetarian. She planned to attend college and pursue a career in digital advertising. The Pladls were happy to reunite with her. Tony and Kelly Fusco were apprehensive, Gould said, but they thought Katie was old enough to make her own decisions and supported her. All was not well in the Pladl home. Steven and Alyssa had already decided to separate and were sleeping in separate rooms. Alyssa Pladl said she had suffered emotional and verbal abuse by her husband for years. Alyssa Pladl told Katie privately that Steven Pladl had abused her as a baby and that a major reason for the adoption was her own safety. He began wearing skinny jeans and form-fitting shirts. He shaved his beard and let his hair grow long. About six weeks after Katie moved in, Steven Pladl one night slept on the floor in her room. It immediately concerned Alyssa. After he did it again the next night, she confronted him. He said it was none of her business and stormed out of the house with Katie. Alyssa Pladl finally moved out in November, and she shared custody of the two children with Steven Pladl. Her daughter wrote that she and her sister were told by Steven Pladl to refer to Katie as their stepmother. Incest charges On July 20, , two months after his divorce from Alyssa was finalized and amid the police investigation, Steven Pladl married Katie in Parkton, Maryland. They lied on their application, saying they were unrelated, according to records. Katie wore a short black dress. Tony and Kelly Fusco thought there was nothing they could do and had decided it was best to support Katie, Gould said. Katie gave birth to Bennett on Sept. She and Steven moved to a house on a cul-de-sac in Knightdale, North Carolina, just east of Raleigh, but wedded bliss did not last long. They were arrested on incest charges in January. He was head over heels in love with her, so much so that that outweighed the issue of them being biologically related. In a minivan nearby, Steven Pladl watched them leave, surveillance video shows. Minutes later in nearby New Milford, witnesses reported someone opening fire. Katie and Tony Fusco, 56, were fatally shot. Steven Pladl was later found dead of a self-inflicted gunshot back in Dover. Her son, she said, was upset because Katie, by then just 20, had broken up with him. Alyssa Pladl struggles to make sense of it all.

It's the James D. Murder High 30 Year Reunion! You've come a long way in the last thirty years and so have your classmates. It's time to reunite with your old friends (and enemies) to see what everyone's become.

Rigor mortis had started. The partially stiffened body was pushed out the door into the night rain. Daybreak and ultimate discovery were hours away. Cook County was located in the northwest corner of the state. This was the Midwest, the Corn Belt, noted for fields of corn with some dairy cows thrown in, not dead girls along the highway. It was supposed to be a quiet farming community. Rosie wondered when the last homicide might have been. After all, she came here to get away from big city crime, drugs, and gangs, and so far except for one thing, separate from police work, she was pleased. She really must have struggled because the rope or whatever held her really cut into her wrists. No identification on her, in fact, all her pockets were empty. And we had rain on and off all night. Pete hung up the phone and looked over at Joe. She was bound at the wrists and ankles and sexually molested a lot, looks like over a couple days and it was painful, almost like torture. Then she was suffocated. Guess we should call the Chief, huh? What are we dealing with? The occasional crackle of thunder and flash of lighting were the only interruptions to the rain on the rooftop and the rhythmic beat of the wipers. The visibility at times was less than one hundred feet. Who would be out on a night like this? The vehicle turned off the highway and onto a dirt road. The speedometer bounced around the ten MPH mark. After awhile the automatic shift was slipped from drive into neutral. The momentum of the vehicle carried it forward for a few seconds and then it came to a stop. As it stopped, simultaneously the headlights were turned off and the shift lever was put in the park position. Because of the cornfields on both sides of the road, no lights or houses could be seen. With the dashboard lights out there was total darkness. With that, the motorist reached over and opened the passenger door. The interior light bulb had been removed so the vehicle remained in total darkness. With one big push, the body in the passenger seat tumbled out onto the shoulder of the road and rolled six feet into the ditch. Sleep was restless, as it had been on many occasions. Dreams were not of the girl tonight; she had been quickly forgotten. This was of a time long ago. That same recurring nightmare I hate this place Why am I tied down Many miles away, a girl lay helpless. With a gag in her mouth and her feet and arms tied it was the best she could do. She had just woken up and was trying to figure out how she ended up like this.
